THE GUESTS NOSE

A man was speaking of predicaments in which elders are sometimes placed by the utterances of their children the other day when he related the following of himself: A friend of his who had a pronounced Roman nose of rather unusual proportions was a guest at his house for dinner. "I noticed my seven-year-old boy scrutinizing his face and had a presentiment that something was going to happen. I tried to get his mind on something else, but to no effect. Presently it came out. Breaking into a lull in the conversation with that little piping voice of his, he said: "His nose is bent, ain't it?" "My friend had the good sense to see the humor of the thing and started the laugh at his own expense, enjoying it all so thoroughly that we were able to join with him, and an embarrassment was thus turned into a good joke."—Columbus Dispatch.

Bank of England Secrets.
Many secrets are hidden away in the vaults of the Bank of England. In the annual account of the receipts and expenditures of the paymaster general on behalf of the supreme court of judicature, which deals with securities worth millions, is a curious list of remnants of bygone legal contests. In all the list comprises 136 items, boxes, bags, sealed packets, etc., which are still in safe keeping at the bank. There are heirlooms, articles of jewelry, some presentation plate and "a bag of clipped money," the sealed parcels having various indentments. The chancery division is well represented here, but although a search has not revealed any remains of the famous cause Jarndyce versus Jarndyce at least two of the relics date back to the eighteenth century.

MISS UNA EISELE. In honor of her high average at the recent High School examinations at Bridgetown, Miss Eisele was tendered a dance by her parents and the members of the graduating class attended.

GENERAL DAUMESNIL'S LEG

General Daumesnil's wooden and iron leg is in the Paris Military museum. The warrior in question lost one of his legs at the battle of Wagram, and when he returned to Paris it was replaced by a mechanical contrivance of timber with iron springs. Although crippled, the old soldier remained in active service and was in command of the Vincennes fort in 1814 when the allies were in Paris. It was to the troops of the anti-Napoleon coalition that General Daumesnil said when called upon to give up his fort, "Let me have my leg, and then you can take Vincennes." The old general died in 1832, deprived of his mechanical limb. It had been taken off while he was ill in order to be repaired by a smith named Brou, living at Vincennes. Brou kept the article and handed it down to his family, from whom it subsequently passed into the ownership of the municipality of Vincennes. The councilors of the artillery borough handed it over to the war department, and it is among the most honored relics of French arms of the past.

The Hat and Cap Man

See the second line of new American Hats that came in last week.

I thought I had enough in the first shipment to finish out the season, but before I had time to whistle the sizes were broken, and I had to wire repeat orders.

Everywhere the "FRANKLIN HAT" is sold retailers are continually having the same complaint. No wonder that competitors are dared to a standstill.

HIS FUTURE ASSURED

The telephone rang in a certain broker's office one morning this week, and the broker himself answered.

"Yes," said he, "this is it. I'm Mr. B. What can I do for you? Whom do you want, then? Oh, all right; hold the wire. Here, Jimmy, some one to talk to you."

Jimmy, a diminutive, towheaded office boy, approached and seized the receiver.

"Yes, this is Jim. Oh, yes; hello-yerself. Sure, dat was him talkin'. Wat? Hully feel? Dat so? A'right-yep—goodby yerself."

"Say, Mr. B.," the diminutive one remarked to the broker, "dat was Eddy, de head office boy, an' he says ter me ter tell yer he resigns his job right now by de phone 'cause he don't like de way yer talked t' him yesterday. He says he kin live anyhow, an'—"

"All right," the broker interrupted. "The mistake he made was in not demanding my resignation. However, he'll own an office some day. We will now proceed with the day's business, James."—New York Globe.

INDICATIONS POINT

GOOD and Indifferent

We Draw A Decisive Line Between

The indifferent kind is sold because the price is low and catches the bargain hunter. We consider it a part of our contract with our customers to furnish GOOD QUALITY with every article of CUTLERY we sell. This will especially apply to our line of POCKET KNIVES. The name Rogers or Bokers stamped upon each blade is a guarantee of good quality, and we hereby agree to replace free of cost any knife found defective in quality of steel.
