have reason to do so today. We may ask ourselves why it is that an event which causes rejoicing is usually accompanied by an event which causes sadness.

Today marks the closing of another school year. We rejoice firstly, because it has been a very successful year; secondly, because today begins our vacation—a time that gladdens the heart of every school child.

But our rejoicing is overshadowed with sorrow, dear teacher, because we have learned that you are leaving us. Oh, the inability of words to express our regret at your departure and our appreciation of your efforts! You have been to us, and we shall always remember you as a dear, kind friend and an earnest untiring teacher. The first day you came amongst us you, by your modest, gentle manner and tactful, earnest efforts, won us to your heart, and you have since worked with us in perfect harmony—that harmony which is necessary between a teacher and pupils if the best of results are to be accomplished. There are times when pupils are disposed to regard school as a cheerless place of labor, but you have at all times by your warm and cheerful spirits, dispelled all possibilities of such an occurrence, so that the result is that school with all its labors has been for us under your guidance a happy interlude.

Now the time has come for us to say farewell to you, dear teacher. All farewells are sad, but saddest is the farewell between children and one of the earthy guiding principals of their little minds—their teacher.

In our own way, we have prepared for you a farewell gift which we now ask you to accept with the promise that we shall always remember you as a loving teacher and a kind, kind friend. Farewell, dear teacher, and God bless you.

Signed on behalf of the pupils of Stanhope School.

WISDOM BLOOMS LATE

PORTLAND, Me., July 12—True intelligence comes after one has passed the century mark, Dr. Marie De Gollere Davenport, 109-year-old world traveller and linguist, said today. At the piano in a Portland Hotel, Dr. Davenport, who said her father was Count Paszkoff, a lineal descendant of tartar chieftains, delighted a group of Portland music lovers with her rendition of Tschalkowsky's Reville and other favorites.

Discussing human intelligence but that today she was free of fear for, as she explained, "I am the captain of my soul." The centenarian weighs 89 pounds and claims never to have been sick.

POTATO BREEDERS SEEKING VARIETY IMMUNE TO PESTS

(By The Canadian Press)

FREDERICTON, N. B., July 12—Attempting to develop a variety of potato immune to the common tuber diseases, officials at the Fredericton experimental station have grown 25,000 seedlings under glass and are transplanting them into an open field. The experiment is believed to be a Canadian record in scope.

According to agriculturists, a new variety possessing resistance to disease together with necessary horticultural characteristics would save New Brunswick farmers approximately $400,000 a year in spraying costs for late blight. The toll exacted by disease is inestimable. Each year about ten percent of seed potatoes fail to pass inspection owing to scab alone.

Potato-breeding here began on a small scale in 1932 with a few artificial crosses between Green Mountain and Katahdin; the latter variety recently introduced by the United States department of agriculture and reputedly resistant to mild mosaic.

Last summer this work was greatly extended and a large number of crosses made from common commercial varieties and others supposedly resistant. The 25,000 seedlings were developed from potato balls, common in former years but rare at the present time. After a process of pollination the seed was sown in hot-beds during April.

Co-operation in the work between the horticultural division of the experimental station and the laboratory of plant pathology has been approved at Ottawa. A committee in charge of the breeding project comprises C. F. Batley, chairman; D. J. MacLeod, vice-chairman; L. C.

Young, Secretary; L. Howatt and C. H. Godwin, Others co-operating are M. B. Davis, Dominion horticulturist, Dr. H. T. Gussow, Dominion botanist, and Dr. E. S. Archibald, director of the experimental farm system.

Members of the committee will visit various potato-breeding centres in the United States this summer. Dr. Gussow may supplement these investigations by a visit to important European stations.

APPLE TREE, 170 YEARS OLD STILL PRODUCING FRUIT

(By The Canadian Press)

LAWRENCEVILLE, N. S., July 12—George R. Whitman believes he has on his farm the oldest apple-bearing tree in the Annapolis Valley. It is 70 years old and in its life time has produced 600 barrels of excellent fruit.

The veteran leafy giant has been continually in possession of the Whitman family since the older member came from New England in 1762. It came up from seed planted by Mr. Whitman's great-grandmother. Long years ago the seedling tree was grafted with the Nonpareil variety.

Some seasons it produced 12 barrels of marketable apples and while orchardists of Canada's greatest orchard country were bemoaning the fact that the last severe winter affected many of their trees, Mr. Whitman's "old faithful" blossomed forth jovialer than ever. He anticipates that his 1934 crop from the 170 year old will be a big one.

ARTIST SETS OUT FOR NORTH AGAIN

(By The Canadian Press)

NEW YORK, July 12—Rockwell Kent, adventurer and brush-and-pen artist, has just left on another voyage to his beloved Greenland, accompanied by his 13 year old son Gordon. He left the North in 1932 and he says he has had just enough contact with Western civilization now to want to go away.

The Greenlanders, he thinks, are a very fine people, healthy and carefree. This is Gordon's first trip to Greenland and his father plans to initiate him in Northern lore, especially how to handle the kayak, the native canoe. The kayak is different from the Indian canoe, where the man and vessel are distinct, separate entities. It is carefully and beautifully made, with thin, strong wood for the frame, heavy seal hide and waterproofed things for its covering. I hope Gordon will learn to twist through the water sideways, just like the natives, completely capsize the boat.

Mr. Kent's housekeeper, Selamina a native woman with three children has been advised to get in readiness for house on the little island in northern Greenland. While there he is going to finish a book he is writing concerning the life of Selamina and "paint quite a bit."

USES PIPE STEM IN OPERATION ON CHILD'S THROAT

(By The Canadian Press)

HALIFAX, July 12—That story from Chicago the other day—the one about the doctor who saved a child from strangulation with a kitchen knife and a piece of rubber hose—didn't stir up much excitement among Halifax medical men.

They recalled that one of their number had saved a life a few years ago in just a slightly different way. Without time to get his instruments, he had reached a home where a child lay near death through strangulation.

In the house he found an ordinary jack-knife. While this was being sterilized by boiling, he took the father's clay pipe and snapped off the stem close to the bowl. Then he made an incision with the jack-knife and inserted the pipe-stem into the lad's windpipe. Life-giving air flowed into his lungs instantly, and subsequently he made a full recovery.

Just as resourceful was another Halifax doctor who arrived at the bedside of a choking woman with only a scalpel. Coolly, he picked a hairpin from her head, then he cut a slit in her throat and inserted the pin.

So that the pin would keep a breathing space open, the doctor tied a length of string to each prong, then brought the strings around her neck and knotted them firmly at the rear. The makeshift enabled the stricken woman to breathe comfortably until she could be taken to hospital for an operation. She too recovered, and today she is alive and well.
