necessary investment of capital and expenditure of labor. In other words, they do not consider it possible to make farming pay under present conditions, even when scientific methods are adopted. The remainder frankly stated that they want better living conditions than they can secure by returning to the farm. Objection was made to long hours, monotony, lack of intellectual and social intercourse and excessively hard labor. One wonders how the graduates who hold these views as to what farm life involves can hope to become successful teachers of agriculture and instill in others the desire to follow an occupation from which they themselves turn away. The inquiry indicates that in an even greater measure than at present the 'short courses' at Guelph should be encouraged rather than the graduate course. A medical college that devoted the time of its staff to training men two-thirds of whom had no intention of becoming doctors would not be regarded as a very good investment for a community needing doctors, no matter how satisfactory it might be to the individual student. Ontario needs farmers with scientific training and would rather have two or three hundred short-course men yearly coming from and going back to the farm than seventy Bachelors of Science most of whom will never take part in the workaday life of the farms of the Province.

Dr. Dewar would ask the Commissioner of Agriculture to digest this clipping. He had been in sympathy with the Technical School last year but his faith had been shaken to a great extent during the past twelve months. A prominent farmer of the province last year told him he would not allow his three boys to attend the school because he was afraid they would never come back. This man was not necessarily unprogressive; he had won many medals and prizes for his products. Another prominent farmer, who had a boy attending school, said his son did not know of one single boy in last year's class that was going back to the farm. If this is true it is a sad state of affairs.

Hon. Mr. Lea said this was not correct. Mr. Dewar replied that he was glad to hear it; but this was the statement of an intelligent farmer who had sent one of his boys there. The school might be a good thing for mechanics living in Charlottetown, but if it weans the boys away from the farm through their contact with city life it is deplorable. We spend money as an agricultural province to keep our boys here, and this is what happens. He did not wish to disparage the Commissioner of Agriculture, but he could not approve of this system. The government, he thought, deserved credit for importing feeds when they were scarce. The school fairs were good, if there was any good in fairs, the small fair was the best. The government should do everything possible in getting after the money due us in land claims at Ottawa. The time for this had not been favorable recently. He was in sympathy with the temperance movement, though it was a very muddled question here at present.

Lost Hope, States Mrs. C. Waterman, In Discussing Case

Declares Tanlac Restored Her Fully When Almost a Nervous Wreck—Gains 14 Pounds

"Tanlac restored my health so completely three years ago that I haven't had to take a single dose of medicine since," says Mrs. Cora Waterman, 145 Monroe St., Toronto, Ont.

"I don't believe there was a worse case than mine in Ontario. I had been suffering for about three years and was practically a nervous and physical wreck. I could eat scarcely a thing, sleep was almost impossible, and rheumatism in my hands, wrists, and arms almost drove me distracted. I spent every cent I could lay my hands on for medicine, and had about lost hope of ever being well again.

"But Tanlac ended my suffering and saved me a great many dollars. I regained fourteen pounds, too, which I still retain, and I feel as strong and healthy now as when a school girl. I have been praising the Tanlac treatment three years now, and want to send out this message to help others."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.

Our prohibition laws are not in a very healthy condition. There is always, however, a personal prohibition which any man can put in force independent of the action of the Courts or any difficulties of legislation. He commended the workmen's suffrage, which he had previously advocated and had introduced a resolution to this effect in 1918.

It was useless for the Government to boast of a surplus. The expenditure had not been kept within revenue last year, nor would it be this year. There was a deficit of $150,000 last year, and probably of the same amount again. The government might mince matters as it liked, but these were the cold facts. The Commissioner of Agriculture declares we must spend in order to progress. He might have used the word "squander" instead. How would this principle apply to the farmer? We are all agriculturists, so that the same policy should make for progress on the farm as well. But if the farmer did this he would "progress" in the direction of the infirmary, because in order to live at present he has to save, and not spend. Here again the Commissioner is in conflict with Sir Frederick Taylor, who declares that Canada cannot go ahead as she should while taxation and the cost of living are higher in this country than in the States.

The Premier optimistically suggests that in a short time motor cars will be within the reach of every farmer, if borrowing for the highways does not now cost the farmer a cent, how would they escape paying if they all bought automobiles? The Bell government said they had to place more taxes on the country on account of the deficit of $253,000 left by their predecessors. True, they needed money to pay increased teachers' salaries, but this was the only necessity. The Premier said the people turned down the Conservatives' proposition because of the terms of it. In Mr. Dewar's district at every meeting he had supported the Conservative tax measure. The terms were not "monstrous" at all, they were reasonable. The tax was three mills on the dollar and the poll tax was not on the young men, but on the ratepayers. It was no higher than $1 and not less than $2. The Premier, in saying the tax was $4, was not quite correct. Mr. Dewar's district had approved of this tax. Naturally, when the government came into power, they were confronted with the demand of the teachers. They had to levy a tax and not, as the Premier says, because of the deficit left by the other party.

PREMIER BELL: Not that alone. MR. DEWAR: I thought you said that was the primary reason. PREMIER BELL: That does not mean "alone."

Mr. Dewar asked the Premier if, to be honest about it, that deficit really existed at all? Premier Bell did not reply.

Mr. Dewar, continuing, said he had looked carefully into the Public Accounts and found, according to the External Auditor in 1918, the debt given as $1,006,991.71, and the so-called deficit of $253,000 of 1919 or that makes $1,259,999.71. On Dec. 31, 1920, according to the External Auditor, the debt was set down as $1,100,050.04, a reduction of $159,911.67. According to the External Auditor the debt was $93,087.33 more in 1920 than in 1918. In 1920 there was $3,253.22 of a surplus, and sinking funds amounting to $19,359.12—making in all a reduction of debt to the extent of $22,612.34. Add this to the $93,087.33 and it gives $115,701.67, which would indicate the real deficit of 1919. The government says they did not pay it off; the Premier claims it will take ten years to pay it. What, then, became of the debt?

Premier Bell did not reply. Mr. Dewar continued to demand where the difference came in between the $115,000 and the $253,000. This debt could not vanish into thin air. As a matter of fact it did not exist at all. It is therefore useless for the Government to say that taxes had to be put on on this account.

Mr. Dewar concluded with an appeal for retrenchment in expenditures. "Remember, we increased our salaries at a time when we considered that we needed to be paid more on account of the high cost of living. That condition is to some extent passing away, and it is our duty to economize, as the farmers have to do. I am sorry that in the address from the Throne there is not more stress laid upon economy and retrenchment. I maintain what I said last year, that it would be in the interest of the country if the indemnities were lowered and some of the high salaries of officials lowered too."

The debate was next taken up by Mr. Thos. McNutt, who, after speaking a few minutes (it being near 6 p.m.) moved the adjournment. The House adjourned until 3 p.m. Wednesday.

Sage Tea Beautifies And Darkens Hair

DON'T SAY GRAY! IT DARKENS SO NATURALLY THAT NOBODY CAN TELL.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

STEALING A COFFIN LATEST IN CROOKDOM

CHICAGO, March 27.—Stealing a coffin from a dead man is the latest exploit in crookdom. Mrs. Florence Banks, a widow, made the complaint to the state's attorney. Her husband died in Muskogee, Okla., and when the body arrived she had it placed in a $500 casket. The body was placed in a vault at the Mount Glenwood Cemetery. She next learned the body had been buried without her authority. She ordered it exhumed. When it came to the surface, it was encased in a pine box worth about $10.
