By Annabelle Worthington

2665

A patterned wool and silk crepe mixture that is decidedly up-to-the-minute with its scarf neckline and sleeves that suggest leg-o'-mutton shaping.

It's slender too with the wrapped bodice at the front softened by a swathed movement at the waistline.
At the left side-front a plained inset provides interesting swing to the hem. The back of the skirt is circular.
Style No. 2665 may be had in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust.
It's conservatively smart in black canton crepe with white crepe shawl collar and sleeve puffs.
Size 36 requires 3 1/4 yards of 39-inch material with 1 yard of 39-inch contrasting.
Pattern price 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred). Be sure to fill in size of pattern. Address Pattern Department. Spend 10c to save $10.
How? By ordering a copy of our new Fall and Winter Fashions. It gives the answer to the often asked question, "How does she do it?," For it shows how to dress up to the minute at little expense. You can save on every dress and save on the children's clothes too. That means more and better frocks for you and yours. Order your copy now. Just enclose 10 cents in stamps or coin and mail with your name and address to Fashion Department.

Q. Is it obligatory for a girl to give the man she is engaged to an engagement present?
A. No, nor is it customary, though there is no impropriety in her doing so if she desires.
Q. Should a woman rise when a clergyman enters the room?
A. It is not necessary, but is a nice way to show special deference.
Q. Should one ever sound a bell, when dinner is ready?
A. No, it is announced by a servant.

Is a Man Worse Off When He Marries?—Why The Bachelor Woman Who Wants a Child Should Adopt One—Unsympathetic Husband

Dear Miss Dix—I am a man of 30, very lonely, very much in love with a nice girl, but when I talk about marrying her all of my married men friends advise me against it. They say if they were single once more nothing would induce them to marry, as they could have much better times and wouldn't have to work so hard. What is your advice? A BACHELOR.

Answer:
If you are in love with a nice girl and she loves you, I say on with the marriage. Let the wedding bells ring out and don't listen to the croakers who tell you that you will be happier single.

It isn't true. Man was not made to live alone and he is better off even if he is married to a woman who doesn't come up to all the specifications of a perfect wife than he is as a bachelor. Why, it is better even to have somebody to fight with than it is to be by yourself! That at least keeps you from being lonely.

Of course, there are a lot of pessimistic husbands, just as there are a lot of pessimistic bankers and grocers and doctors and lawyers. Nearly every man you meet makes of himself a sort of a human red light danger signal and warns you not to do as he has done.

Talk to a grocer and he will tell you, for heaven's sake, not to be foolish enough to go into the grocery business. The banker will tell you that there is nothing in banking except work and anxiety. The doctor will tell you that the life of a doctor is a dog's life, and so on.

You see, we all know the difficulties, the trials and tribulations of your own lot, and we don't know those of the other fellow, and that always makes us think that his is better.

Your married friends think of how much it costs to support a family and that they can't buy new golf clubs or take a vacation because little Johnny's teeth have to be straightened and little Mary's adenoids taken out. They think how nice it would be to be free to come and go as they please without having to furnish an alibi to anybody. They think how peaceful it would be not to have a woman nagging them about smoking too much and drinking two cups of coffee and needing a haircut and a new suit of clothes.

And they forget how pleasant it is to go home of an evening to a comfortable home and a good dinner, what a thrill there is in having little faces watching for them at the window-pane and little feet rushing to welcome them at the door. They forget how lonely it is to go home to a dark room and how desolate it is to feel that no one cares whether you come or go or are sick or well.

Your friends tell you that you will have to work harder after you are married than before. Doubtless that is true, but suppose you do? What of it? That is no fatal objection to a man who is a go-getter and filled with energy and ambition.

Moreover, a wife is a first-aid to success, as has been proved a million times. Very few men get anywhere until after they are married. When they are single they are sort of dilettante. They move about from place to place and job to job and do not settle to anything. But when they marry and have the responsibilities of a family on their shoulders, they dig in and put their hearts and their backs in their jobs and begin to climb. That is why employers prefer married men to single men.

And don't believe you will have your money for yourself if you stay single. You won't. As long as you have no wife and children of your own to support, every borrower you know and all of your relatives will have their fingers in your pockets.

And as for having to spend your money in supporting your wife and children, what else is money for? It takes mighty little to supply a man's needs and the most fun he gets is out of buying pretties for some woman he loves or giving advantages to his children. Believe me, you will get more kick out of paying for the baby's milk than you will out of buying bootleg liquor for the boys.

And as a final proof that your friends don't mean what they say about their aversion to matrimony, and that they would never, never marry again if they were single, look at what happens to practically every widower. Does he cherish his freedom and cling to it with both hands? Is he a burned child who dreads the fire on the hearthstone? Not much. As a general thing, before his wife has been dead six months he is beginning to take notice, and by the time a fairly decent period of mourning is over he is sticking his head in the matrimonial noose again. The country is full of widows, but widowers are few and far between.

So there you are. The marriage estate isn't perfect any more than anything else on earth, but is worth trying once, anyhow. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am unmarried and I do not wish to marry. My childhood was made miserable by the heartless treatment that my father gave to my mother and for that reason I have no desire to tie myself to any man. But above all things I want a child of my very own, not an adopted one. I am amply able to provide for it. Do you think it would be unfair to the child to deprive it of a legitimate father? I do not think so, for so many fathers are greater hindrances than helps to their children. SARAH.

The canons of civilized society being what they are, Sarah, and its rules being as inflexible as the laws of the Medes and the Persians, you could not commit a greater crime than to deliberately bring a fatherless child into the world just for the sake of your own pleasure in having a child of your own.

It would be a piece of incomparable selfishness because, unfair and unjust as it is, the illegitimate child has to pay the price of its mother's wrongdoing as long as it lives. And the child has no sophistries with which to console itself. It has no philosophies about a woman's right to maternity, about her glorious privileges of independence and freedom to live her own life and decide her own conduct. It can only write and cringe under the contempt put upon it by other children. It can only grow up shadowed by that bar sinister across its escutcheon.

Not long ago an English writer, who thought as you do and who had the courage of her convictions, told the story of her experiment along these lines and frankly confessed that she realized that she had done her child a terrible wrong. She said that as long as her child was a baby and very small it was a glorious adventure in motherhood, but in a little while the child began asking why it had no father to play with him and be a companion to him, and then in a little while other children began taunting him about his birth.

Good schools refused to receive him as a pupil, and, although the break has not yet come between the woman and her son, his premonition is upon her, and she felt that when the day came when she had to tell the whole story the boy would turn upon her with hatred.

So don't do this harm to any poor, defenseless child. Satisfy your maternal craving by adopting a baby. It will teach you to love it. Perhaps

Tea Biscuits unusually good when made with Magic Baking Powder

If you bake at home send for the New Magic Cook Book. It will suggest many attractive dishes and save time for you.
Look for this mark on every tin. It is a guarantee that Magic Baking Powder does not contain alum or any harmful ingredients.

3 out of every 4 Canadian housewives* who bake at home, use Magic Baking Powder because they find that Magic gives consistently better baking results.
Next time you bake biscuits, try Magic and see for yourself how it will help you with your baking.

Try this Recipe for Biscuits
2 cups flour
4 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
1 teaspoon salt
Method—Sift together flour, magic baking powder and salt, then cut in shortening. Gradually add cold milk sufficient to make as soft a dough as can be handled, using a knife to mix.
Roll on a board generously, drop dough on it, pat or roll out very lightly to 1/4" thickness. Cut out, bake 15 to 20 minutes in a hot oven.
All ingredients should be cold. Handle as little and as lightly as possible and avoid working in more flour after milk has been added.
*This fact was revealed in a recent Dominion-wide investigation.

A Morning Smile

A lady parishioner was chatting with her minister at the tea table. "Do you think," she asked, "that a man who plays the saxophone on Sunday could expect to go to heaven?"

"Well," replied the minister, "I don't see why he shouldn't, but I'm a bit doubtful about his next door neighbor."

For The Cook

BEET WINE
Wash your beets well, but do not peel them, then cut them into small pieces, cover with water and boil for three hours. When they are done and are soft, strain through a collander and add three pounds of sugar to every gallon of the juice. Now add six oranges and six lemons to every four gallons of liquid, boil again for half an hour and let it cool. Before it is cold—nicely lukewarm—add a cake of yeast and let it all work for a fortnight, then strain through a cloth and bottle.

Dear Miss Dix—My husband is very good to me, but there is one thing about him that I cannot understand. When I am happy he makes a big fuss over me and is just crazy about me, but when I am blue he never sympathizes with me or tries to cheer me up. Do you think he really loves me? E. G.

It is no sign a man doesn't love you because he doesn't want to listen to your hard-luck stories. No man ever does. He gets enough of them all day long in his business and when he comes home he wants to be cheered up.
Men just naturally hate gloom, anyway. Women get a sort of morbid pleasure in going to funerals and seeing people in trouble, but a man just has to be dragged by the hair of his head to a funeral or to see anybody in trouble. He will send flowers or checks or anything to the afflicted, or do anything for them except let them weep on his shoulder.
So my advice to you, Mrs. E. G., is to can your blues and turn off your tears and keep your troubles to yourself and be jolly and lively when your husband is around home. He has given you a tip as to what he likes in a wife. Bet heavily on the red and be cheerful. DOROTHY DIX.

ITS COMFORT WILL BE A REVELATION

MODERN WOMEN are grateful for the new qualities of Modess. So many of them have praised it as being better—so many have recommended it to their friends—that to-day it is preferred everywhere.
The disposable centre of Modess is made of an entirely new substance, that is soft and fluffy as down. It does away with the irksomeness and discomfort of old style methods. Because of its substance and composition, its fine tapering edges, Modess is really more pliable and snug fitting, more comfortable and absorbent, than any other hygienic napkin on the market.
With Modess the old fear of a penetrative absorbency is banished, because Modess has a moisture-proof back, which protects the most delicate dress. With Modess you purchase confidence and convenience, at a cost ridiculously low in proportion to the value you get. Just try a box to-day.

Presentation To Dr. Keeping

The quarterly meeting of the P. E. I. Baptist Association convened with the Dundas Baptist Church on Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 6 and 7. The first meeting was of an outstanding character, that of setting apart to the work of the Christian ministry. L. H. C. Morgan, B.A. The meeting was presided over by the Moderator, Rev. A. C. Vincent, of Charlottetown. Prayer and Scripture reading were given by Rev. E. J. Chisholm, of Hazelbrook. Rev. A. C. Vincent preached the ordination sermon, basing his powerful message on the text "Preach the Word" 2 Timothy, 4:2. Rev. W. R. MacWalker, of North River, offered the ordaining prayer. While the candidate was still kneeling, a solo was very beautifully rendered by Mrs. H. C. Morgan. The charge to the candidate was presented by Rev. M. O. Brinton, of Tryon. Rev. A. G. Crowe, of Bedouca, gave the charge to the church. Rev. W. R. MacWalker then welcomed Rev. H. C. Morgan into the Christ an Ministry with the hand of fellowship. The newly ordained minister closed the service with prayer.
On Tuesday morning a devotional service was conducted by Rev. A. G. Crowe, who spoke very forcibly from Cor. I. Mr. Crowe is the fourth young man to take up the work of

Two Deaths Are Still Unsolved

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—New England has had more than the usual share of bizarre murder mysteries this summer but those who follow such affairs maintain that no slaying in recent years remain more puzzling, as time rolls on, than those involving two natives of Nova Scotia in the years 1925 and 1927.
In Chester, Vt., a potter's field holds the body of a woman whose identity and means of death may never be known. The discovery this summer that she had been wrongly identified as Mrs. George Packard and a reopening of the entire investigation, supplied a daily newspaper mystery story that gripped all New England. The case has closed again as clues have vanished into thin air. The entire matter was strangely reminiscent, in its lack of worthwhile clues of the slaying of Maybel Matheson in 1927.
Maybel Matheson, 18-year old Nova Scotia girl, came to seek the broader opportunities that life in Boston, New England's metropolis, might offer. She lived with relatives, worked in a factory each day, and apparently enjoyed only such innocent amusements as dancing and motion pictures in the evenings. It was learned later that she apparently had enjoyed the acquaintance of an unusually large number of young men but even after her death no breath of suspicion was raised against her good character.
Miss Matheson was killed on the

How To Get Relief From Catarrh

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness, or head noises, go to your drugist and get 1 oz. of Barmin (Double Strength), take this home, add to it 1 pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring relief from the distressing head noises. Closed nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to make tastes pleasant and costs little. Every one who has catarrh should give this treatment a trial. You will probably find it is just what you need.

YOUNG WIFE STRENGTHENED

After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Bancroft, Ontario.—"When I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I had been married about a year and my strength was leaving me on account of my condition. I was only 19 and it was my first child. My mother told me I needed something to steady my nerves and a girl chum told me to take the Vegetable Compound. I was so thankful I did because it strengthened my whole system and now I feel perfectly well and have a sweet little baby boy."—Mrs. J. B. STALKER, Bancroft, Ontario.

HOW ONE WOMAN LOST 47 POUNDS OF FAT

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.
" Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better but I look better, so all my friends say.
" I shall never be without Kruschen Salts, will never cease taking my daily dose and more than glad to highly recommend it for the great good that is in it."—Mrs. S. A. Solomon.
"P.S.—You may think I am exaggerating by writing such a long letter but truly I feel so indebted to you for putting out such wonderful salts that I cannot say enough."
