In Memoriam

MRS. JOHN T. ROBERTSON

At her home in Lower Montague, on Thursday morning, Sept. 12th., Mrs. John T. Robertson, passed peacefully and unexpectedly to her eternal reward. Her many friends in Lower Montague, as well as in other parts of the province felt her passing keenly.

Mrs. Robertson, who was in her seventy-sixth year was a daughter of the late Roderick Fraser and his wife Catherine Shaw, of Whim Road. Although a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Montague, she was a faithful adherent of the United Church, Lower Montague. Always ready and willing to help in all the activities of the church; anything for the benefit of the community found in her a ready response. Her bright and cheerful personality will be sadly missed by her Lower Montague friends. In the home where she cared for so tenderly and uncomplainingly her husband who passed away after a long illness a year ago — a vacancy which cannot be filled. The sympathy of all goes out to her only son Lemuel, now bereft of a most devoted mother and loving companion. Other relatives left to mourn are: one brother Roderick Fraser, of Vernon; also one sister, Mrs. MacRae, of Boston.

The following Sunday, Sept. 14th after a short service at the home the remains were taken to the United Church, Lower Montague, where an impressive service was held. The pastor, Rev. S. E. Hayward spoke words of comfort and sympathy. Favourite hymns of the deceased were sung including a solo "The Old Rugged Cross," by Mrs. Laura Hubley.

The casket covered with beautiful fragrant flowers, silent emblems of love and sympathy, and of which the deceased was an ardent admirer was tenderly carried by her friends to the beautiful cemetery adjoining the church and laid beside her beloved husband gone on before.

Plane Jane

By ROBERTA COURTLAND

CHAPTER XV

It was night by the time Aleck and his two passengers landed at the New York airport. There were no crowds to meet them, only the usual activities of a large airport where hundreds of planes go in and out daily.

To Jane, it was a thrilling sight—the vast hangars, the many planes, the people hurrying to and fro.

Then, Aleck's voice jerked Jane out of her wide-eyed, fascinated study of the scene about her. He was introducing two middle-aged, important-looking men.

"Jane, this is Mr. Hobarts, our general manager, and Mr. Parsons, our advertising manager."

When Jane had shaken hands, they were presented to Aunt Emily, who eyed them shrewdly.

As the group moved toward a waiting car, Aunt Emily heard Hobarts mutter, "Good lord, Aleck — is this the girl?" And she heard Aleck answer, "I wouldn't fool you, Boss. Remember, I tried to tell you on the phone that she was a homely little thing——"

Aunt Emily shot an indignant glance toward them. Aleck reddened, and Hobarts quickly changed the subject.

"Well, well, Miss Andrews," he said briskly, stepping to her side, "what do you think of New York?"

"I haven't seen it yet," Aunt Emily replied tartly, "but I don't expect to think much of it. An awful lot of people rushing around trying to put over crooked deals on a lot of other people!"

Hobarts laughed. "Oh, come now, you mustn't judge us by the movies you've seen."

Later, when the five of them had dined in the suite reserved for Jane and her aunt at a modest hotel, Aunt Emily became even more disconcerting.

"There's one thing that's been puzzling me ever since Mr. Randall came to Oakton to see Jane," she told Hobarts. "I can see what he gets out of this business — a good salary and plenty of publicity, which seems pretty important to him."

Aleck made a choking sound, but Aunt Emily went serenely on.

"What I don't understand, Mr. Hobarts, is what you and your company get out of it. You're paying Jane a hundred dollars a week and her expenses, and you're providing Mr. Randall and a fine plane to fly her about the country. Now it's no use trying to tell me that you're doing all this just for patriotic reasons. Business firms don't do things like that!"

Hobarts smiled and spread his hands. "I can see, Miss Andrews, that you are an astute woman. I might as well lay my cards on the table. What my company hopes to gain is a great deal of valuable advertising, is there anything wrong in that?"

Jane spoke up, in dismay. 'Advertising? Mr. Randall didn't say anything about that! He did say that you hoped to get orders for planes if this plan of mine should be a success, but he said that you were backing me chiefly for patriotic reasons."

"My dear child," said Hobarts, in a fatherly tone, "of course we are interested in the patriotic angle. We think that such an organization would be a very fine and laudable thing. However, no plan, however patriotic, can be successful unless it can pay its way. Hence, we must consider the business end of this thing—we must consider whether the advertising we get out of it will be worth the money we put into it. And after all, are you yourself motivated purely by patriotism? Think what you will get out of it. It will make you famous. It will——"

"Do you think I care anything about that?" Jane cut in hotly. "I don't want fame! If you think I'm doing this to get my name and picture in the papers, you're very much mistaken. I don't want to have anything to do with it unless I can feel sure that I'm accomplishing something really worth while."

"Oh, but you will be accomplishing just that," Hobarts assured her. "The government would welcome an organization such as you propose. When it's established, we'll send representatives to Washington, with you as the leader, and the services of the outfit can be formally offered to the government. I feel sure the offer would be gratefully accepted."

Hobarts sounded so convincing that Jane's doubts melted away.

"I do hope you're right," she said fervently.

Hobarts rose. "And now, I think Aleck and Parsons and I had better be on our way. If you're to do a round of the shops tomorrow, you will need a good night's rest."

"Why is she to do a round of the shops?" Aunt Emily asked.

"My dear Miss Andrews, your niece must look her very best on this tour. Naturally, she will be photographed a great deal. Smart clothes and a good appearance will be important. We, of course, will foot all the bills. A young woman from our office, Miss Cynthia Collins, will come here in the morning to take your niece around to the shops. You just leave everything to her."

The three men took themselves off and, for a few minutes after they were gone, Jane and her aunt remained thoughtfully silent.

Then, Aunt Emily said, "Now we know where we are. That Hobarts fellow gave us what Sam Stephens calls the low-down. They are going to foot the bills for you to get up your flying crowd—and they'll get paid off in publicity. Well, I reckon that's fair enough."

Jane was standing in front of a full-length mirror, frowning.

"Aunt Emily — I'm worried.'

"Worried. You're a little late about that, I'd say! Time for you to worry was before you stuck your name onto that contract!"

"I don't mean that," said Jane. "I mean I'm worried about being able to live up to Mr. Hobart's expectations. If a good appearance is so important and if a lot of pictures are taken of me, I'm afraid I'll be a flop."

Her aunt chuckled. "I'd let Hobarts worry about that if I were you. As a matter of fact, after he broke down and told us exactly what they hope to get out of this, I figured you and I wouldn't be here long. They ought to hire one of those fancy models that poses for magazine covers if a beautiful girl is all they want."

This pronouncement caused Jane to look so woebegone that Aunt Emily quickly put her arms about her.

"Don't you worry, Jane," she said, with unaccustomed tenderness. "Maybe you're not the prettiest girl in the world, but there's lots of folks that think you're one of the nicest. That's more important than beauty!"

Music was furnished by the Crapaud Orchestra.

BURTON SCHOOL RED CROSS. —The last meeting was held October 24, when eighteen members of "The Happy Gang" were present. They opened their meeting by singing "O Canada." The mothers and friends were present and the members had a program of singing, recitations, etc. Then all played bingo and realized the sum of $1.30 for the Red Cross. The women said they would like to knit for the soldiers and it was decided to send for yarn. Mrs. Edward G. Griffin invited the women to her house for the first knitting. Candy was served by the pupils and best wishes for a pleasant holiday were extended to the teacher and pupils during the following two weeks. The meeting was closed by singing "God Save the King."

ACTIVE RED CROSS.—The September meeting of Brackley Pt. Red Cross met at the home of Mrs. Walter Gregor. The meeting opened by singing "O Canada" followed by the reading of the minutes which were adopted. The Treasurer reported that $10.00 had been sent to the Queen's Canadian Fund and $15.00 to the Red Cross Office. Mrs. Walter Gregor passed in $39.00, money contributed by the guests at Gregor's Hotel during the summer. This wonderful donation was gratefully received. It was decided to hold a party at Mrs. John MacCallum's in the near future. Mrs. Howard Cudmore and Mrs. George Shaw were appointed to buy a wool blanket for the lottery. It was also decided to send a Christmas box to Herbert Stewart and to enclose some knitted article. The program consisted of contests put on by Miss Stella Birt and Mrs. Walter MacLure and a comic recitation by Mrs. George Shaw was greatly enjoyed. Thirteen members and six visitors were present. Collection amounted to $3.10. Roll call to be answered by naming a new member Several commpleted articles including a quilt were taken care of by the Supply Secretary. Mrs. Alexander Seaman invited the meeting for October. Meeting closed by singing "The Maple Leaf Forever."—(Patriot please copy.)

MULLIGAN — CROKEN NUPTIALS—On Wednesday Sept. 24th St. James Church, Summerfield was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Miss Mary Catherine Mulligan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Mulligan, South Freetown was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. St. Clair Croken, son of the late Mr and Mrs. Edward Croken of Emerald. Rev. Eugene Murray celebrated the nuptial Mass, and Rev. Basel Croken cousin of the groom, was present in the sanctuary. Mrs. J. B. Croken played the wedding march and during the ceremony the choir of which the bride was a member sang approprate hymns. The bride wore a wool suit of teal blue and wine accessories. She wore a corsage of yellow roses. She was attended by Miss Bernice Carr who wore a street length dress of teal blue crepe with silver trimmings and black accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses. Mr. Emery Mulligan, brother of the bride ably supported the groom. After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents to about twenty-five guests immediate relatives of the contracting parties. Among those present were Rev. Eugene Murray and Rev. Basel Croken. The young couple left immediately by motor for a honeymoon through the New England States, visiting Marlborough, Hyde Park and Haverhill. The latter being the birth place of the bride. On their return they will reside in Emerald where the groom is a properous farmer. Their many friends wish them many years of wedded bliss.

HAPPY HOLIDAY—Word comes from Mrs. Herbert H. Royce of Tacoma, Wash., recalling the happy visit for nearly a week with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Prowse of Union Road. Mrs. Royce with her daughter and son-in-law Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Gadd and three children June, Shirley and Roddell, motored East, returning to the West Coast via Canada. Amongst the changes noted in 22 years absence were the wonderful ferry system, improved highway, National Park, new buildings and particularly the beautiful little church at Union and the happy outlook, toward the future of the many friends and relatives she had the pleasure of meeting while there. Mrs. Royce was formerly Mrs. Henry Clements of Union Road.

MISS MYRTLE ROSE SURPRISED—Miss Myrtle Rose, whose marriage to Mr. Trueman Grant will take place shortly, was honored by her associates on the staff of The Goodman Company and other friends who took her completely by surprise Thursday evening at her home, Almont Ave., and showered her with a choice collection of beautiful gifts of various kinds, says the New Glasgow News. Miss Jean Dunbar and Miss Edna Grant were the prime movers in the delightful affair and they arranged an evening's entertainment of games with a choice that suited all tastes and there were prizes in the different fields. There were thirty present and they all enjoyed themselves. The feature of the evening was of course, the showering of the bride-elect. The gifts filed a model motor car which bore the letters "Irving" conspicuously placed. The groom-to-be is with the Irving Oil Company. Besides the many very nice individual gifts there was a lovely Kenwood blanket from the proprietors of the store, a beautiful lamp from the Shoe Store department, enamel ware in a pretty combination of colors and useful articles from the ground floor, a splendid lot of pyrex in separate pieces and sets, from still another department and other wares of different kinds. Miss Rose, whose mother was the former Miss Bertha Garrick of Charlottetown, was naturally very much pleased and in a few fitting words she warmly thanked them all for the lovely things and the good wishes that went with them. The young ladies had arranged too for the refreshments and all did justice to the delicious things served.

WEDDING—A pretty wedding was solemnized at Sacret Heart Church, Borden on Monday, October 6, at 7 p.m., when Margaret Rita, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James V. MacDonald of Borden became the bride of Henry J. Ceretti also of Borden. Rev. William V. MacDonald celebrated the Nuptial ceremony. During the Mass appropriate hymns were rendered by the choir with Mrs. James MacAleer as organist. The bride who was given in marriage by her father wore a grey tailored suit with navy accessories and silver fox fur and had a a corsage of red roses. She was attended by her sister Miss Genevieve MacDonald who was attired in brown with brown accessories and wore a corsage of yellow roses. Mr. Aldo Ceretti of Montreal, brother of the groom, acted as groomsman. Immediately after the ceremony, the bridal party motored to the Abegweit Hotel where a dainty wedding breakfast was served to the relatives and immediate friends. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Charles MacLellan, aunt of the bride and Mrs. Louis Hackett. Among the guests were Rev. Father MacDonald, who asked the blessing and W. P. MacNeill, Mayor of Borden. Out of town guests included, Mrs. Joseph Ceretti of Montreal, mother of the groom, and Miss Ellie MacDonald of Glenfinnan aunt of the bride. Following the breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Ceretti left by motor on a honeymoon trip to Montreal.

PRESBY—IRVINE—An autumn wedding of local and provincial interest took place at the home of Mrs. Andrew Irvine and the late Mr. Irvine, 9 1-2 McKeen street, Glace Bay, when their eldest daughter Jean Isabel was united in marriage with Osmond Knight Presby, son of Mr. E. Presby and the late Mrs. Presby of Perth, Ont., The Rev. John MacDonald, pastor of Knox United church, performed the ceremony. Mrs. Lauchlin McKinnon presided at the piano during the service. The soloists were Mrs. Neil Ferguson, who sang "Where E'er You Walk", and Arthur Smith, who sang "The Lord's Prayer." The bride was given in marriage by her brother, D. H. Irvine. She wore ivory satin, the bodice having lace insertions with seed pearls interwoven, and tiny peplum of lace from which the full skirt fell in a graceful train. The long sleeves tapered to calla lily points over the hands. Her veil was of tulle illusion in full length in coronet fashion. Her bouquet was of Madonna lilies and bouvardia. The bride was attended by her sister Evelyn. Charles Hillcoat of Sydney, was best man. The reception was held at the residence of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Presby left on a motor trip through Upper Canadian cities. They will reside in Charlottetown, P. E.I., where the groom is manager of H. H. Marshall Ltd., as well as being a well known orchestra leader. Mrs. Presby prior to her marriage was divisional secretary for the Maritimes for the Electrolux Company, Halifax. This popular couple were the recipients of many lovely wedding gifts.
