MAJOR LEAGUES MAY CHANGE PITCHERS' RULES

It Has Been Suggested That the Rules Be Changed and That an Additional Base Be Awarded Batter Each Time He is Passed.

By Henry L. Farrell. (United Press Sports Editor.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—When the major league club owners meet this winter to seek remedies for any defects that might have been apparent in the "national pastime" during the past season, it is probable that some relief for pitchers may be generally accepted fact that the restrictions placed upon pitchers by the rule enacted several years back to curb illegal deliveries have stopped trick pitching, and practically every other kind of pitching.

The bars that were raised against the use of any foreign substance on the ball and the introduction of the rabbit-ball were designed primarily to increase hitting.

The National League, it is understood, is willing to amend the present pitching rules to permit pitchers to get a better grip on the ball. It was suggested that abuses of the privilege could be avoided by having the umpires place a small box of resin near the pitcher's box and see that only a small amount would be applied occasionally to the finger tips.

Several National League club owners have expressed their approval of this suggestion as they agree that pitchers have imposed upon them too much of a handicap, and that the resultant hitting is hurting the game.

Soon after the present rules became effective it was realized that the obligation of handling a brand new ball without violating the rules was decreasing the effectiveness of pitchers and the umpires were instructed to remove as much gloss as possible from the balls before they were put in play.

The only effective way of doing this was to wet the surface of the ball and this, too, had its bad features, because the cover was softened and made the ball more easily blemished and scarred by striking the screen, the earth or any part of the stands.

So many balls were thrown out of play that the club owners in looking over the increase in their expenses decided that something should be done.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, instructed his umpires to be less hasty in throwing balls out of play, but this order imposed upon them a fine line of distinction in judgment as to what balls to leave in play when complaints were made by the batters.

While the National League is said to be ready to amend the pitching rules, it is understood that the American League will not entertain any such suggestions. Petty politics and rivalry still exist in the major leagues and one league will not accept the suggestions made by the other, because it might be interpreted as an admission of better judgment or wisdom on the part of the other.

No one can blame a manager who is trying to get some place in a pennant race for ignoring the fact that hundreds of fans are paying money just to see Ruth hit. It is good baseball to pass Ruth when he has a chance to win a game, and it is but common sense for a manager to regard himself first and protect his job.

The intentional pass never can be ruled out, because it is an essential part of the game and because in some cases a distinction cannot be drawn between wildness and intention on the part of the pitcher. The abuse of the practice, however, can be curbed by imposing more of a penalty upon the pitcher who chooses the easiest way out of a tight place.

It has been suggested that the rules be changed and that an additional base be awarded the batter each time he is passed. For instance, the first time that Ruth is passed, he would go to first; the second time, he would be sent to second; the third time, it would be the equivalent of a triple, and if he should be passed the fourth time in one game, he would go clear around for a run.

SANDE TO RIDE ZEV, IS PREMIER AMERICAN JOCKEY

Public Has Absolute Confidence In His Honesty—He Is Modest, Clean Living and Has all the Qualifications of a Great Rider.

(United Press.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Opinion was widely divided before the American thoroughbred was picked to run against Papyrus, the English Derby winner, in the international championship race.

Many turfmen thought that My Own was the best three-year-old in the United States and should have been picked instead of Zev.

Many still think so, and if the British horse should win, they will always maintain that Papyrus did not beat the best American horse.

There were no doubts, however, as to the jockey who should have the mount on the American color-bearer.

When the race was first considered, the name of Earl Sande suggested itself immediately as the only rider in the country who could completely the combination of the best jockey and the best horse against the foreign invader.

Sande is the premier American jockey of the present day. Many qualified judges of racing are willing to allow his star to shine into the past and they regard him as being as good as Snapper Garrison, Tod Sloan and other great riders of yesterday.

He is the ace of the staff of jockeys riding for the Ranococas stable, the largest and biggest money-making establishment on the American track.

Considering the average of first, second, third, etc., scored last year, Sande was sixth on the list of American riders, but he was the leading money winner of the year.

Modest, unassuming, clean living and possessing all of the qualifications of a great rider, Sande is the idol of the eastern tracks. He is wealthy and wise. He commands a huge salary from the Ranococas stable and when he is not up on one of Sinclair's mounts, he can almost name his own fee to ride for another stable.

Because the public has absolute confidence in his honesty and because he has an uncanny faculty of getting the most of horses, Sande has a tremendous following who make a lot of money out of every mount he rides.

When Sande is up, past performers are set aside. His horses are backed simply because his genius gets something out of horses that can't be figured.

His phenomenal success was due to a lot of natural ability that was developed by a willingness to work and take his profession seriously.

Considering the money he has made, the fame he has attained, and the popularity he has won, it might be only natural that Sande should think pretty well of himself. But he doesn't.

Sam Hildreth, trainer of the Ranococas stable, says that Sande is the finest tempered and the most behaved boy he has ever handled. All the swipes, exercise boys and the stable boys like him and so do the horses. His disposition, perhaps, is no small part of his success.

Sande is up every morning before sunrise. He helps exercise and work-out the stable, from the greenest youngster in the barns to the leading blue-blood of the flock. He helps the trainers to take the youngsters when they are being taught the ways of starting, and he works just as hard and as willingly as the most obscure boy on the staff.

Do You Know?

Q. Did any team hold Centre College scoreless in football last year? H. N. T.

A. Yes. Alabama Poly shut out Centre, 6-0.

Q. Have any players hit fly-balls into the right-field bleachers at Braves Field Boston? C. H. D.

A. Only two players have done this in a scheduled game. Walton Cruise did it twice and Walter H. Ruether did it once.

Two workmen were talking about H. G. Wells the other day. "E sen the world! bust up, if we ain't careful," said one.

"Ow?" demanded the other. That was a poser. But the first workman evidently was not going to be beaten.

"Well, somethink like this," he declared. "Fust, we travels at fifty miles an hour. Then at two hundred miles an hour, and then p'raps at a thousand miles a hour."

"Lummy! and wot then?" "Then," said the workman "there's a big bang, and we all quits at a million miles a hour!"

Sporting Comment

A large crowd of fans is expected to turn out today to witness the getaway of the local football season. St. Dunstan's and Abegweits will "open the ball" and everything points to a rattling good contest.

Nothing will be left un-turned to hoist psychology over physique this afternoon. The Abegweits forward will wear percussion caps on heads instead of the regular gear—but who says they are going to blow up?

The total attendance for the World's Series games exceeded 300,000 and last, but not least, the total receipts are in the vicinity of $1,140,326. An average of 30,000 fans were turned away each day. It was tough on the turnaway mob, but concrete stadiums have no knotholes.

Gradually the odds on the big Papyrus—Zev horse race, over in New York this Saturday, are reaching sensible proportions: It looks as if the two colts will go to the post on even money shot. Before the British champion sailed for these shores the odds were even as high as 4 to 1, with the Derby winner on the short end, but gradually the price against Papyrus is coming down, the English colt, according to dispatches, is gaining more admirers every day. At the present time it looks as though, when Saturday comes around, the colts will go to the wire on even money.
