Living & Leisure THE WOMAN'S REALM

DWELL DEEP
Dwell deep! The little things that chafe and fret, O waste not golden hours to give them heed! The slight, the thoughtless wrong, go thou forget! Be self forgot in serving others' need. Thou faith in God through love for man shall keep, Dwell deep, my soul dwell deep!

Dwell deep! Forego the pleasure if it brings Necessity of duty; consecrate each thought; Believe that in the good of everything; And trust that all to wisest end is wrought; Being thou this God-sent balm to all who weep; Dwell deep, my soul dwell deep!

F. B. Mayer

There are certain plants of the Christian life such as meekness, gentleness, kindness, humility, which cannot come to perfection if the sun of prosperity always shines.

Kindness always says, but it never says when one does not do it for me.

THE EMPEROR MAN
I know a little about people.

toris man, but what about the man of the future? Will he be an improvement upon the man of today. In the past the needs of the day made man, as he learned to adapt himself to his environment. It is suggested that future men will be taller than at present, and some figures seem to point that way. Harvard freshmen, in 1906-1915 were two inches taller than those of 1866-1885.

The brain also seems to be increasing in size. And the head seems to be getting rounder with the years. The wisdom teeth will probably disappear, and our little toes, used less and less, will grow even smaller. And, more to be lamented, we seem to be getting bolder and bolder. It is interesting to speculate on just what we shall be, but it is well not to be too dramatic about it.

YES MOTHS ARE HOUSEHOLD ENEMY NO. 1!
The industry's experts tell us, moths do over $100,000,000 worth of damage every year. The eggs usually hatch within four to eight days of the time they are laid. Mrs. Average Housewife has to be on her toes to find the moths before they find her clothes. For professional results, store all winter garments—including furs—in a moth-free cupboard. First, make sure each garment is thoroughly clean. Furs need to be

MODERN ETIQUETTE

By Roberta Lee

Q. What is the correct way to eat apples, peaches and similar fruits at the table?
A. Peel the fruit with a small silver fruit knife, cut it into quarters, and then convey it to the mouth with the fingers.
Q. Instead of sending engraved invitations, is it all right for one to write wedding invitations to close friends?
A. Yes; simple informal notes, written on one's personal stationery, are all right.
Q. Should a short, stout woman wear a hat with a wide brim?
A. No, the wideness of the brim will accentuate her short stature.

brushed and aired; woollens washed in good soapy-rinsed, coats and suits sent to the dry cleaners. Next, use one pound of fumigant (such as paradichloro-benzene for every 75 to 100 cubic feet of space in the cupboard. Fumigant should be placed in proper proportion, near the top of the closet, so that fumes can settle. Then seal all four sides of the cupboard. If no closet is available for storage—garment bags, boxes or chests give excellent protection from moths providing they are tightly sealed and the correct proportion of paradichloro-benzene (commercially sold as dichloride) is used. Rugs, furs and upholstered pieces can be protected by spraying regularly with a liquid insecticide. When moth damage is unduly recurrent, however, the housewife is wise to call in the services of a reliable firm to de-moth and fumigate the premises, and to protect them against further inroads.

MAY KEEP KIT

A naval service announcement made today in Ottawa states that Wrens' uniforms will be allowed to keep all the kit issued to them in the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service. This means an average of two summer and two winter jackets and skirts for each of the 6,000 Wrens now on active service. They will also have their own hats, adaptable to all kinds of millinery angles, tri-corner, navy gaiters for winter wear, and their gairdaine raincoats, which look well as a casual coat. Some Wrens will be keeping bell-bottom trousers because they have had overseas service. Items they can't keep include long oilskin coats, rubber boots, parka coats and similar clothing issued on loan for certain duties. Another item they can't keep is their gas mask, but the Wrens say they won't mind this.

Dorothy Dix Says—

FIRST HUSBAND RETURNS

'Widow' Who Remarried Should Consult Lawyer To Determine Legal Status

DEAR MISS DIX: Four years ago when I was in school I married a boy of a well-to-do family. We told no one of our marriage because we were afraid his family would have it annulled. He was shipped overseas and at first I heard from him daily, then for months nothing at all, until one day I read in the paper that he had been killed in action.

Believing him dead, I married a very nice man and we expect a baby in a few months. Now I find that my first husband is not dead, but a prisoner of war who has been liberated and is on his way home. I have never told anyone of my first marriage, not even my present husband.

Am I guilty of this? I don't know what to do, or where to turn. The only solution I can think of is to take my own life so my innocent child will not be brought up with sin upon him. But I thought I would write and ask your advice before I did anything fatal.

MRS. J. L.

FAULTS OF YOUTH

ANSWER: First of all, try to look at your situation sanely and see the matter straight. Clear your mind of the ideas that you have committed any sin or that what you have done could reflect in any way upon your child. You have been young and foolish and overly impulsive, but these are the faults of youth—they are not crimes.

The next thing for you to do is to try to straighten out your tangled acts. Begin by not only telling your present husband the entire story of your life, but by going to your first husband's family and telling it to them and showing them your marriage certificate. This will prove to both parties that you acted in good faith and that you will lift a load of your mind and heart, because there is no other burden that can lie so heavy on us as a secret that we fear will be discovered.

Then I think you should consult a lawyer to find out your legal status and whether your second marriage is valid or not, inasmuch as you believed him to be dead. Then what happens is on the knees of the gods, for no one can foretell what attitude the two men are going to take towards you.

But your sad case should be a warning to other women not to contract second marriages on the mere supposition that their husbands are dead because they have not heard from them, or because they have reported missing. They should, at least, wait until they have had the authoritative announcement from the War Department.

DEAR MISS DIX: My brother has us all upset. He is over 30 years old and has never worked. He was in the army 18 months and got a discharge. He says he never intends to work, that he fought for us and that we should support him cheerfully and be glad to cater to his every whim. He is well and strong, but he sleeps most of the day and spends his nights in beer gardens.

ANSWER: Yes. Kick him out. Lock the door on him and tell him you are not handing out any more funds to lazy loafers. As long as he will never go to work, but when hunger begins to gnaw at his vitals he will hunt up a job.

The industrious members of a family commit no greater crime than when they encourage the deadbeat in being one by supporting him or her—for there are plenty of female parasites also—in idleness. Don't support!

ANSWER: Tell them as gently as you can, but as firmly, that three grownups in any home is a crowd and four is a riot and that could possibly live in the same house with their respective children without always being in each other's hair.

Help your mothers financially to live comfortably, but let it be under some other roof than your own.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

Jamie and Rob came this morning with the trailer and a piece of machinery when we had scarcely finished our breakfast. Rob is as Jamie tells me "two along" at his cropping having commented on Jamie's own folk come from the city to assist them at the work. It was she, who confided to me this evening that one of the willing helpers unable to take part in the set-dropping, took Rob's place on the trailer, driving the horses with an expert hand. The rows may not be as straight as Rob could make them. "Do you suppose" she continued, the city part of her mind uppermost, "that they will grow all right?" Did you see any wood-peckers this morning? Jamie asked when I met him at the porch. "I saw one yesterday when we were at the potatoes—there in a tree that grows that blood is more than a thick or thin stream he looked up towards the clouds covering the face of the sun and remarked in the Jamie-like manner: "I guess there'll be no wood-peckers out today" and added with a sigh "it's going to rain." How he came to associate these naughty birds as fair-weather ones only, I do not know. But presently the sun came brilliant from behind his veiling and the whole world about us was glad-dened and each one of us was glad-happily to his or her self-set task.

Jack went with three marks to the cultivating—at the "root-ground" which both he and his father hold is easier and better have well done before than after it is planted. So "cut" after "cut" is thrice given till it passes its final critical inspection. Jamie is final in the new mare in a farm-cart to go to the corner-store a mile distant. Judy, when she considered the near-empty state of the flour barrel, tried her best to persuade James to go there with the cart last evening. James however prefers a more certain and more familiar mode of travel. This also helps flour were needed and when James "never bothers with it" Jamie because it "gives him a headache" and warned him to "save this coupon" and "use that one" in their three books until his mind was completely befogged, it was a delightful Judy who begged: "let me go along, Mrs. Ellen, I'd love the ride." This is among her endearing qualities—she seems to enjoy everything even a ride on a lumbering farm-wagon quite as much as in a fine machine and her enthusiasm and good spirits on such an outing are so contagious, she at once becomes a popular and wanted passenger. Because James had to make a call at a farm-house on the return trip, she rode home with the mail-man. Rather disappointed for this was a day when she expected some snap-shots that she might neglect since the snowing and for her husband's sake of winter in the mail today.

COOK'S CORNER

COOKED SALAD DRESSING WITH OIL

- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon granulated sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon cayenne
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika
- 1 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/2 cup sherry vinegar
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 cup salad oil
- 1/2 cup cold water
- 1 cup cold water
- Beat egg slightly, measure and add the sugar, salt, cayenne, paprika and mustard; blend to a smooth paste.
- Stir in the vinegar, lemon juice and salad dressing mixed with 1/2 cup cold water and mix thoroughly.
- Measure the corn starch into a saucepan and slowly blend in the cold water. Cook, stirring constantly, over low direct heat until smoothly thickened and no raw flour of starch remains.
- Stir in the hot mixture into cold mixture, beating vigorously with a rotary beater until smooth and thick.
- Turn into clear jar, cool, cover and store in a cool place.
