CATARRH LEADS TO CONSUMPTION

Catarrh is as much a blood disease as scrofula or rheumatism. It may be relieved, but it cannot be removed by simply local treatment. It causes headaches and dizziness, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, affects the voice, deranges and digestion, and breaks down the general health. It weakens the delicate lung tissues and leads to consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla goes to the seat of the trouble, purifies the blood, and is so successful that it is known as the best remedy for catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens and tones the whole system. It builds up. Ask your druggist for Hood's and insist on having it. There is no real substitute.

A STIRRING ROMANCE OF THE WAR, ENDING IN THE CRIMINAL COURTS OF PARIS

PARIS, Feb. 5.—One of the stirring romances of the war had a melancholy ending in one of the criminal courts of Paris a few days ago when Pierre Giraud, one of the heroes of Charleroi was sentenced to five years imprisonment for purloining letters containing money and valuables to the amount of more than 400,000 francs. The execution of the sentence was suspended on the recommendation of the jury. Giraud, under military age, enlisted at the outbreak of the war and was in the gas-train at Charleroi. Hit by an explosive bullet, he lay on the field three days and three nights before he was picked up by a Belgian manufacturer who went over the field with a motor for overlooked wounded. Taken to a hospital in Charleroi, he was nursed by the daughter of the man who saved him. Later she aided him to escape. Helping him into one of the coffins provided for the dead of the hospital, she got him into the morgue, where he remained ten hours before a chance was found to transfer him in a wheelbarrow to the girl's father. His hiding place was discovered thru a denunciation, but Giraud escaped on crutches before the Germans could get him and after various vicissitudes reached the frontier of Holland from whence he returned to France by way of England. His nurse followed him and there adventure developed into marriage as soon as Giraud's wound was healed. Decorated with the military medal and the war cross, Giraud was reinstated in his former employ at the general post office. He was charged with the supervision of the department of registered letters in which important thefts occurred. Losses of letters containing large sums of money continued thru ten months, before Giraud fell under suspicion. A search at his residence revealed a hoard of about 400,000 francs in banknotes and securities that he had extracted from registered letters, of that sum less than 10,000 francs has been applied to Giraud's personal use. Giraud said in court that he had no idea what he would have done with the money and securities. The jury concluded that he committed the thefts under mental aberration resulting from his wound and the sufferings he had endured. An odd development of the case is that the owners of the money and securities have no recourse against the state for the recovery of their property because in each case they had infringed the laws governing the expedition of valuables by registered letter. Consequently the state is richer by 232,000 francs in bank bills and 150,000 francs in securities and jewelry, through Giraud's aberrations.

FATHER VAUGHAN AND THE WAR

Father Vaughan has been on all the cinematographs making good "copy" in cassock and biretta. He told his Trafalgar Square audience that he appeared before them in his clerical uniform just to let them know that since being a Jesuit he was just as patriotic an Englishman as he was when a civilian. Told by one of the crowd: "Your Pope would not agree with your war views," the Father replied: "And why should he? If common ordinary folk like you and me have our views about the war, its origin and aims, surely so august a personage as his Holiness the Pope may be allowed to have his" (cheers) Asked by another if he was not warthirsty for a priest, he replied: "You must remember that I do not yet belong to the Church Triumphant, but to the Church Militant. When I can exchange my sword for the victor's crown I will do so, but till then my hand is on the hilt." Father Vaughan having suggested a cold seat-bath for the peace-at-any-price man, someone wants to know whether he could find that doctrine in Scripture. "Yes," replied the speaker, "and a stranger does than mine, because the Divine Teacher had suggested that a War Flour Makes Good Bread. By The Editor. The FIVE ROSES Cook Book (over 450,000 copies in actual use). DO NOT hesitate to be the first to bake the new War Flour into Bread. Let it second your patriotic efforts in the conservation of wheat and flour. In our Laboratories, using the same recipe as with the old FIVE ROSES, we produced a loaf from the War Flour possessing all the essential attributes that have made bread the staff of life. The Test We Made. In appearance, the loaf we made from Government Regulation Flour was quite as appealing as that made from FIVE ROSES flour. It cut very satisfactorily without crumbling; the crust was thin, crackling, and sweet to the palate. The texture slightly more open possibly, but appetizingly fresh and yielding. We have no reason to doubt its keeping qualities. In lightness, flavor and general eating qualities, we can assure all FIVE ROSES users that we were delighted with the results obtained. The complexion of the loaf was naturally more creamy than the old FIVE ROSES loaf, but this in no way affects its nutritive or digestive properties. So that, in making an early use of the new War Flour, thrifty housewives will be securing equal nutrition at less cost, besides contributing to the increased wheat supplies so sorely needed by our Allies. It is truly no sacrifice to economize with FIVE ROSES milled according to Government Regulation. Lake of the Woods Milling Company Limited. Makers of Five Roses Flour. CANADA. FIVE ROSES IN KHAKI.—To conserve wheat so essential to the Allied Cause, your favourite brand is now being milled according to Government Regulations. But the name "FIVE ROSES" which, for over a quarter century, has been a positive assurance of quality is still your protection. Users of "FIVE ROSES Government Grade" Flour are assured of the best available flour under all conditions. Fortunate possessors of the famous FIVE ROSES Cook Book can bake with the new FIVE ROSES with practically no change in their present recipes and in the certainty of excellent baking results.
