

WOMAN GIVEN TWO DAYS

To Make Up Her Mind for Surgical Operation. She Refused; Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"One year ago I was very sick and I suffered with pains in my side and back and I nearly went crazy. I went to different doctors and they all said I had female trouble and would not get any relief until I would be operated on. I had suffered for four years before this time, but I kept getting worse the more medicine I took. Every month since I was a young girl I had suffered with cramps in my sides and periods was never regular. I saw your advertisement in the newspaper and the picture of a woman who had been saved from an operation and this picture was impressed on my mind. The doctor had given me only two more days to make up my mind so I sent my husband to the drug store at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and believe me, I only took four doses before I felt a change and when I had finished the third bottle I was cured and never felt better. I grant you the privilege to publish my letter and am only too glad to let other women know of my cure."

IMPROVE WELL WATER

Draoctic Advice Given About Sanitation on Farms

Melting snow, carrying with it in solution much of the refuse and decaying matter accumulated during the winter, constitutes a serious danger to the water supply from wells. Many wells are so constructed as to allow surface water to find its way around the tops, while in others, particularly dug wells, it seeps in through the lining near the top. Where there is any danger of this pollution it is a measure of safety to bore the water before it is used for human consumption. For lining dug wells reinforced concrete has been successfully used. Concrete may be made practically impervious to water, so that a concrete-lined dug well can be polluted only from the bottom.
The water supply on the farm is always an important matter, and too much care cannot be taken in its location and protection. The farm well should be placed where the surface drainage from all possible sources of contamination is away from the well. If possible, it is advisable to provide impervious floors with water-tight drains for farm buildings and stock pens. Under the same conditions concrete manure pits might be provided not only to prevent the liquid manure from polluting the neighboring soil but to save the manure. No garbage, manure, or rubbish should be dumped into sinks or basins in the immediate neighborhood, and such basins should be fenced off and the house should be provided with some safe method of sewage disposal, while slops and garbage from the kitchen should be deposited in tightly covered garbage cans and disposed of by burying in the fields, burning, etc. The use of privy vaults and leaching or overflowing cesspools should also be absolutely avoided, as they are likely to be sources of the worst contamination.

WESTERN RURAL CREDITS

Effects on Grazing Industry of Prairie Would be Excellent

Ex-Governor Leedy, previously of Kansas, but now a citizen of Northern Alberta, says: "Between the Great Lakes and the Rocky Mountains we have a sea of grass which goes to waste every year. On the other side of the boundary line it is impossible to find a mouthful of grass going to waste anywhere. Go as far from the railroad as you like and you will find herds of cattle there, and if you inquire you will find that they are covered by a mortgage which is registered there in the name of the bank. What is the reason? It is that the man who has got enough money of his own to carry out a business of that kind is not going to put up with the privations of cattle herding on the ranges, but the man who has got no money, but has got some 'gimp' in him and wants to make money, will go out and herd cattle. If it had not been a safe business from the bankers' and cattlemen's point of view, the business on the Kansas City Stockyards could not have grown from nothing in 1893 to $50,000,000 in 1915. If this system had been put into force in this country at the same time, the half million horses that the allies bought in the United States in 1914 could have been bought in Canada, while I also undertake to say that the $100,000,000 contract for beef let in Chicago could have been furnished by these three prairie provinces of Canada."

LIGHT PEOPLE HEALTHY

Weight no Sure Signs, the Insurance Men Find

The life insurance companies have long looked with a certain reverence upon their tables fixing the relation of weight to height in the human animal, and with prejudice upon any applicant who fails to come within a definite degree of their standard. Exhaustive investigations have been made recently, the results of which will, no doubt, modify the rigidity of their rules in regard to what is technically known as underweight, for these investigations, covering as they do a long period of years and many thousands of cases, tend to prove that light weight is not associated with organic disease, is no impediment to long life. These statistics show that the average duration of life in subjects from 10 to 30 or even 40 pounds under standard weight is but a small fraction below the normal average. This important "discovery" is quite in accord with common observation. How often has one noted the insistent longevity of men and women of physique so frail it would seem the slightest disturbance of the internal functions would carry them off, yet they live on and on while their associates with broad shoulders and deep chests, the so-called strong constitutions, go down, one by one, leaving the supposed weaklings actively pursuing their way.

KITCHENER A FATALIST

Propheesied That He Would Die Peacefully In Bed

When Kitchener did talk of himself he made some mistakes. He was a fatalist, and on several occasions expressed some very strong convictions as to his future. During the Sudan campaign he was once warned not to expose himself so recklessly to the enemy while in action. To this remonstrance he replied: "I shall never be killed. When my time comes I shall die peacefully in my bed." But he died on duty on board a warship, in the face of the enemy and "with his boots on."
His friend, Mrs. Erskine, chronicles another bad piece of prophecy. "If there is ever a great war, and I happen to be War Secretary," he once said to me, "I'll make a criminal offence to print unauthorised news." But if there is a great war, he added, "I am sure not to be War Secretary."

"SEND ME MORE MEN"

Kitchener in Africa Worried the Slackers But Won Out

Kitchener went to South Africa in the black days, when Britain had suffered a series of defeats—Stormberg, Magersfontein, Colenso—and Britain's military supremacy was in grave danger. And how the "gentlemen" of the ranks, and others, hated his methods. Soon letters were arriving in London complaining of his arbitrary ways. He was "making himself hated everywhere"; "insulting voluntary officers of noble birth daily"; "ruining the organization" and so on. But never a word from Kitchener until he broke the silence with the laconic despatch, "Send me more men." And with these hundreds of thousands he won through as he would have done in his own time with the millions whom he called "Kitchener's army" in the Great War.

Hints For Trenches

Captain B. C. Lake's work for officers gives admirable instructions for meeting or making a gas attack. "Lachrymatory shells" contain, we are told, bromoacetone or chloroacetone. If gas is to be used successfully the following conditions must be fulfilled: The wind must be about five miles an hour; there must be no rain; the enemy must be taken by surprise; and a gas heavier than air must be employed. The grenade, he says, should normally be bowled overhead; it should not be thrown like a cricket ball, as this is a danger of exploding it by knocking the hand against the back of the trench.

COMPLIMENTS TO HUNS

Can Reader Guess What Nation is Mentioned Slightlyly?

There is a nation that spits upon international law, upon treaties, upon pledges and agreements. It mistakes for terrifying strength ferocity and a blind, useless maiming and killing of harmless men, women and children; children seem to be its favorite subjects for Zeppelin slaughters. On land and sea, from under the sea and from the air, it kills non-combatants as nonchalantly as an Apache of the old days would scalp a baby or dash out its brains against a doorpost. The madness for destruction which it can satisfy only in part on the monuments of Belgian and French art it feeds upon helpless, innocent human beings. The will to power scorns all the "sentimentalities" of honor. Wherever it can it makes a breach in the walls that the nations have slowly built against the old savageries of war. It murders right and left.—New York Times.
