

WHEN you require a roof, the measurement will be in squares (100 square feet). A basis for analysis of the costs of Brantford Asphalt Slates is given below:

- 1-INITIAL COSTS OF MATERIALS—Brantford Asphalt Slates are sometimes higher in initial cost for the material.
2-TOOLS REQUIRED—Brantford Asphalt Slates require ONLY 666 nails to lay a square. Brantford Asphalt Slab Slates require ONLY 450 nails.
3-COST OF LAYING—Brantford Asphalt Slab Slates are four on one strip—require only one operation in handling, one operation in spacing—individual slates are 8 x 12 1/2 inches—Cut easily, fit easily, fit on angles and bend over round surfaces. You save 20 to 50 per cent. in laying.
4-NO PAINT OR STAIN REQUIRED—The surface of Brantford Asphalt Slates is in nature's permanent colors, green and red, undecolorable, always attractive, requiring no stain to produce artistic effects, no liquid coats to make them fire-resistant.
5-SAVING OF INSURANCE—Brantford Asphalt Slates are classed as non-combustible by fire insurance companies—a direct saving of from 10 to 20 per cent. on premiums is effected. In certain localities fire regulations demand asbestos paper under some roof materials, but Brantford Asphalt Slates are fire-resistant and are immune from special regulations.
6-COST OF REPAIRS—From the day they are laid Brantford Asphalt Slates show almost 100 per cent. of the original roof touched. Brantford Asphalt Slates do not curl, split, crack or rot. Complete protection and permanent protection are built into Brantford Asphalt Slates roofs.

Compare these roof costs with those of any other roofing material; it is your money you are spending and you want value for it—then buy

THE OUTLAW The Story of a Girl Who Didn't Want to Marry By ETHEL LLOYD PATT.

Chapter XX

Two or three men, with pencils behind their ears and papers in their hands, hurried past me—as I stood in the outer office of the moving picture company—but with out noticing me. Presently a young woman, with rouge on her cheeks and high laced white kid shoes, came out. She was chewing gum. She went to the boy's desk and ransacked about a pile of papers that was there.

"Where's Freddie?" she said. I looked around. When I saw that there was nobody else near us, I concluded she was addressing me. "I don't know who Freddie is," I told her. "The girl stopped chewing gum a moment and stared at me. "Well," she concluded, "you don't know much do you? Then she went again behind one of the swinging doors. I wasn't offended. I was only curious; anxious to find out how this new world, in which I found myself, operated. There was another long wait for me. And then the boy, who had been behind the desk, came back—scuffing his feet as he walked and whistling. "You can go in," he announced. He started for his desk, paying no further attention to me. I hesitated. "But where shall I go?" I asked him. With that, he gave me quite a vindictive look; stalked toward the door he had just entered; held it open for me grudgingly, and started down the hall. "My gosh!" I heard him say, between his teeth, "these numskulls run a fellow's legs off—don't know nothin'!"

At the end of the hall, the boy knocked imperatively upon a closed door. He turned the handle almost at once, before the man inside could call "Come in." And I entered, to find myself in the presence of Mr. Seeley. He was a youngish man, stout and with heavy shell-rimmed spectacles. He looked up at me, as I came forward timidly. "I'm Nell Birney," I began. "Yes, I know," the man interrupted. "She phoned me yesterday." Then he stopped and permitted himself to appraise me as calmly as though I were a dog or a horse. "Good eyes," he said finally, "regular movie eyes—but no chic." He pronounced it "chick." I was properly humbled by the treatment I had received since I came into the place. I was prepared to plead for my chance. "But couldn't you just try me out?" I asked. "Won't you give me a chance?"

To my surprise, Mr. Seeley answered heartily. "Sure!" he said. "You might be all right, with a little fixing up. You want to do your hair different. Curl it, and all that. We pay three dollars for a girl to walk on in a crowd at a ball, or something like that. We could use you—let's see—three days from now, if you come to the office at nine o'clock." I clasped my hands happily. "Oh, I said, "that is good of you!" "That's all right," said Mr. Seeley easily. "You be here, three mornings from now—nine o'clock—and bring along a swell evening dress."

I stood frozen to the spot. "Swell evening dress!" I repeated, after him. "Sure!" said Mr. Seeley. "It's a coronation scene. Swell thing. Beter go the whole hog—satin slippers and all." "Oh!" I said again "but I haven't an evening dress! What shall I do?" "Say look here!" Mr Seeley told me. "That's none of my business. You asked for a chance. I'm giving it to you, ain't I? I guess any friend of Rora's can scare up an evening dress. Run along now, kid Show up here—ask for me—nine o'clock."

I turned on my heel and left his office. Somehow I found my way back again down the long dark hall to the front office, where still sat the boy behind his desk. He looked up and grinned at me as I came out. "Who are you, Little Bright Eyes?" he asked, "Geraldine, the Child Queen of the Movies?" "Please," I said pitifully, "please don't tease me."

STILL THERE Dr. Morgan E. Genge.

Freedoms proud flag of the ages Kissed by the north Sea's blast Ragged and torn are its edges Whipping the war ship's mast, Honored old piece of bunting Nobly it did its share, Vainly they tried to shake it But its there, "still there."

Trio of crosses we hail you, Flag of the brave and free, Flag that has led o'er Carnage and dead To the height of victory Torn old flag, worn old flag Flag of the men who dare Shell rent, and storm ripped old bunting, Whipped hard in the gale, but "still there."

Look o'er the main and you see it Look to the peak its "still there", Proudly it floats, nor in arrogance gloats O'er the flag that was struck in despair. Laid Has blackened the sea and the air, But in splendour in waves o'er our loved heroes graves Storm ripped, but victorious, The smoke of Trafalgar and Ju- still there."

A Woman's Right to Know the Truth about Mattresses

YOU have not heard very much about this subject, perhaps. But you see old mattresses thrown away. You know that mattresses are discarded by hospitals, and by homes visited with infectious disease.

Have you any idea how many such mattresses are taken apart, the stuffing "renovated," put into fresh ticking and slipped back into the stores by irresponsible manufacturers?

Here is a real situation. Some responsible concern should certainly take an uncompromising stand in this matter.

Probably no one can take this stand better than Simmons Limited—as we are the originators of Simmons Beds, Springs and Mattresses Built for Sleep, and the largest single factor in the bedding business.

We guarantee that every mattress bearing the Label of Simmons Limited is built for sleep, of pure, clean, new cotton. Sealed in a carton roll in our great, sun-flooded work-rooms. Delivered to you sweet and clean.

Both your own nice living and the public health in general are involved in your taking these facts to heart and acting on them.

A mattress built—not stuffed. Pure, clean, new cotton. Ticking of the best. Stitching and tufting close, firm, uniform.
