What The Future Has In Store For Us

Thomas A. Edison Makes Some Notable Forecasts of the Effects Future Inventions Will Have on Our Life, and Describes Some of the Wonders of Radium.

A member of the staff of the New York Independent has been interviewing Thomas A. Edison and drawing from him some remarkable forecasts of what the wizard believes the future holds for humanity.

The clothes of the future will be so cheap that every young woman will be able to follow the fashions promptly, and there will be plenty of fashions. Artificial silk that is superior to natural silk is now made of wood pulp. It shines better than silk. I think that the silk worm barbarism will go in fifty years, just as the indigo of India went with the production of indigo in German laboratories.

There is much ahead of us. We don't know what gravity is; neither do we know the nature of heat, light and electricity. We are only animals. We are coming out of the dog stage and getting a glimpse of our environment. We don't know—we just suspect a few things. Our practice of shooting one another in war is proof that we are animals. The makeup of our society is hideous.

Communication with other worlds has been suggested. I think we had better stick to this world and find out something about it before we call up our neighbors. They might make us ashamed of ourselves. Not individualism but social labor will dominate the future. Industry will constantly become more social and interdependent. There will be no manual labor in the factories of the future. The men in them will be merely superintendents watching the machinery to see that it works right. Less and less man will be used as an engine or as a horse, and his brain will be employed to benefit himself and his fellows.

Edison believes that we may discover the germ of getting all the power from fuel tomorrow. Regarding the possibility of using radium as a fuel, he believes it is only speculative.

Radium has great power. It has no appreciable limit of end. It is not combustible. It gives off intratomic energy. We don't know how its energy was stored up. A carload of radium would have as much energy as all the millions of tons of coal mined in the United States in a year.

Radium is the cause of the earth's heat, according to the view of most scientists to-day. That explains why the earth, constantly radiating vast quantities of heat into space, doesn't cool down. The planet would be pretty chilly after all these millions of years if it had not radium in it. While only small quantities of radium have been isolated, it exists everywhere in water, rock and soil. It is universally distributed, and a little of it goes a long way. The possibility of harnessing the force for our use is somewhat of a speculation. A radium clock has been made, and it will go several hundred years without winding.

I have a spinthariscoper which is a tiny bit of radium of a size that will go through the eye of a needle, mounted over a piece of willmetite. It has been shooting off millions of sparks for the six years that I have had it, and I expect it will be shooting sparks the same way for thousands of years. There will be enough sparks given out by this fragment of radium to cover and illuminate the state of Rhode Island. Some say they travel at the speed of light, others 12,000 miles a second. This speed is the source of radium's power. Indefinite velocity makes up for lack of mass. Microscopic particles projected at high velocity are equal to heavy bodies going a slow gate. The illustration of a wax bullet being fired through a wooden plank applies to radium's emanations. Rankin said that spider web running over two pulleys with the velocity of light would be capable of running all the machinery in England; they would prove as strong as rubber and leather belting.

It is hardly feasible to carry a round radium as a pocket stove or to keep it in the house for domestic uses. Professor Currie had a tiny bit in his vest pocket that he was taking to London and it had the effect of making a festering sore in his side. Radium is found along with uranium and thorium. Some day we might find immense deposits of it, and then it will be a problem how to handle it without dangerous consequences. A large quantity of the stuff would kill everybody around. A fellow shot up with seventeen thousand million atomic cannon balls poured into him with the velocity of light would feel uncomfortable.

Besides its mechanical possibilities radium is valuable, it is said, in the treatment of the skin cancer and some other diseases. Cancer is a hard proposition, but when it bucks up against radium it meets its match. I guess it is a case of similia similibus curatur.

PROTESTS AGAINST MONTREAL GRANT TO EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS.

MONTREAL, March 12.—In his address to the brethren of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Quebec, Loyal Orange Association, at its annual meeting yesterday, held in the Alexandra rooms, Grand Master Singleton, made reference to the forthcoming eucharistic congress in the following terms:

"There is one matter in particular to which I wish to draw your special attention, and that is the great eucharistic congress to be held in this city in the coming month of September. We all know that it is the real meaning of holding this vast convention in Montreal. We know that it is a direct challenge to the supreme power and authority of His Majesty the King in his own dominion, rather than a mere religious demonstration.

"And further, we would ask what right has the city council to give $5,000 toward this semi-religious event. Money for which the citizens were taxed to meet the necessary expenses of the city? Is this eucharistic congress, I would ask, a necessary expense? Is this what we Protestant people paid our taxes for?"

"Now, we do not oppose this grant merely on religious grounds, because their faith differs from ours. If grants were made to the various important bodies convening in the city from time to time, irrespective of their creed or religion, we would have nothing to say, but when the emissaries of a foreign power assemble here from all over the world, and preach the doctrine that loyalty to that power is supreme, and comes from loyalty to the King, then we say the governing body of the city has no right to take the money of
