

ELECTRICITY BUILDING OF THE PAN AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

Elaborate designs have recently been completed for the Electricity Building for the Pan-American Exposition, to be held in Buffalo, N. Y., May 1st to November 1 1901. Displays of all kinds in the practical and artistic uses of electricity, together with complete exhibits of electrical machinery and appliances, are to be conspicuous features of the great Exposition.

The design contemplates a very handsome and commodious building. The structure is to be 500 feet from east to west, and 150 feet wide, giving an exhibition space of 75,000 square feet.

The South facade fronts the Mall and the north fronts the Midway. The east end is toward the massive Electric Tower, while the west faces the Grand Canal. The building is long, low and inviting. The design of the facade shows artistic grouping. The openings of the pergola-like loggias, placed at frequent intervals, present a delightful effect, showing more and more of the details of the pilasters and openings as the eye travels to the end of the building farthest away from the corner.

There is a pleasing ending at each corner of the structure, with a low-domed pavilion tower, and a facade is interrupted at the centre by a double-towered entrance. This entrance, wide and high, is spanned by an ornamental arch and supported on each side by columns. The towers, also, have minor entrances through them.

The connecting work between the towers, the towers themselves, the pavilions at the corners of the building, and similar places, are to be brilliantly illuminated and made gay with banners and flags.

The general ornamentation of the structure is to be in freestone in an interesting mixture of reds, greens and yellows. The general color scheme follows that of the Machinery and Transportation building and other groups of buildings of the Exposition. The structure was designed by Green & Wicks of Buffalo.

JOHN BRIGHT.

The great English statesman, John Bright, a man who has done perhaps as much for the morals of England as any other great Englishman, said on one occasion, "I believe that there is no field of labor, no field of Christian benevolence, which has yielded a greater harvest to our national interests and character than the great institution of Sunday-schools." This is the testimony of a great man who believed it was better to train up boys and girls to be good citizens than it was to neglect them when children and try and take care of them as men and women. Nothing in the United States is doing so much to advance the interests of Sunday-schools as the International Sunday-school Convention and the State and County Conventions which are auxiliary to it. The next International Convention will be held in Denver, 1902. Our Provincial organization is working in the same line and is doing much to advance the interest of Sunday-schools of all denominations in our part of the country. Circulars explaining the International Sunday-school work may be had of Marion Lawrence, General Secretary, Toledo, Ohio.
