Living & Leisure — THE WOMAN'S REALM —

There is a pleasure in the pathless woods. There is a rapture on the lonely shore. There is society, where none intrudes; By the deep sea, and music in its shores.

Byron: Childe Harold.

DO YOUR OWN STYLE MIXING

"Anything goes" just now in the in-between season between the heat of summer and the cool days of fall. Wardrobe combinations are possible—white shoes are fine to wear with your fall suit on chilly days and are just as correct as the black and brown pumps you'll wear later on.

Your fall coat doesn't look out of place with a summer dress either. It's an excellent season to team up those "orphans" in your summer wardrobe, the dresses and accessories that didn't fit in with any outfit, with something borrowed from fall.

Use your originality this year too. Styles don't all come "direct from Paris" any more and with the style centre shifting from Paris to London to New York, your own ideas—if you have a knack of choosing becoming clothes—are bound to be right.

SAVE PRECIOUS FOODS

Saving every little bit of food is the motto these days. It also applies to everything having to do with food and the Consumer Section has these practical pointers along the way to greater conservation.

Save fuel by cooking several dishes in the oven at one time.

Save sugar by careful planning and careful cooking.

Save butter by scraping every bit from the wrapper.

Save all fat. Clarify and use for cooking.

Save sour milk. It makes tender cakes and biscuits and delicious cottage cheese.

Save vegetable water for soups, sauces, gravies. Save vinegar adds zest to salad dressings.

Save celery tops and parsley. Dry and use for the soup pot of seasoning.

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

The funeral services for Aunt-in-law to James, called "suddenly" away from earthly scenes, and yet not altogether without warning, were held today. In the "home" church, picturesquely set on a hillside, a number of his kin were present. It is a fine country here in the now long ago. It differs perhaps in the colors of the decorations and I suspect that possibly there have been minor replacements, which the flight of years inevitably brings but of which I am unaware. But it still sits serenely there, in this quiet spot, its very location appealing to those who out of the stress and strain of their various and varied careers might desire to "come apart from these" to rest awhile. I have an idea, that even if James' thoughts were centred about the departed one, who had been at his loss yet it is likely that as we sat there, he returned again to his childhood days and peeped the pew with many who with the years have since passed away. I saw his eyes turn to the family pew and then he turned slightly to scan others. He was seeing uncles and aunts, a cousin, and in-laws who were once seated among the others of their families and who now rest in God's acres in the church's shadow. It's a nice Church to come to—this one "across the river." And yet this afternoon it held a long and sad farewell. Many a time this mother had come to worship here. As a bride from a distant section of The Island and then through succeeding years so happily with her family and other loved ones. Now these be held her face for the last time on earth. Eyes were closed, disregarding tears and sighs—eyes that had once seen so clearly to stitch small gowns and laddie shirts, and smiled tenderly on all comers and seen much to love and enjoy in and about the old home at "the point."

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Unspoken Love

Spouses Seldom Regain Wife's Love After Spree of Philandering

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a man of 30. My wife is 26. We have been married ten years and have four adorable children. All during our married life I have stepped out on her, and especially I have done so during the past 18 months.

Now I am tired of painting the town red. I want to be with my family and have the respect of my children as they grow up. I want the love and respect of my wife, but I am afraid I have lost that forever. She is an ideal wife and mother. She never nags. She never reproaches me. She goes about her duties quietly and lovingly. She makes our home life pleasant, but I know she would not tolerate me now if it were not for the children's sake. There is neither love nor respect in her eyes when she looks at me.

The times when I would go off on my pleasures, leaving her alone, have left their mark on her and now she quietly refuses any invitation to go with me, even though it is to places she would like to go.

Is there any help for this situation?

A PENITENT HUSBAND.

KILLED WIFE'S LOVE

ANSWER: I do not think so. There is no way of bringing life back into a corpse. You have killed your wife's love and respect for you and nothing that you can do or say will ever bring back her faith in you, or revive her love.

Nothing in all the psychology of men is so strange as their belief that they can humiliate their wives by their affairs with other women; that they can be writers to them; that they can neglect them; that they can make them an object of pity or derision by being the forlorn creatures who sit at home by their lonely firesides while their husbands are off spending their money and dissipating themselves with other women, yet who believe that in spite of the insults they have piled upon their wives that they will love them still and wait for them with open arms to come back to them when they are tired of bought women.

Often the neglected wife does wait for her husband to come back because she is dependent upon him and knows no way of making a living for herself. Offener still she keeps up the pretense of keeping up a home of which he is the head because of the children. She wants them to respect their father, and she hides his infidelities as well as she can.

But the truant husband who thinks he can go back to a wife who still loves him befools himself. What he has killed he cannot bring to life again. The dead are dead.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: In her last days my mother exacted a promise from me that I would marry a certain woman. I am not in love with this woman. I love another woman and would ask her to marry me if it were not for my promise to my mother.

What is your opinion of this?

BACHELOR OF 30

ANSWER: I think you are perfectly silly if you let your promise to your mother keep you from marrying the woman you love. No one should regard a death bed promise as binding because it is always exacted under a pressure that no one has the right to inflict on another.

When a loved one is passing away from us forever, our hearts are torn with affection and compassion and we feel that we can deny them nothing, and we will promise anything that we think will give them even a minute's happiness. We do not bargain with them, no matter how unreasonable their request. We do not stop to think that the dead should not rule the living, or that their demands may mean a useless sacrifice of a whole life.

So we have the sad cases, like your own, in which a man's or woman's life is wrecked by a promise made to a dying person. Believe me, such promises are better broken than kept, for surely it can add nothing to the happiness of a saint in glory if they know that they have ruined a living person's life.

DEAR MISS DIX: Can a boy tell whether a girl has false teeth by kissing her?

ANSWER: You will have to ask a dentist that question. But my observation is that you can use your eyes instead of your lips in settling that question. But what matter whether a girl's teeth are her own by right of purchase or nature? A nice set of well-made dentures are certainly preferable to a mouthful of snags.

Morning Smile

SO SMART

A woman was riding on an old-fashioned street car. She said to the conductor:

"Conductor, stop the car. I want to get off."

As the car was stopping, she said: "At which end shall I get off?"

Conductor—Either end, madam. Both ends stop.

TWO SCOOPS

Ever keen on bits of local news, the Bigtown Weekly Budget announced the engagement of the local schoolmaster:

A week later it "splashed" the following item:

"As we were the first to announce the engagement of Mr. J. Smith, our well-known and respected schoolmaster, to Miss Mary Murphy so we are now in a position to be the first to announce that there is not an atom of truth in the assertion."

Cracks in Floors

To fill in cracks in the floor, soak some old newspapers in strong alum water until they form a soft pulp. Then press hard into the cracks. When covered with paint, the repair will hardly show.

Odores on Dishes

Fish or onion odors will not cling to dishes if two tablespoonfuls of baking soda are added to the water in which the dishes are washed.

Blue Fabrics

Blue fabrics will hold their color much longer if they are soaked in a solution of one tablespoon of salt to one quart of water.

Hints on Etiquette

A man removes his gloves in shaking hands with a lady if his hands are full, it is better manners for the lady not to extend her hand in greeting.

WILL GET WHISTLES

Belts have attained an hitherto unknown importance in the wardrobes of misses from 13 to 23, for nothing has done more to push stumpy sweaters out of the hearts and minds of the young set than the smart-looking belts now on the market.

It's the reason of lipped-in waists and you'll see more and more sweaters tucked neatly into skirt tops and girdled with smooth-looking belts in steerhide, suede and cloth.

Get ready to whistle boys.

COATS MAKE NEWS ON FASHION FRONT

Things you will watch for in coats this year are rounded, extended shoulders... sleeves with interest in fullness below the elbow or billowing in Bishop fashion... skirts rounding out from little belted or tied waists with pannier effects... necklines often rising into soft little Queen Anne face-trimming collars.

The "Officer's Look" is the newest trend in the tailored coat, a double-breasted style with high lapels and roomy shoulders. The Luncheon Coat is another favorite, with dressy detail, braid and glamor.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Are there certain kinds of clothes that a tall woman should avoid wearing?

A. Yes, a tall woman should avoid clothes that are severely tailored, straight lines, and solid colors. Nor is a large hat becoming. Flat-headed shoes will tend to shorten her height.

Q. When one is dining alone in a restaurant, is it all right to join another party without invitation?

A. No; one must always wait for an invitation.

Q. What is the correct formal introduction when presenting a man to a woman?

A. "Mrs. Smith, may I present Mr. Allen?"

Cook's Corner

TO WHIP LIGHT CREAM

1 1/2 teaspoons granulated gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1 cup light cream
Few grains of salt

Place granulated gelatin in small bowl; add water and mix well. Heat over boiling water until gelatin is completely dissolved, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and add cream and salt. Place in bowl of ice and water and whip immediately with rotary egg beater 5 to 7 minutes, or until mixture begins to hold shape around side of bowl. Remove from ice water. Stir gently with spoon until smooth.

This whipped cream may be stored in refrigerator until needed. Mix thoroughly before using.

Note: desired, chill mixture in refrigerator instead of ice water. When mixture is thickened, beat until light and fluffy. Return to refrigerator to set slightly. Before using, stir with spoon.

*Cream 2 or 3 days old, whips more quickly than fresh cream.

Better English

D. C. Williams

1. What is wrong with this sentence? "She bought it off of a peddler."

2. What is the correct pronunciation of "hiatus"?

3. Which one of these words is misspelled? Declare, welfare, repair, prepare.

4. What does the word "credence" mean?

5. What is a word beginning with det that means "an explosion"?

ANSWERS

1. Say: "She bought it from a peddler." 2. Pronounce hi-a-tus, i as in high, a as in ate, accent second syllable. 3. Repair. 4. Belief. (Pronounce first e as in me.) Such an assertion might easily find credence. 5. Detonation.

How Can I!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I prevent having to scrape cake tins, after using?

A. When a number of kitchen utensils are required, such as during cake baking, keep the dishpan in the sink filled with hot water, and as each utensil is used, place it in the hot water. Washing of these articles will be greatly simplified.

Q. How can I prevent custard from burning while boiling?

A. Try adding a half teaspoonful of cornstarch to it. Adding little salt prevents drying and causes the pot and improves the flavor.

Q. How can I mend broken china?

A. Stir plaster of Paris into the beaten white of an egg, to the consistency of paste.
