TO STOP BAD COUGH

SOOTH DRY, IRRITATED THROAT WITH PARMENT SYRUP SAYS THIS OLD FASHIONED COUGH MEDICINE IS THE BEST.

We are told that the old time remedies are best and invariably contain less harmful yet better medicine than those which are in use today. This being so, undoubtedly the following old fashioned recipe which is quick acting will be welcome by many, as there seems to be a regular epidemic of coughs at the present time. Secure from your druggist 1 ounce Parment (double strength), take this home and add to it a quarter pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar, stir until dissolved. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day. No more racking your whole body with a cough. Closed nostrils should open, air passages of your head should clear and your breathing become easy. Parment syrup is pleasant to take, easy to prepare and costs little. Every person who has a stubborn cough, hard cold or catarrh in any form should give this prescription a trial.

Any druggist can supply you, a bottle will be sent on receipt of 75c postal note or money order. Address: International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St. Montreal, Canada.

EXCELSIOR MONTHLY.—The Excelsior Monthly for February, just issued, is fully up to the high standard of previous numbers. The girl pupils of Prince Street school to whom the public are indebted for this breezy little sheet, are to be congratulated on the success they have made in the field of juvenile journalism. The original matter is excellent, much of it showing decidedly literary merit. A contribution by Miss Berna Huestis and a number of clever limericks by Miss Edith Stanley are worthy of special mention, while the social notes, jokes, personals and locals by others of the editorial and reportorial staff will no doubt be enjoyed by those who are good-naturedly hit.

No man or woman should hobble painfully about because of corns when so certain a relief is at hand as Holloway's Corn Cure.

SEARCHLIGHTS FOR THE ALLIES. Women As Engineers.

Lady Parsons gave a lecture at the Women's Institute on women's prospects in engineering, says a London Exchange. The lecturer having pointed out how the shortage of munitions suddenly opened wide the doors of engineering works to women, said that women very soon found themselves able to do all the ordinary plain machine work required for the turning of shells. They did not mind lifting heavy shells or the rather disagreeable task of filling shells with high explosive. They could turn the shell body, centre and bore the shells, curve, wave, and finish the shell bases. They were soon able to turn out a large output of work. In some special shops their output, when they were working the same machines as the men under the same conditions, was often greater than the output of men who had been working all their lives. Having got so far with ease and satisfaction, women found themselves up against unexpected difficulties owing to the trade union rules forbidding them to set the tools in their own machines. But since then events had moved very quickly, and in shops all over England women were now setting and grinding tools after only a few weeks' practice.

The enterprising experiment was started in the autumn of 1915 by a firm in the North of England. Selected girls were admitted to learn experimental work, and they learned to the specially skilled work very quickly. They set up their own work in the lathes and milling machines and set and grind tools. They could centre and finish off the numerous and diverse metal parts allotted to them. They could make a beautiful job of the silver soldering work required in the shops. One or two were testing dynamometers and flashing electric engines. Two or three were learning to design from the rough sketch, a far more difficult work than the ordinary tracing. The girls could back the mirrors and do all the numerous finishing processes required for the reflectors used in enormous quantities for the searchlights of ourselves, and all our Allies on every front in every sea and for searching the skies for Zeppelins.

Women were now employed by thousands by the large armament firms in all the shops where projectiles were made. One single shop might be 700 ft. to 1,000 ft. long and in shape nearly square, the floor space divided into streets and groups of machines, and in every street in every shop women would be working at their machines. It was a growing practice when a new shop was started to put in it all the better sort of girls, the most refined, the most physically fit, and those who appeared to be the best educated. An educated girl could now quite easily serve some months in an engineering shop, learning at different lathes and machines, gaining experience in actual work and becoming familiar with the ways and characteristics of busy shops. She came into contact with practical people, and by keeping on the alert she had many opportunities for picking up a general idea of shop management.

The work women were doing in engineering works fell generally into two main lines—work on projectiles and work in engineering shops. Shell turning had become, from the immense quantities required, a repetition work. Here some very stong and very capable women were earning large sums of money that sounded rather like fairy tales when the actual sums earned first became known. As much as £9 and £10 a week was earned in some cases. Women were engaged in numerous skilled processes in the milling and machining of parts of gun mechanism, and the tool stores, a highly important part of the machine shop, were also sometimes in the charge of women. The lathes, milling machines, glass cutting, and grinding machines must be provided with an immense array of their own special tools, ready for use and easy to find. Bright, quick girls were appreciated in this department, and they thoroughly enjoyed the novel sort of "shopkeeping." In order to increase the supply of technically trained men and women at a quicker rate than could be produced in busy shops, established workshops were being established in most large towns. There was an increasing demand for educated women who could work and set up a lathe, and in some districts a much larger number of educated girls than had offered themselves were required to train for firms ready to employ them.

WOMEN'S OVERALLS A BLESSING OF WAR

(New York Times.) Overalls for women! Overalls of chambray, overalls of soft cotton, overalls in stripes, checks, white, blues or khaki or of black satin—yet overalls none the less—have been announced for sale by one of the largest overall manufacturing firms in the country which heretofore has devoted its output to men only. Henceforth it will produce bifurcated garments of special design for feminine wear, and already, it was said yesterday, orders were coming in from all over the country for the new costume. They were from department stores which plan to sell overalls to housekeepers, servants, and women who do work of sorts for which skirts have disadvantages long obvious.

Had Chronic Indigestion Thought She Would Die

After Years of Suffering Attributes Cure to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Eating too much or using foods that do not agree are the usual causes of indigestion. The trouble usually begins not in the stomach, but in the liver, since it devolves on this organ to filter the excess waste matter from the system. Now, since Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the greatest of liver regulators, they are unexcelled as a cure for chronic indigestion. With the liver, kidneys and bowels active the poisonous waste matter is quickly removed from the system and there is nothing to interfere with the organs of digestion. In this way only can lasting cures be effected.

Mrs. Rebecca Elliott, Magnetawan, Ont., writes:—I feel it my duty to write you in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I had gastritis of the stomach for three years, and could get nothing to stop it until I tried

JEST A MAN.

He wasn't no great shakes of a man— Just an ordinary kind of a cuss; He never made no noise in the world And never kicked up no fuss. But he alwuz wore a pleasant face And spoke a kind word to everyone, And it seemed, when you met him anywhere Like he carried a gleam o' the morn' in 'em.

Had Chronic Indigestion Thought She Would Die

After Years of Suffering Attributes Cure to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I would have an attack of this trouble with my stomach every three or four weeks, and was so bad at times that my friends thought I would surely die. Thanks to these pills, I have not had an attack for six months and believe that the cure is thorough. My husband has had very satisfactory experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. He was much run down, and very pale and weak. I persuaded him to use the Nerve Food, and after having taken five boxes he looks and feels real well. It is such experience as these, that have made a place for Dr. Chase's medicines in the great majority of homes. They do not fail, even in the most complicated cases. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co. Limited, Toronto.

That took him an' stood him back on his feet. They never built no monument to him. They never give him no meed o' praise; They only laid him away in the ground. Where sooner or later all men lays. But them that had always known him best. That know'd how hard for the right he'd strive, 'Coudn't say nothin' better about him dead. Then they'd always said when he was alive.

He was never called a Christian man, He never know'd the meanin' o' fame. For there wasn't no great, heroic deed That ever got coupled with his name. But many a soul that was burdened with grief Was lightened and healed of its smart.

And I ruther think that the power in his life Was the spirit of Christ in his heart.

THE SONG OF THE LAZY FARMER WHEN ITS HOT

You ought to see my neighbor boy get his third alfalfa crop inside the barn before it rains and spoils the stuff for all his pains. Before he got his corn all in that fellow started to begin to get the rust crop stowed away; he spends his life a making hay. Before he got his corn laid by the second crop was most knee-high, fore he got his pitch hay in the sun be- Now that it's fall and time to rest, he's got a third crop of that pest, he'll burn his neck and strain his back to get the blamed stuff in the stack. I've got a better scheme, by gee, I sit and rest, beneath the tree, when I see a hundred in the shade, the sight of work makes me afraid. My blue-aint is all burned up now, there ain't no clover in the now, the cows are lowing for some grass, and Jane Mirandy says "Alas, if this keeps on those cows will fail to wet the bottom of the pail. A thing like that don't worry me, the milkin' is easier by gee! The less they give, the better 'tix, for its too hot to milk, zee- whiz, I wouldn't work away and sweat for all the milk that neighbor gets by feeding his alfalfa hay, or cutting fodder day by day. I'll never labor like that man; I'd rather sit and smoke and fan!
