Vital Elements Found in Milk

MILK is an excellent food for most people. I realize, however, that there are many people who do not enjoy its flavor, and some find it is indigestible. If the former is the case, the taste may be readily changed by taking it in a hot cereal beverage or a cup of chocolate. If, on the other hand, you are one who finds milk difficult to digest, my advice is that you modify it in some way so as to promote its digestibility.

Scientists have recently discovered that tapioca added to milk makes it more easily digested. The tapioca breaks up the milk curds, making them three times more fluffy than ordinary milk curds. To prepare milk in this way, take a quantity of tapioca—the quick cooking kind is best—and cook it in a double boiler, stirring frequently. It should cook for 25 to 30 minutes. When the tapioca has reached the consistency of a jelly, it is ready to introduce into the milk. Use a teaspoonful or two for each glass and stir until dissolved.

THE PRACTICAL IMPORTANCE OF PURITY OF VARIETY

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The importance of using seed which is pure as to variety is measured to a considerable extent by the purpose for which the resulting crop is intended. If the crop in question is to be used for feeding purposes, especially on the home farm, a slight mixture or even a considerable mixture of other kinds or varieties may not be a serious matter so long as these varieties are of kinds mature with the main crop and possess high productivity and quality. There are a number of varieties on the market which do not differ widely in regard to these matters and which will, therefore, not be particularly objectionable if mixed to some extent with the main crop. On the other hand it is a risky business to continue the use of seed which is not at least relatively pure. In the first place most districts are particularly adapted to certain varieties, which varieties, one year with another, are likely to yield better returns than are others. To allow an admixture of varieties which are of a lower order is to run the risk of reducing the value of the crop.

Even ripening in a crop of grain is something which practical men recognize to be a matter of very considerable importance. Where seed contains a mixture of other varieties which do not mature in the same length of time as the main crop, there is liable to be a lack of uniformity in ripeness of the crop harvested. Such a condition may result in a reduction in the value of the said crop.

Where impure varieties are used for any considerable length of time certain undesirable types included in the mixture may increase in proportion to the better types for various seasons. They may, for instance, mature a little later than the prevailing type and thus cause the harvesting operations to be delayed until they become sufficiently well matured. By that time the better type may be dead ripe and may shell out considerably in the handling.

In the case of wheat grown for milling purposes, purity of variety is particularly important, as in this

Lang's Labor Government

(By British United Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., July 22.—After a stormy two years in office the Lang Labor Government in New South Wales is committed to a dissolution of Parliament by August. This makes the climax of a bitter faction fight in the Labor party which has undone practically 30 years' work of building up.

In May, 1925, John T. Lang was returned to office with an absolute majority of four in a Legislative Assembly of 40 members. His Nationalists, nine members of the Country party, and two Independents, Lang gradually came more and more under the influence of the extremist section of his party headed by Arthur G. Willis, secretary of the Coal Miners Federation, and a member of Lang's Ministry. Lang gained the enmity of country and moderate members of his party by introducing an extreme industrial week, high workers' compensation, and other so-called "humanitarian" acts. These he drove through the Lower House, or Legislative Assembly, but they were toned down by the Legislative Council, the no Lang's Upper House.

HOWE BAY SCHOOL

On Thursday afternoon, June 30th, a number of the rate-payers of Howe Bay School district met at the school to witness the annual examination and to celebrate in a brief manner, the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation.

The school was nicely decorated for the occasion with flags and bouquets.

The pupils were examined in the different subjects by their teacher, Miss Mary Lannigan, and by their ready answers showed that they had been carefully trained.

The following program appropriate to celebrate Confederation, was rendered by the pupils.

Opening chorus—Island Hymn. A speech of welcome by Loraine Coffin.

Recitation—(A song of Canada) by Clara MacDonald.

Recitation—(Mary Ann) by Florence Mills.

Recitation—(Our Flag) by Flaw junior pupils.

Drill—(Canada East and West), by eleven pupils.

Recitation—(There is a Land) by Violet Coffin.

Essay on Confederation by Rena Mills.

Essay on Canada's Sixty Years of Progress, by Mabel Keefe.

The teacher, in a few remarks, explained the steps leading to Confederation, emphasizing the fact that P. E. Island is called the "Cradle of Confederation." The distribution of medals to the school children followed this.

Public school certificates were then awarded to Miss Mary C. MacDonald and Miss Lyle Mills. The pupils who led in the different grades were awarded prizes by the teacher, and a prize for attendance was awarded to Miss Laura MacDonald.

At the close of the examination the teacher was presented with a nice gift and an address was read to her by Miss Madel Keeffe in behalf of the pupils.

The teacher thanked the pupils for their nice gift and the visitors for the interest shown and then treated them to candy.

After some remarks by the chairman and others the very pleasant afternoon came to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Visisection of Plants

(By British United Press.)

LONDON, July 22.—That experiments on plants will supersede vivisection is foreshadowed by Sir Wright, which completely upsets the normal reaction and therefore destroys the value of experiment. On Jagadis C. Bose, Indian scientist.

"The time will come," he said, "when most experiments will be carried out on plants. In the case of animals there is the factor of a plant we can make the reactions from drugs or any stimuli as natural as possible."

If you want pastry to be light and flaky, roll in one direction only. If rolled first in one direction and then in the other it is sure to be tough.

case uniformity of ripening has a direct bearing upon the commercial grade. Thus, where there is a difference of even a few days in the date of maturity of different types in the wheat field the later types may be sufficiently prominent in the sample to cause a reduction of at least one grade. The practical importance of purity of variety is coming to be much more widely recognized than it once was, although there is still plenty of evidence that it does not receive the attention that it should, by a considerable percentage of grain growers. Absolute purity, of course, is difficult to maintain on an extensive scale, but if an honest effort be made to use seed which is known to be at least relatively pure very considerable losses

HARTSVILLE SCHOOL

The annual examination of Hartsville School was held on June 29th with a full attendance of pupils and a large number of visitors. The pupils were examined in the various subjects by their teacher, Miss Frances Bradley, and showed by their ready and correct answers that they had been carefully trained.

Public school certificates were presented to Mary Murray and Evelyn MacKenzie, and prizes for spelling matches in Grades I, II, IV, V, and VI to Johnnie MacLeod, Lillian MacLeod, Borden MacLeod, Alex. MacKenzie and Julia MacLeod respectively. The prize for History in Grade VII was awarded to Evelyn MacKenzie and in Grades IX and X was equally merited by Max MacLeod, Bessie MacKenzie and Eugene Murray, drawn by Bessie MacKenzie.

An address was read by one of the senior pupils and another presented the teacher with a well filled purse.

Miss Bradley thanked the pupils for their gift and address and the people of Hartsville for their kindness shown to her.

Remarks were then made by several of the rate payers complimenting the pupils on their work and expressing regret at the teacher's departure.

The pupils and visitors were treated to candy and a successful examination was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

The following is the address: Miss Frances Bradley.

Dear Teacher:—We the pupils of Hartsville School, learn with deep regret of your intended departure from our midst in the very near future. We feel we cannot let this opportunity pass upon you, the sorrow we experience at your departure. By the constant devotion and cheerful spirit in which you discharged your duties, you have won the affection of all our hearts. It is only now as you go from our midst, we realize how trying we have been at times. It is not necessary for us to recount the many ways in which we shall miss you. We ask you to accept this little gift not for its intrinsic value, but as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held, accompanied as it is by our very best wishes for prosperity and happiness in your chosen sphere.

These are the wishes of your pupils of Hartsville School.
