Roosevelt Engages Smith in Hot Battle For Governor of N. Y.

(United Press)

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—New York's gubernatorial campaign, which impartial observers concede is the most hotly contested in years, has attracted national attention because of the prominence of the two leading candidates—Governor Alfred E. Smith and Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. Other Democratic national leaders, including Mr. Roosevelt, former assistant secretary of the navy, are also in the race.

Although the issues involved are mainly state ones, the campaign between one of the most popular men who ever sat in the governor's chair at Albany and the son of the former president has been closely watched by the Democratic and Republican national leaders.

Governor Smith, seeking a third term, has made his campaign solely on his record in office. When eliminated as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president he let it be known that he would not seek re-nomination for governor. He explained he had given many of his best years to the state and that he would welcome a respite from office.

As the weeks sped by however, the demands that he again head the state ticket became so insistent that he finally yielded. When the assembled state convention nominated by acclamation, Governor Roosevelt, known as "Young Teddy," whose name went before the Republican state convention at Rochester as one of several favorites for the nomination, overcame a victor on his first ballot, and thus after 20 years another Roosevelt is running for governor of New York.

enforcement act, and promised to work for re-adoption of a state law in conformity with the Volstead act.

Governor Smith has maintained that his department consolidation scheme, insofar as it has been put into effect by the joining of the highway department, the department of public works and the department of public buildings, has saved the state $800,000. Other consolidations, he has declared, were prevented by a Republican Assembly, which also blocked his efforts for a "more business-like administration of the state's business affairs." He also has pointed out that the Democratic regime has reduced income and property taxes by 25 per cent.

The biographies of Colonel Roosevelt and Governor Smith have almost nothing in common. The former, popularly known as "Al," was born 21 years ago on New York's lower East Side—he was literally raised on the sidewalk of New York. He left school when he was 13 years old to support his mother. Fighting against the heavy odds which are placed in the way of a boy who grows up in such surroundings, he has risen to the governorship and is known as "the champion vote getter of New York."

Colonel Roosevelt lives in Oyster Bay, his father's home. He is 37 years old, but does not look it. He holds a B. A. and an honorary M. A. from Harvard, his father's alma mater. Like the first "T. R.," he earned his rank in war, fighting in the world conflict first as a captain in the British Army and later as a major in the Twenty-sixth U. S. Infantry, of which he subsequently became lieutenant colonel. He was wounded in action and holds several decorations.

The parallel between father and son extends to personality. Frank W. Mondell, former representative from Wyoming, who accompanied the nominee on part of his tour of the state, said Colonel Roosevelt's mannerisms and appearance reminded him constantly of the late president. He has the Roosevelt smile, the Roosevelt face and the Roosevelt voice. One of the newspaper correspondents with the Roosevelt party on its whirlwind tour of the state, a man who stumped with T. R., Sr., in 1898, said he could close his eyes while the candidate spoke and readily imagine that the leader of the Rough Riders was in action once more.

father was." He asks their support on the basis of his own ability.

Both Governor Smith and Colonel Roosevelt have made extensive tours of the state. The Republican candidate, however, was the more ambitious, for he made a three weeks' trip covering all sections. On his schedule were more than 200 speeches, many of them near platform talks in small towns.

The governor, handicapped at the outset of his active campaign by an attack of rheumatism that necessitated the cancellation of his speaking tour for John W. Davis, Democratic presidential nominee, swung into action more than a week after Roosevelt had started. His itinerary took him through southern, western and central territories, where he delivered several speeches.

Governor Smith's popularity is attested by the size of the vote given him in the record breaking Republican year 1920. In that election the late President Harding carried the state by more than 1,000,000 votes, yet Nathan L. Miller, the Republican gubernatorial candidate, defeated Smith by a plurality of only 75,000. In 1922 Smithswamped Miller by a plurality of nearly 400,000. Smith was first elected governor in 1918, when he was elected over former Governor Charles S. Whitman by a substantial plurality.

Sweden Ready To Supply United States With Lumber

(United Press)

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 2.—A new and important item may soon be added to the export trade from Sweden to America, according to statements in the press by a Swedish lumber expert, the government forester, Mr. Juhlin-Dannfelt, who has returned here after an extended tour of the United States as an exchange scholar under the auspices of the American Scandinavian Foundation.

Coins of Period of Roman Rule Over Britain Dug Up

(United Press)

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Interest in excavation of Roman remains seems to be receiving new impetus in many parts of England and work being carried on at Portland on the Somerset seaboard is yielding highly important results.

Those excavating and their beginning after a ploughman casually turned up a small quantity of coins which upon examination were found to be of Roman origin. The work has now been taken in hand by an archaeologist, R. E. Godwin, who reports the recovery of no fewer than 4,000 coins.

"I have already found 4,000 bronze coins," said Mr. Godwin, "and stray ones are being added from day to day. They are in excellent preservation and date from A. D. 22 to A. D. 400 (21 years before the Roman conquest of Britain to just before the final evacuation.)"

"They belong to practically every period of the Roman Empire, and it is remarkable that apparently no two are exactly alike. The field in which I am working was used by the ancient Britons as a camp, and this was afterwards taken over by the Romans."

Repentant Executioner Turns To Peddling Rugs

(United Press)

TIFLIS, Russia, Nov. 2.—One of the most remarkable and notorious characters in Russia is a Russian-German named Nicholas Shuman, who is called "the Commissioner of Death" by the natives of Georgia. He derives this sinister title from the fact that for a long time he was the official executioner of the dreaded Cheka in southern Russia. His victims ran into the thousands.

to rug-selling in the bazaars of Tiflis. He may be seen any day or other foreign visitors to the Georgian capital. He is easily identified by the natives by the fact that his harsh, determined face is marked by a deep scar, the result of a violent attack with a huge iron spike by an aggrieved Georgian whose friends Shuman had put to death.

"I killed those people," said Shuman to the correspondent, "because it was my duty as official executioner for the government to do so. I could never have done it in my personal capacity. I am repentant and want to forget the past. I want to develop my other side. Do you think there is any chance for me in America as a rug merchant? I hear you have much money there. I will take a part of it for my rugs."
