THE home of T. Major and Mrs. Howatt, Coleman, is saddened by the death of their little boy, Donald Claude, aged seventeen months, which occurred Monday, April 10th, of pneumonia. "Suffer little children to come unto Me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." The corpse was taken by rail to Cape Traverse on Tuesday accompanied by Mr. Howatt and some friends to the residence of his brother Robert, where the funeral left, Wednesday, for the Church of Scotland Cemetery. Rev. Jas McDougall conducted the service. Mr. and Mrs. Howatt have the sympathy of many friends in the loss of their beloved one and wish to publicly express thanks to their friends in Coleman for their many kindnesses during their bereavement and especially to Mrs. John C. Clarke, Cape Traverse, who visited and remained with them doing all that loving hands could do till the end came.

ON Thursday night last Crapaud was awakened from its long winter's slumber beneath the many snow-banks. As the shades of night were falling upon this quiet and picturesque village, the young people of Crapaud and vicinity were wending their way with a light heart and contented mind to the residence of John Williams, the occasion being a farewell party to Garfield Williams on his departure for Seattle, Wash. All came together with the one object in view, viz, to give Garfield a send off such as was never before tendered a departing citizen. As the clock was striking the hour of eight Mr. Profitt with his violin in hand took his seat in the dance room, and under his careful manipulation poured forth strains of music in his usual effective manner. The young men were all anxious to take advantage of the first dance, and in a short time the "ball was set a rolling" and all were dancing merrily the grand old Saratoga Lancers. At twelve o'clock repast was served in the hostess' able manner. After the inner man was refreshed dancing was resumed with all the old time vigor of the rising generation. The event was brought to a close by all singing "For he is a jolly good fellow." After wishing Mr. Williams success in his new home the crowd dispersed. The special features of the evening were step dancing by George McDonald and the sword dance by Russel Stordy which was executed in his usual pleasing style and heartily enjoyed by all.
