The DOOM TRAIL

by ARTHUR D. HOWDEN SMITH AUTHOR OF PORTO BELLO GOLD ETC. COPYRIGHT BY BRENTANO

"'Tis the altar of the False Faces," she murmured. "None but the Ga-go-sa will dare to follow us through the woods."

"Was that your thought?" I questioned. "No, I was helpless. 'Twas the Mistress—she bade me call her Ga-ha-no—thought of everything."

"What of Ga-ha-no?" he demanded sternly. She glanced fearfully backward along the way we had come.

"We may not stay," she answered rapidly. "I will talk as we run. Oh haste, haste or all will be lost!"

"There is no other way. I will have learned much since my coming here, Master Ormerod, and amongst other things, to think the less harshly of you."

"For that I am thankful," I replied, "but sure, you must let us take you back to Port Orange. Governor Burnet will care for you."

"It cannot be," she insisted. "My place is here. Wicked as they be, these men here—and he who is called my father is not the cleanest of them—they work in a good cause."

"I burst of ferocious yelling came from the heart of the pine wood. 'They have seen traces of us in the open space by the altar,' interrupted Ta-wan-ne-ars."

"She said that if you asked for her I was to tell you to forget Ga-ha-no, that she was unworthy of your memory. But you were to believe that what she did for you tonight was in preparation for her first great wrong."

"He bowed his head. 'And oh, Ta-wan-ne-ars,' she went on impulsively, 'she pays a bitter price. Forgive her.'"

"Say this to Ga-ha-no," he answered. "Say Ta-wan-ne-ars thinks of her as a Lost Soul, tarrying for a while with Ata-en-sic, and in the end he will come for her and bring her home again to his lodge. Say that Ta-wan-ne-ars never forgets."

"He raised his right arm in the gesture of farewell and stepped into the current of the stream. 'We part once more, Marjorie,' I said, offering my hand."

"For certain words I have spoken to you, I am sorry," she said. "I know more now. You may be my enemy, but I believe you not to be a traitor."

"Thank you. And is that all you have to say to me?" "That is all," she replied softly, withdrawing my hand.

"I will not leave you," I cried, and made to walk with her along the trail. But she pushed me back. "Please go, Master Ormerod," she said.

"I captured her hand again and carried it to my lips. 'My name is Harry,' I answered. 'And I have never forgotten the song in the cabin of the New Venture.'"

"Thank you, Harry," she returned with a trill of elfin laughter. "And I do assure you I know other songs. With that she was gone. Yet I had a feeling I had never known before that she was still with me, and I stepped into the water with joy in my heart."

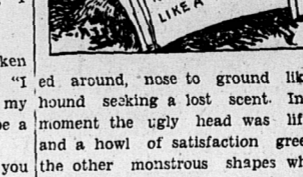

A score of paces down the bank I found Ta-wan-ne-ars, and we crouched under the pendant branches of a willow to see what would happen, muskets primed and ready.

The yelling in the wood increased in volume as the False Faces followed the course we had taken by broken branches and footprints in the pine-mold. A misshapen figure with the head of some fabled beast squattered into the trail and galloped.

"Ah, sir," whined the beggar, "it's sad to be old and bent." "I daresay," replied the callous young man, "but it's almost as bad to be young and broke."

"The healing oils in Catarrhose instantly destroy the germs that inflame the nose and throat. Irritable throat and bronchitis are soothed away. Stuffed-up nostrils are cleared of nasty discharges and pain ailments such as Catarrh, nasty coughs and colds never bother people who keep their breathing organs in healthy condition by the use of Catarrhose. The inhaler can be carried in your purse or vest pocket—use it when the first sniffle or sneeze appears. Many a bad cold is stopped in this way."

"Your daughter tells me that your wife is having her voice cultivated." "Yes. Did she tell you that the rest of us were growing wild?"

ed around, nose to ground like a hound seeking a lost scent. In a moment the ugly head was lifted, and a howl of satisfaction greeted the other monstrous shapes which joined it. The whole pack gave tongue and vanished up the trail after Marjorie.

Ta-wan-ne-ars waited to give the staggards time to appear, then rose and led the way along the bed of the stream westward.

"Your daughter tells me that your wife is having her voice cultivated." "Yes. Did she tell you that the rest of us were growing wild?"

DUELLING COMMON IN EARLY REGIME

MONTREAL, April 8.—(By The Canadian Press)—Duels in the Province of Quebec under British rule were recently described by Aegedius Fauteux, president of the Historical Society of Montreal. He said more than 70 duels recorded in historical documents, memoirs or newspapers were fought in Lower Canada from about 1760 to the time the practice was abolished. In the early years of the British rule in the Province of Quebec, people proved to be most sensitive on matters relating to private life, honor and dignity.

Mr. Fauteux pointed out the practice of challenging an enemy to a duel was almost limited in the early years of the British regime to military officers. The practice had undoubtedly been retained from the French regime, a code of honor fixing in advance the action of the officer receiving the challenge. Any officer being ordered to fight and trying to avoid it had his promotion cancelled and was degraded in the eyes of his fellow-officers. These duels were fought with pistols, many of them at Windmill Point at daybreak, or later at various points near the forts on St. Sulpice properties, or else on that part of the island of Montreal now known as Fletcher's Field. The first duel recorded under the British rule took place between two young French-Canadians at Boucherville on August 17, 1789.

Only a small number of duels fought in the Province of Quebec had a tragic end, the speaker claimed, one being Samuel Holland, officer in the 60th Regiment who fought Captain Sheds, the latter remaining on the field, and one in 1838 between Robert Sweeney and Major John R. Ward. The two men being well known in Montreal, public opinion was aroused at the death of Major Ward in the duel and loud protests were heard from all over the population. Holland used a pistol given his father by General Wolfe.

Mr. Fauteux mentioned the fact that mostly all the best known political leaders at that time defended their honor with the pistol.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions? Do you know why external remedies do not give quick and permanent relief.

Why cutting does not remove the cause? Do you know the cause of Piles is internal?

That there is congestion of blood in the lower bowel—the veins flabby, the parts almost dead?

Do you know that there is a harmless internal remedy for itching, bleeding or protruding piles discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID that is guaranteed?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause. It stimulates the circulation in the lower bowel—drives out the thick impure blood, heats and restores the affected parts. This remedy has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sufferers.

Don't waste time on external remedies or think of an operation until you have tried a bottle of HEM-ROID tablets—Hughes Drug Co. guarantees money back if they do not end Piles in any form.
