Helpful Hints For The Women Folk

WHY GROWL?

Why growl at the wind? Let it bluster all day. Why growl at the cobwebs? Twirl them away. Why growl at the rain? Drenching meadow and street? It's the pure blessed rain That makes everything sweet!

FASHION FLASHES

Extremely pale pearly shades in hair, to match strings of pearls are being worn. For daytime, Le-groux made a tiny oval pillbox of rough creamy pailles on a matching satin butterfly bow at back and swathes of matching veiling. For evening, same tiny oval is worn in palest pink tulle from Moynex, with a tric of small pink roses in a prim row at back.

Combinations of gray and yellow in check tweed suits confirm Easter reports that the e colors are big for sports. Jackets in wrist-bone length or a couple of inches shorter, skirts 16 to 17 inches off the ground with group of narrow box pleats at front and back or slight flares, is the favorite treatment.

Another new-looking fashion seen this week is a black and cream straw handbag like a fisherman's basket, with black velvet ribbon handle, carried with a simple black tailored suit and an enormous black felt profile breton hat and a big creamy quill laid against the upturned brim.

Checked gingham and polka-dotted cotton dress with tiny canoliers or pillowcases with handkerchiefs draped covering the hair at back and tied high over the crown at top.

DOING YOUR OWN DECORATING

Are you going to try your hand at re-decorating this spring? If so, here are some hints. Mix up a gum and hot water in a pail and sponge the old wallpaper with it; the paper will peel off in large pieces very easily. Remember that two coats of strong water glass painted over a damp wall and allowed to dry before re-papering will prevent any damp from penetrating. Each coat must dry before the next is applied.

Your Income Increases With Wise Budgeting

Allow For Pleasures, Too

Another budget dividend for Tom and Mary! This month it's a swish spring formal for HER. Last month it was a Tennis Club membership for HIM.

How do they manage these jolly splurges when Tom's income stays the same? They estimate expenses ahead, follow wise buying tips—the two simple rules for successful budgeting.

When they divided their income, they added two new spending departments. Splurges come out of a Recreation Fund. And each has a Personal Care Fund to dip into for grooming, wardrobe upkeep.

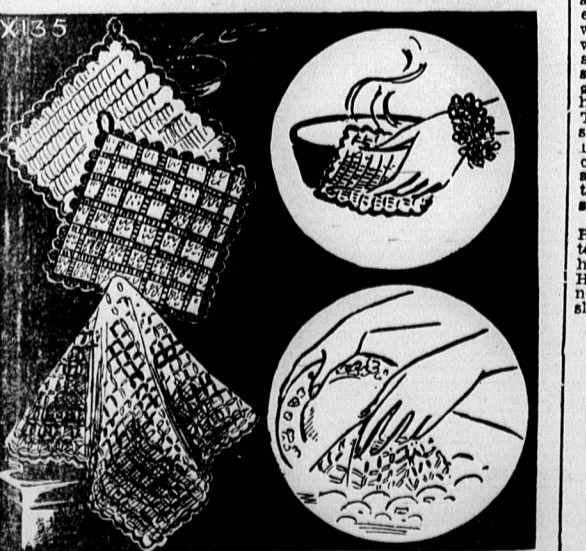

The money for these special funds comes from savings on two big items, CLOTHING and FOOD. Shopping for clothes, Mary cleverly sticks to one or two basic colors, brightens her wardrobe with crisp blouses, jaunty hats, gay clips and belts. Planning meals, she first buys protective foods—milk, butter, eggs, vegetables, fruits. Then she rounds out the menu with meats, breads, cereals and sweets.

Follow the practical budget plan in our 32-page booklet. Shows how to divide your income to get what you want most. Has pointers on wise buying; ruled pages for a year's entries.

Morse's Teas Of Utmost Garden Freshness

No tea can have greater garden freshness than MORSE'S TEAS. Grade for grade they have the very utmost in this way that is possible. This will be understood when it is known that Halifax, which is the home of MORSE'S TEAS, is the nearest port of call on this continent for steamers coming tea laden from the East. The consequence is that teas available for making up into the various blends of MORSE'S TEAS in the very minimum of time after leaving the tea gardens of India and Ceylon.

To-day's Morse's Standard Tea—"The Good Old Family Tea of the Maritimes"—is available in all grocery stores at 65 cents per lb. and Morse's Selected Orange Pekoe is sold from 5 cents to 15 cents per lb. Below tea claiming to be of equal quality. These brands are undoubtedly the best value in tea today. Taking into account the extra work duty placed on tea, there has been no time for many years that such value has been obtainable.

Southern Atlantic Legacy

By SYDNEY PARKMAN

"A strange man!" he muttered to himself as he looked at the man who came by—and where he keeps it. He crumpled the piece of paper and threw it into the waste paper basket at his side. Not in Carbonaras, evidently," he concluded, and turned his attention to the pile of documents he had just received. Oddly enough, he was not the only person in the building who was thinking of his late client at that moment.

Outside, at the teller's counter, a lean, yellow-faced man in overalls had been chatting idly with the junior cashier, but the broken off in what he had been saying to follow the captain's burly figure into the street with his eyes, and had then turned to the cashier with a curious puzzled expression on his face.

"Who was that, Juan?" he asked, nodding towards the entrance and speaking in Spanish.

The cashier—a spruce young man with elaborately smoothed and oiled hair—looked mysterious.

"Ah, that is quite a question, amigo," he said. "I know his name, but I don't know much about him. He is a certain Captain Salter."

The other man's eyes brightened with recollection, and he brought his hand down with a slap on the counter.

"Who is it?" he exclaimed in English. "Bully Salter. Well, what do you know about that?"

"You know him?" the cashier asked.

"Know him?" the other echoed. "Why we were shipmates at one time. As a pretty lively time it was too! But you're a man to say he lives in these parts?"

"He lives at a little place along the coast about a dozen miles from the eastward. Carbonaras, it is called."

"Does he?" the yellow-faced man said. "What's he doing there? He's not a colono, is he?"

The cashier pursed his lips and shook his head.

"And nor would I be a colono if I had his resources. But you will excuse me, amigo, if I say no more about this man. His affairs are confidential, you will understand."

His friend stared at him for a moment in silence, and then he nodded slowly.

"Why of course," he agreed softly. "I wouldn't want you to get into trouble. But you're a man to say he's interested in that my old shipmate is doing well. Very interesting!"

CHAPTER II PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

As the ship headed into the passage, a steady trade-wind was cut off as though an invisible barrier had been suddenly drawn behind, and she slid forward between the rocky walls with gradually slackening speed.

"Sweep!" Captain Salter ordered, and the two negroes slipped the long oars from their rope buckets and thrust them over the side between the wire shrouds.

Some two hundred yards ahead, the narrow channel widened out into a perfect natural harbour, almost surrounded by steep hills on all sides. Immediately opposite the entrance, a scattered line of small white houses huddled down by the water's edge, with the hillside rising sharply above them in terraces, a steps—the dark green belts of olive groves alternating with the lighter hue of the small cane plantations. The hills swept up to a height of some eight hundred feet, with their upper slopes densely wooded with cedar and mahogany; and above and far beyond these dark ridges, the distant stars towered massively against the evening sky.

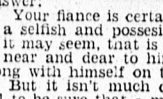

The captain sighed contentedly. He was glad to be back again after his ten days' absence. He had hated the noise and hustle of Havana and the long train journeys, and as the sloop made its slow way across the bay, his eye

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—MARTYR COMPLEX BRINGS ONLY UNHAPPINESS IN MARRIAGE

Too Many Young People Sacrifice Their Futures by Listening to the Appeals of Their Elders

Dear Miss Dix—Can a man sacrifice too much? For two years I have been engaged to a very fine man whom I love dearly, but the goal of our desires, being married and having a home of our own, is no nearer than it was at first. The reason for this is my fiancé's mother-in-law. He had been married and his wife died a month after their little girl was born 11 years ago. His wife's mother took possession of the baby and became so selfishly absorbed in her that he lacks the courage to separate them. She seems to have a hypnotic power over him, making him feel that her life is given up for the sake of the child. But this is not the case, as he has gone everything possible to repay her by giving her luxuries and making her happy, while she has done nothing to make him or her child comfortable. My fiancé insists that he loves me and looks forward to marrying me "some day," but he puts his mother-in-law and her parasite in a home with me and sacrifices me ruthlessly to her, so it makes me doubt his affection. What do you think? K. R. L.

Your fiancé is certainly giving you a rough deal in putting the whims of a selfish, old woman above your happiness, but, strange as it may seem, that is his queer proof of love for you. He feels you are so near and dear to him, so much a part of him, that he orders you up along with himself on the sacrificial altar.

He would have taken them to fame and fortune because Mother didn't want them to leave home.

Girls who gave up the men they wanted because their fathers didn't like them or their politics or their religion, Parents who slaves themselves to death to support lazy children. Half of the parasites in a home waste in the world were made that way by somebody's sacrifices. If they had been compelled to work or serve, they would have been different.

Probably your fiancé is pating himself on the back because he is giving up his happiness in marrying you and always having a home of his own in order not to peeve his old mother-in-law. He doesn't consider that he is blighting your life and doing his child irreparable injury by depriving her of the guidance and association of a modern, up-to-date young woman.

For grandmothers, no matter how conscientious and devoted they are, are not fitted to rear children. They are either too strict or too lax. Their generation and the child's are too far apart to give them a common viewpoint, and the understanding and sympathy, especially the wisdom, they need to deal with modern youth.

What About Men And Beauty Shops?

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am disgusted with my husband. He is forever going to beauty shops for permanent waves and to get his fingernails manicured and his eyebrows plucked. He wears a corset to improve his figure and his lingerie is finer than mine. He says I am beautiful, but he goes for women to do to do, too. What shall I do about it? FAITHFUL READER.

Nothing, unless it is to offer up thanks that you have a husband who is going to beauty shops for permanent waves and to get his fingernails manicured and his eyebrows plucked. He wears a corset to improve his figure and his lingerie is finer than mine. He says I am beautiful, but he goes for women to do to do, too. What shall I do about it?

A Morning Smile

STUMPED

The minister was imploring an old man to repent his sins. "Well," said the old man, "if you will answer me one question, I will come to church."

"What is the question?"

"Who was Cain's wife?"

"My friend," replied the minister, "you will never be able to embrace religion until you stop bothering yourself about other men's wives."

Don't Marry Until You Reach 25

Dear Miss Dix—I am a boy of 19 with two more years to go in high school. I am in love with a girl who is at school. We want to get married, but my mother and father want me to wait until I am about 30 years old before I get married. How old should a man be before he marries? H. L.

I think if boys would wait until they are 25 and knew what their tastes in wives were, it would do more than any one thing to promote happy marriages.

But the matter of age isn't so important in marrying as the ability to support a wife and family, and no schoolboy can do that. He has to dump his wife down on his parents to take care of, and that is a sure way to get on Mom and Dad.

THE DELIVERER

A Pole was passing through Berlin with his small son. The boy saw a statue of Hitler and inquired who he was.

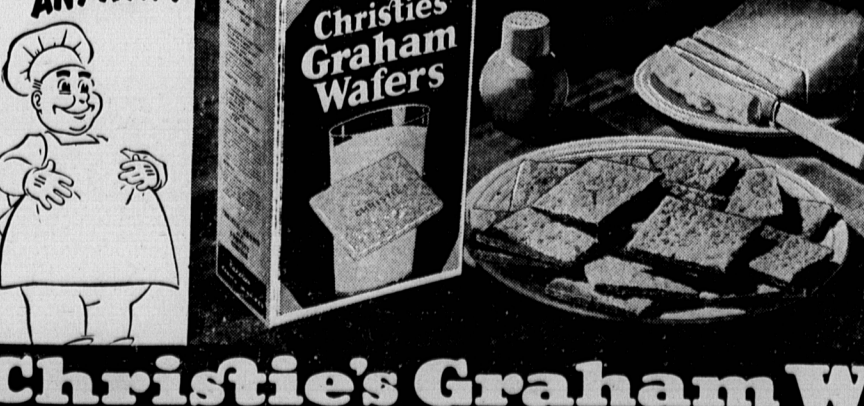

"Who?" he asked, "the man who freed us from our chains?" the father said.

"You know, mother, the god chain and my watch chain."
