Miss Loraine Clow, cutely dressed in pale green organza and Mr. Norris Scott acting the part of the bride and groom, followed the bride to the seat of honor. The gifts of which there was a magnificent display were opened by Miss Etta Clow, Miss Hazel Boyle and Miss Florence Jewell, while the accompanying verses were read by Miss Lillian Scott. Miss Mildred Hyde arranged the gifts on the table. After the gifts the acting bride presented the bride with a bouquet of colored gladioli. Miss Scott made a fitting speech and in her own pleasing manner thanked all for their lovely gifts. After singing "She's a Jolly Good Fellow" the bride-to-be was showered with rice. After lunch was served the remainder of the evening was spent in social intercourse. Music on the violin was furnished by Miss Melvin Scott and on the mouth organ by Vernon Drake. Harold Donahue and Herbert Scott. The evening passed all too soon. And as another day dawned each one wended their way homeward pleased with the night's enjoyment.

Radio To Be Artificial Aurora

(By Howard W. Blakeslee) (Associated Press Science Editor)

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 — A new use for radio, to light the sky 50 miles overhead as brightly as the full moon does, is proposed in nature. British official science journal which arrived here today.

The new light would be an artificial aurora. A single radio station could cover a patch of sky 50 miles in diameter with this light. It would illuminate country roads as well as ordinary lighting systems would and could be used anywhere. Two radio stations, WLW, at Cincinnati, and RV-1 at Moscow, already have the power to make the preliminary tests, says the author of the proposal, Dr. V. A. Bailey, of the University of Sydney.

The principles of the new light are already in operation in laboratories. Dr. Bailey says. One is the glow discharge lamp. Without wires or current, if placed in an electrical field, it gives a brilliant light from gas in the bulb which becomes "excited" by electricity.

The other principle is that of building up vibration by oscillation, like a child's swing that goes higher with each push.

Dr. Bailey says that if properly chosen radio waves are sent up against the ionized layer of air, remarks on the "E layer" which reflects broadcasting signals around the world, the air itself would glow the same as the gas-filled laboratory lamp.

This is because the peculiar "E layer" contains free electrons which Dr. Bailey says are known to be gyrating at a fixed rate. If the radio beam is timed to synchronize with these gyrations, he declares, the electrons will speed up enough to emit light.

Canadian Maples In The Landscape

(Experimental Farms News)

While many persons may think of the maple as one of Canada's national emblems and a tree maker, this tree is only one member of a large family of trees and shrubs which fill a wide range of usefulness in Canadian landscape planting states B. W. Hensley, Horticultural Division, Dominion of Agriculture.

Wherever is it hardy, the native white hard or sugar maple is the best of trees for shade or street planting. Its well balanced shape and tough wood stand up in tough weather. The foliage is excellent throughout the summer and a glorious riot of colour in the fall, when its scarlet and gold may be heightened by the additional crimson of the swamp red maple.

The hard maple has the drawback of being a slow grower, and this fault has caused too frequent planting of its weaker cousin the Norway maple. The latter, while growing more rapidly, and having a fairly pleasing shape, has a much shorter life due to two bad habits; it has ascending branches which form bad crotches, and has a tendency to split with the frost. Both faults permit the easy entry of decay fungi which cause damage and early death. For these reasons the Norway maple should not be recommended except where one of the red or purple leaved varieties, such as Schwedleri or Reitenbachii, is to be used as a lawn specimen, where the foliage is most attractive.

The silver or soft maple makes an attractive shade tree on a large lawn. At maturity its tall spreading form rivals the elm. The foliage is light in colour on the underside which gives the appearance of life in a breeze. Wier's cut leaved variety is a useful tree as a smaller lawn specimen, as its weeping habit breaks the monotony of average round headed trees. The characteristic fall colour of the soft maple is yellow that of Wier's variety silver grey.

Most of the maples unfortunately feed near the surface of the soil so that they frequently damage lawns more than trees which root deeply. This can usually be overcome by liberal watering and fertilizing so that the ground can support both tree and grass.

The Manitoba maple or box elder is the hardiest and most rapid grower of the family. But it should have no place in any planting scheme in a section of the country where good trees can be grown. The planter gets quick results but it is a case of plant in hate and repent at leisure as this tree rapidly becomes a weed.

Then there are the smaller forms. The Tartarian and Amur maples are useful small trees or shrubs for large shrubby masses where their neat summer foliage is attractive and their crimson and scarlet blaze a fall spectacle. The Japanese maple has many forms with cut and varicoloured foliage, many of them are attractive shrubs as lawn specimens but unfortunately they can only be grown in very limited areas where the climate is lenient.

NEW ROBOT TO AID AIRPLANE

(By DEVON FRANCIS Associated Press Aviation Editor)

NEW YORK, Oct. 13—(AP)—A new Robot of this mechanical age, which virtually takes an airplane by the nose and leads it to its destination, may become an adjunct to the United States National Defence in spotting enemy warships.

The device called an automatic direction finder, was turned loose, bloodhound-like, on Long Island today, and within 20 minutes had spotted one of a low-power radio station which a naval reserve unit had hidden near Valley Stream. Mounted on a truck, the sending station had been parked under the eaves of a hangar.

Taking flight from Floyd Bennett airport, the crew of a commercial airliner equipped with the new direction finder was instructed to find the sending set. Its wave length was provided the searchers.

The pilot turned a knob which tuned the device to the proper wave length. A needle on a dial swung around to indicate the direction in which the quarry lay. The pilot, who by this time had flown almost 40 miles in the opposite direction, set his plane on the line of flight indicated by the needle.

The navy truck not only was found but was photographed for evidence.

Borrero sent his request to the International Commission which successfully arbitrated Bolivia's Chan Chaco dispute with Paraguay.

This Good Customer buys liberally from the MARITIMES

Industrial Canada imports food for its workers as well as raw materials for its manufacturers, from every province of the Dominion.

Take the Automotive Industry, for instance. There are over 130,000 people directly dependent on this industry, and they form a huge home market for Canadian products. The industry itself and the "parts", (steel, paint, glass, and other industries dependent or semi-dependent on it), form one of the biggest groups of industrial consumers in the country.

The Maritimes ship thousands of tons of coal, steel, iron, lumber, fish, potatoes, fruit and manufactured supplies to the cities and towns of their sister provinces where automotive and associated industrial plants are located — an outstanding example of the interdependence of all parts of Canada with each other and proof of the fact that a busy Automotive Industry is helpful to the whole Dominion.

Western And Serial At The Capitol

Charles Starrett, one of the screen's most capable and most popular Western stars comes to the Capitol Theatre today in his best picture to date "The Old Wyoming Trail", which features Barbara Weeks and Donald Grayson and will be seen at the local house for two days.

The picture has everything to satisfy the demands of the most exacting Western fan — drama, thrills, suspense, action — plus music and some of the range variety that will send fans from the theatre early humming.

Green and the famous Sons of the Patriots, of radio renown account for the musical phase of the picture, while Starrett takes thorough care of the action and drama.

The story of "The Old Wyoming Trail" is laid in the days of the railroad's advance Westward and concerns the obtaining of an unscrupulous, money-hungry outlaw who tries to force a rancher to sell his land by establishing a barricade of fear around him to keep cattle owners away. Bob Patterson, played by Starrett, solves the rancher's problem in a series of swift, dramatic and thrilling episodes and incidentally wins the rancher's daughter in return.
