"THE DUTY OF THE HOUR"

During the general election of 1908 a pamphlet issued in Toronto with the caption "The Duty of the Hour," was much in evidence. Briefly it urged all Orangemen to strike a blow against clerical ascendancy in Canada by voting against the Laurier candidates. There was nothing extraordinary about this appeal. For years a few Conservative newspapers, notably the Mail in the middle eighties, had advocated the same thing, but because the pamphlet came from the printing plant of the Orange Sentinel that was enough to condemn it. The appeal had a curiously stimulating effect both ways. It spurred the Conservatives to greater efforts to put Laurier out; it enthused the Liberals in constituencies where there was a large Catholic vote to greater efforts to retain Laurier in power by quietly presenting the pamphlet to their Catholic friends who were Conservatives. To accomplish this end the little essay was reprinted by the Liberals to the extent of many thousands of copies. One of the constituencies in which it was proposed to use the document to the detriment of the Conservative candidate was King's county, the most easterly riding in Prince Edward Island, and in which there was a large Catholic population. King's, from the day Prince Edward Island came into Confederation, had assumed in its political affiliations. One time it would elect a Conservative, and then at the next election would switch to the Liberals. Two of the present senators, Hon. John MacLean, Conservative, and Hon. J.J. Hughes, Liberal, represented the riding at different times. The candidates in this particular election were Mr. Hughes, Liberal and Mr. A.L. Fraser, Conservative, both of them being Catholics, and the Liberals had decided to make use of "The Duty of the Hour" to the fullest extent.

which would mean absolute victory to the Liberal cause. It was dusk when the train arrived. Several commercial travellers were on board, and the baggage man had quite a task unloading their trunks. A husky Conservative stalwart entered the baggage car and bidding good-evening to the truck handler, said he wondered if there was an express parcel for him, "Dunno," said the railway man, "better take a look around. I'm busy." The situation was a perfect one for the young fellow. He promptly spotted the trunk, of which a thorough description had been received from Charlottetown. While the back of the baggage man was turned to him the young chap pushed the wanted trunk to the open door on the off side of the train, and shot it out into the arms of half a dozen of his friends who were waiting. In his way the Liberal ammunition disappeared, turning round to the baggage master, the young fellow simply said, "Nothing doing," and withdrew with great nonchalance, joining his friends upon the platform. The Liberals searched the car, and then the entire train for the receptacle containing the pamphlets, but they could not find it. The copies of "The Duty of the Hour," which was to do such deadly work in King's county, had disappeared for all time. I could tell where they went but at this late date refrain. After the election was over the trunk and its contents, heavily loaded with stones, found a quiet resting place in the waters of Souris harbour. The election resulted in the Conservatives redeeming the county, Mr. Fraser being victor by 182 votes. Had that pamphlet got into the hands of the electors before polling day it may be taken as an absolute certainty that he would have been defeated by three times that figure.

Television-Telephony In Near Future

(A.P. by Guardian's Special Wire) BERLIN, Aug. 31.—The German post office announced today as spectacular plan to introduce "television-telephony" in the near future.

Trials between Berlin and Munich were reported to have resulted favorably. Postal authorities planned to install a television telephone net between the larger cities, further extension of the system depending on public reaction "because of the still high cost of apparatus." The trials were made possible while Germans still thrilled at what technicians called "satisfactory" sound film broadcasts, which were demonstrated at the 11th German radio show by means of a "televising car."

Daily transmission of tone films taken from the top of a television car of the German radio company stationed in the immediate vicinity of Berlin's radio tower captivated thousands at the radio show, which closed yesterday with a record attendance.

Scenes were shot with an ordinary sound picture camera from the station. The trunk in the baggage car of the train saw the men leave, and then hid himself to the telephone office. Souris was sixty miles away and the scheduled train run was about three and a half hours. Calling up Souris on long distance, he got one of the leading members of the party to the telephone, told him about the mysterious stranger and the still more mysterious trunk, and repeated the remark he had heard about "fixing the Tories of King's." This was enough warning for the party leader. He called a few friends together and steps were immediately taken to get possession of the trunk and its contents.

When the train arrived at Souris there was a large crowd upon the station platform, many Liberals being in the company. There were more, however, in the assembly hall across the street. Word had been sent out to the party workers in the county to come into Souris on that particular afternoon, and they would be supplied with ammunition.

Technical appliances permit transmission of 20 pictures a second. The receiving set is equipped with a large tube based upon the cathode ray system. The tube produces a short stream of invisible electrons which are thrown on a fluorescent screen. The pictures appear clearly.

boxer to have his leg broken by a punch in the jaw, and secondly, that although he never ran the century in ten seconds, he has defeated more men who claimed to do the distance in that time than any other man in western Canada.

The leg-breaking incident happened in 1898 in the Yukon. Joe was matched with "Kid" Owens, a member of the Old North West Mounted Police. "I made just one bad mistake, but that was enough," Clarke said. "I had my feet crossed in the first round when Owens connected with my jaw. He didn't hurt my jaw but my ankle snapped when I went down. I was on crutches for weeks."

As a member of the North West Mounted Police, Clarke played outside wing for Toronto Varsity grid squad and in 1896 played with and was secretary treasurer of Brockville, Ont., Intermediates, rugby champions of Ontario in that year.

Magistrate Ends Lengthy Career of Police Work (By The Canadian Press) PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Sept. 3.—Closing a career of police and magisterial work dating back to June 1, 1877, Magistrate W. W. O'Brien left the courthouse here today as a civilian, placed in retirement by reorganization of the Ontario government. The 75 year old retiring magistrate embarked on his police career at the tender age of 18 years when he joined the force of the Royal Irish Constabulary as a constable. In his 57 years of work he has passed judgment on, or committed to trial before higher and Athens in Ontario at one time had Clarke on the roster of their lacrosse teams. "When I got expelled from one school I'd move to another and this explains the large number of teams that had my services," Edmonton's ex-mayor said.

Clarke went to the Yukon in 1897 was there at the time of the famous '98 gold run and then came to Edmonton in 1906 to open a law office and later enter politics.

MAGISTRATE ENDS LENGTHY CAREER OF POLICE WORK

His next police work was for the Canadian Pacific Railway during construction at the Head-of-the-Lakes. Later he joined the Port William city police force, serving as assistant chief for many years. On Aug. 31, 1906, Mr. O'Brien was appointed district magistrate, his territory extending from White River, Ont. to the Manitoba boundary and then in 1921 he was transferred to the position of Port Arthur magistrate. "I suppose I should really have no regrets on retiring," he said. "Rheumatism has bothered me for many years now—the result of sleeping out in the bush during my years as a constable here—but I can't help feeling sort of lonely. I know I shall miss police courts, criminals charged with every breach of the Criminal Code with the exception of high treason. Because he wished to marry, young O'Brien left the Irish Constabulary for the Inancashire Constabulary where there was no ban against wedlock. He remained there for seven years and joined the Winnipeg police force in 1896, serving as a constable for three years.

Champagne Shower

There's nothing like doing a job as if you meant it, as Lady Shaw-Stewart demonstrated when she cracked a bottle of champagne over the stern of H. M. S. Galtea, Eng-land's newest cruiser, during the christening ceremonies at Greenock Scotland. She backs the bottle so thoroughly that she was all "christened" or at least drenched with the liquor.
