Looking Ahead with Hal Bohaker

Christmas is essentially a feast of the family. The traditional celebrations associated with this most joyous of seasons are, for the most part, family festivities. The reunion with visiting relatives, the gift-laden tree, the ancient rite of turkey-and-plum-pudding dinner, the family cavalcade to church—all these are family activities and it is within the orbit of the family circle that all that is finest in the tradition of Christmas is expressed. The atmosphere of family happiness at this season is heart-warming to a life insurance representative. As he goes about his daily round seeing happy family groups full of the joy of Christmas, the knowledge that his services are safeguarding the welfare of such families gives him a very special reason for enjoying a very merry Christmas. Which is what I wish for you, one and all.
