Christmas At Sea Celebrated On Ship
 Christmas at sea is always an event of great interest to ocean travellers, no matter what part of the world they may be in, and the festive and joyous celebration observed aboard every vessel of the Canadian National Steamships in service between Canada, the United States and the British West Indies, where the turkey dinner and plum pudding is shared by all. The position of vessels for the Canadian National Steamships on Christmas Day will be as follows:
 The Lady Rodney, with passengers and freight, bound for Bermuda, the Bahama Islands and Jamaica, will spend Christmas Eve at Halifax and Christmas Day at sea between Halifax and Boston. Her sister ship, the Lady Somers, will spend Christmas Day up to 4 p. m. at Nassau, capital of the Bahamas. The Lady Hawkins will spend Christmas at the port of Halifax preparatory to a cruise for ports en route to British Guiana. The Lady Drake en route from British Guiana and various islands of the British West Indies, will spend Christmas Day at Barbados. The Lady Nelson on her southbound trip to ports en route to the southern terminus of British Guiana will spend the forenoon of Christmas at the island of St. Kitts and the afternoon and evening at Nevis.
 The passenger carrying freighter Colborne, with "vagabond cruise" vacationists to American, French and British West Indies, will spend Christmas Day at Trinidad en route to British Guiana. Her sister ship, the Chomedy, will spend Christmas Day at Halifax preparatory to sailing over a similar route to the south.
 The freighter Cathart, in direct service southbound from Halifax, will spend Christmas at Kingston, capital of Jamaica, and the Caveller in the same service, after calling northbound at Nassau and Bermuda, will spend Christmas at Halifax. The freighter Cornwallis, in service to various ports en route between Halifax and British Guiana, will spend Christmas at the southern terminus. The S. S. Connector, in service between Jamaica and British Honduras, will spend Christmas at the port of Jamaica, up to 3 p. m. when she sails for Belize, capital of British Honduras.

Canada's Indian Population Helped

(C.F. By Guardian's Special Wire)
 OTTAWA, Dec. 22—A new program of direction and encouragement of Canada's Indian population designed to establish it permanently on a higher economic plane, was announced today by T. A. Cregar, Minister of the recently re-organized department of mines and resources.
 The primary aim of the scheme, said Mr. Cregar, would be to see that each Indian was helped along in the livelihood for which he was best fitted, by location and otherwise.
 While many Indians were registering marked success as farmers and others as fishermen, the great bulk of Indians obviously could not be absorbed in such industries since so many of them lived far from the populated areas across the northern half of the Dominion, the minister said.
 "The fur trade, our oldest and still one of our largest industries, has its producing field where many Indians live," pointed out Mr. Cregar.
 The department would aim to improve the Indian's skill as trappers, he said. It would instruct them in the care of furs before disposing of them. It would advise them what trade goods to buy from the standpoint of health, comfort and economy—how unsuitable were silk stockings and such finery in the wide open spaces. The department would endeavor, too, to keep the Indians posted, through the Indian agents, on current fur prices, to prevent those of whom a few still exist, vent exploitation by irresponsible exclusive hunting areas have already been set aside for the Indians in the northwest territories. Even outside those huge preserves, no white trapper may obtain a hunting license until he has been a resident for four years. This tends to prevent transient trappers crowding in for an occasional cleanup by destructive and wasteful methods. Similar regulations have been set up in some of the provincial districts bordering on the territories.

MAKING CHRISTMAS MORE MERRY

Now 'tis time for fun galore, since Santa comes from shore to shore. To show each little child like me, happy thoughts and a Christmas tree.
 Christmas thoughts ring out with cheer, I wish you a merry glad, New Year. Go to your next door neighbor and see, if he is as happy as you and me. Bring him fruit or bring him candy. But make his Christmas happy and glad. Just as merry as he ever had, This is the way to help the poor, Going about from door to door, But don't forget the Babe of yore Who had to sleep on the poor barn floor.

MISS FLORENCE CURRIE Rocky Point

Compacts are on the square! At least that's the newest shape for them this Fall. They are developed in composition such as enamel in black, brown, blue, red, as well as many high shades. Bright plaid and check designs in composition are also seen. Solid color compacts are either gold or silver trimmed and are very smart. The new models are designed streamline fashion and come in thin, single and double styles.
 Minard's Enamel removes stains.

COMPACTS CAPTIVATE

Three egg whites, 3-4 cup fruit sugar, 1-4 cup honey, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1 teaspoon vanilla 11-2 cups cocoanut.
 Beat egg whites until stiff. Gradually add sugar and cornstarch, continuing to beat until mixture holds its shape. Add honey and beat again. Place in top of double boiler and cook over boiling water until slight crust forms on sides of pan. Remove, add flavoring and cocoanut. Drop on buttered baking sheet. Bake in slow oven until lightly browned. These macaroons are moist and chewy. Chopped dates, nuts, cherries' cornflakes, etc., may be substituted, for the cocoanut.

Samuel Goldwyn presents SINCLAIR LEWIS' "DODSWORTH"
 with WALTER HUSTON RUTH CHATTERTON
 Paul Lukas Mary Astor
 and David Niven
 Released thru United Artists

Samuel Dodsworth loved his wife. There could be no other explanation for his sale of the Dodsworth Plant to United Motors, generous as were the terms. He tried to convince himself and his friends that he had taken the step of his own free will. Twenty-six years in harness was long even for a mule, he said. Time for him to begin a new life, to learn to enjoy leisure, to see the world. He meant to travel. It was good to shake off all cares and responsibilities. He felt like a boy again.
 But he deceived no one, least of all himself. It was with a heavy heart that he bade farewell to his old associates and employees, said goodbye to the huge plant that had made the town of Zenith one of the busiest centers of American industry, and himself its most prominent citizen. It was with a sadness he could not conceal that he prepared for his journey abroad—his second honeymoon.
 Twenty-six years ago in an old Zenith barn, he mused, and there ran through his head a kaleidoscopic picture of those tumultuous years—years of constant struggle, unenvied success, significant triumphs, constructive years, happy years.
 Even Fran showed concern when Dodsworth came home from his last day at the plant. He had aged perceptibly since leaving the house that morning.
 "How do you feel?" she asked anxiously.
 Fran smothered the faint flicker of remorse. She began to justify herself all over again. She was—they were entitled to his and freedom. They had brought up their daughter, Emily, and seen her safely married. They had had their shares of anxieties and responsibilities, and now they were privileged to enter a fuller, happier life, to begin life anew, like a couple of children.
 "I want a new life all over from the beginning! A perfectly glorious, free, adventurous life! It's coming to us, Sam! We've done our job! We've made our money. We needn't be tied any more to this dead, half-baked Middle Western town!"
 "Now, Fran," Dodsworth protested feebly, "don't go knocking Zenith again."
 "But Fran was not to be stopped. "I want the lovely things I've got a right to. In Europe a woman of my age is just getting to where men take a serious interest in her! And I just can't be put on a shelf by my daughter when I can still dance better and longer than she can. I've got brains, and thank heaven I've still got looks. No one ever takes me more than thirty-two—or thirty-three! I'm begging for life, Sam! I'm not! I'm demanding it!"

 Dodsworth took her in his arms. "If that's the way you feel, Sam! I'm fondly, 'I'll enjoy life if it kills me. And it probably will!"
 And so Sam Dodsworth and Fran embarked on their new career—Fran prepared to circle the globe, if necessary, to keep pace with her departing youth, and Dodsworth doggedly determined to keep the pace with her.

"Americans like you and me can't quit work," said Tubby. "We're meant to keep on until we die in the harness."

Sam's old friend, Tubby Pearson made one last effort to dissuade him. Fortified with a couple of drinks, he spoke more frankly to Sam than he had ever spoken in all the long years they had known each other.
 "I can't stand to see my oldest and closest friend turned into an expatriate parlor snake because Zenith isn't good enough for his wife."
 "Easy now, Tubby," Dodsworth warned.
 But Tubby persisted with a final warning.
 "Americans like you and me can't quit work. We're meant to keep on until we die in harness."
 The warning was still ringing in Dodsworth's ears when they set sail from New York on the "Queen Mary," largest and most luxurious of luxury liners. Once out on the open sea, however, and all his misgivings and heaviness of spirit seemed to drop from him like a mantle. The sea excited him, who had spent all his life in the Mid-west. His vastness exhilarated him; he liked big things, large distances, immeasurable values.
 His eagerness made Fran happy. "It was right, wasn't it?" she said excitedly.
 Sam nodded his head. "Happiest day of my life, next to the day I married you."
 He looked at her fondly, as she stood on the rail next to him, staring at the ocean, her face flushed like a young girl's.
 "I'd remember to tell you today that I adore you!" he said.

Col. Batista Would Oust The President

By The Associated Press
 Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuba's maker and breaker of presidents is at it again. In arranging the impeachment of President Miguel Mariano Gomez, whom he helped into office, this former army sergeant and stenographer appeared to be dictating the seventh change in the incumbency in the palace at Havana in a little more than three years.
 This 36-year-old "chief of the armed forces of Cuba"—his official

SEASON'S GREETINGS
 Charlottetown L. B. MILLER

When Sergeant Batista carried out his carefully prepared coup of Sept. 4, now celebrated as a national holiday, "the day of the armed forces" he ousted President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes.
 After Cespedes came Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, whom Batista made President and permitted to resign four months later. Next was Carlos Hevia who lasted only two days.
 His successor was the veteran Nationalist leader, Col. Carlos Mendieta Y Montefur, who held the presidency nearly two years, from Jan. 17, 1934, until his resignation Dec. 12, 1935.
 The Secretary of State, Jose A. Barnet filled the presidential gap between Mendieta's resignation and the inauguration of President Gomez May 20, 1936.
 Gomez, a former Mayor of Havana, counted the powerful Batista his friend when he entered office, but when he stood against the army-sponsored bill to tax sugar to raise funds for rural schools, one of Batista's most cherished schemes he drew down the strong man's wrath.

Addis Ababa Silver Sold In London

LONDON, Dec. 22—(CP-Havas)—A large quantity of silverware brought from Addis Ababa by Emperor Haile Selassie when he fled from his capital on the eve of Italian occupation was auctioned here today for 2,927 pounds ($12,636).
 Several hundred persons attended. The first few pieces aroused little enthusiasm, but when ornate coffee and tea services bearing the Ethiopian Imperial Arms were placed on the block prices mounted.
 The Ethiopian Legation said the Emperor's new residence in Bath was considerably smaller than his palace at Addis Ababa and would not be able to accommodate all of Haile Selassie's furnishings.
