Plane Production

Regarding production of planes it was stated that "recent figures are good but no matter how good they are they must be better."

Hon. Norman Rogers, Canadian Minister of National Defence, conferred with Sir Samuel tonight on details of the Empire training scheme which is regarded here as of paramount importance in the battle for air supremacy.

Pilots and air crews are being trained not only in this country but in Canada, New Zealand, Australia, Kenya, Rhodesia and South Africa. In addition the air ministry has made arrangements to train men in France and the French Colonial Empire.

Mr. Chamberlain will open the debate in the House tomorrow with a detailed statement which may last an hour. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, Oliver Stanley, War Secretary, Sir Samuel Hoare and other big guns on the treasury bench will speak before the debate ends.

Mr. Churchill is expected to be Mr. Chamberlain's chief aide against the opposition. To counter demands for a new government, some of which include Viscount Halifax as Prime Minister, Mr. Chamberlain is expected to announce that Mr. Churchill is to be sole chairman of the ministerial committee on military coordination, a post he has shared with the Prime Minister.

Only passing reference has been made in the press and political circles to a possible successor for Mr. Chamberlain for the simple reason that Mr. Churchill, who would be the likeliest choice, will defend the record of the Government and intends to stand by his chief.

The same thing is true of Lord Halifax who despite his soft voice has shown he can be as inflexible as steel.

It is generally agreed, however, that Lord Halifax, whose administrative record has not been touched by the Norwegian events, would be acceptable as a compromise candidate in the unlikely event of Mr. Chamberlain being toppled from power.

Upon the contents and tone of the Prime Minister's statement depends the numerical strength that the anti-Chamberlain forces can assemble. Many members, particularly Conservative backbenchers, have agreed to suspend judgment until the full story can be told.

Critical Speeches Expected

Critical speeches will be made by Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition, and other Labor leaders; Sir Archibald Sinclair, the Liberal leader, and David Lloyd George, who toppled the Asquith Government from office in the First Great War and was Prime Minister for the balance of the struggle.

Others, nominally supporters of the Government, who are working against Mr. Chamberlain, include Leslie Hore-Belisha, former War Secretary, Harold Nicolson, the historian, L. C. M. S. Amery, who has held a half dozen portfolios in previous Conservative Governments, Harold MacMillan, the publisher, and Richard Law, son of Andrew Bonar Law, the Canadian-born post-war Prime Minister.

Against these forces is arrayed the formidable debating strength of the treasury benches and the latent power of Captain H. D. Margesson, the government whip, who ordinarily commands heavy majorities in parliamentary divisions.

Unofficial government circles expected there would be new status and more power for Mr. Churchill as a consequence to the dabate.

With the position will go an important privilege, it was believed—Mr. Churchill would have direct access to all departments of the government.

SOVIETS REPORT SPIES

MOSCOW, May 6 —(AP) —The War commissariat today issued a booklet describing the activities and apprehension of spies in Soviet Russia who it is alleged were British, Polish and Japanese agents. The booklet charged that the alleged spies terrorized or tricked Russians into revealing information. Several foreign women agents, the booklet said, married Russian military and political officials to facilitate their espionage activities.

Large Wholesale Firms To Erect Building In City

Contractors and carpenters will have a busy summer according to the proposed construction projects to take place in the City. Besides the usual number of dwelling houses, which are built each year, there will be at least two large warehouses erected in Charlottetown this year.

Work on the large wholesale grocery warehouse, which is to be built by Eastern Hay and Feed, is to be commenced some time this month. It will be erected on the corner of Pownal and Water Streets, on the property which formerly belonged to the City. The George V. Moore building is also on part of this lot. The new building will be a two storey warehouse with basement, but it has not been decided definitely what type it will be.

DeBlois Bros., well known wholesalers in the City, will also erect a large warehouse on the old Kennedy property. This building will be on the corner of Queen and Water Streets, and will be in the course of construction during the summer months.

North Shore Dwellers Cash In On Seals

Messrs. A. J. MacAdam and William Anderson, both of Goose River, P. E. I. went to Souris yesterday to check the weighing and grading of a most unusual shipment for this part of British America —a cargo of sealpelts for an oil reduction plant at Grindstone Island, Magdalen Islands.

The pelts had been assembled from along the North Shore between Monticello and Cable Head, awaiting the arrival of the motor-vessel Letty C. which made a special trip to Souris for them. The Letty C. is commanded by Captain A. Arsenault, himself a veteran master of the sealing industry in the Gulf and northern ice-fields

The seals were carried to the north shore of the Island on immense ice-floes driven in and grounded between Shipwreck Point, Naufrage and Cable Head by the northeast blizzard of two weeks ago.

For the first day following the storm the ice was alive with the seals. After the slaughter began, the seals moved out a considerable distance from land and soon afterward the wind changed moving the ice-floes out to sea.

Pound Slips On Exchange

NEW YORK, May 6—(AP)—The open-market quotation of the pound Sterling dropped to the lowest of the war period in terms of the United States dollar today following the weekend German claims of air successes over Britain's Navy.

At one time in late dealings the British currency was down about six cents. The so-called free rate, determined by local demand and supply, slipped under $3.42 compared with the official buying rate of $4.02 1-2 set by the British exchange control.

A number of British Empire bonds also skidded to new lows for the war period. Among the wider losers were Australia 4 1-2s, New South Wales 5s and Sydney 5 1-2d.

The Hen

Let me invoke my humble muse
In uncouth rhymes, not to refuse
The lowly hen her meed of praise
For the nutritious eggs she lays.

Perchance in future at a show
They'll award the hen a D.S.O.
Her service in domestic use
The public can well deduce.

An indefatigable scratcher
There's not a fowl on earth can match her.
Vivacious and with many a jerk
To right and left she scatters dirt.

She seeks the mown hay's seclusion
Deprecating all intrusion.
She sits a recluse on her nest
Eluding all your fruitless quest

She lays her egg in her retreat
And then proclaims it as a feat.
By nature timid yet she's brave,
As lion for her chicks to save.

In gardens she doth havoc make
Flowers and seeds up she'll rake
Pursued, in panic flight she squawks
As if pursued by swift-winged hawks.

Man among his clever deeds
Has evolved some special breeds,
From primal stock which roved of yore
In jungles on East India's shore.

Remember that pathetic scene
When in His sorrow deep and keen
Our Lord bemoaned Jerusalem
His love He likened to a hen
Which under her maternal wings
Gathers her brood, weak puny things.

COMMUNISM IS THEME OF GYRO ADDRESS

Rev. Dr. Monaghan Of St. Dunstan's University Gives Interesting Talk.

"We must not forget that Communism is essentially anti-God. This anti-God campaign is not a passing whim, as sometimes happens in revolutions. It is a part and parcel of Communism; it is its very life. Communism itself is the God; it can brook no rivals. We know this from the teachings of Marx who found no room for God in his plan of things; we have it from the teachings of Lenin and Stalin and their satellites; we have it from the preachments of Communists the world over; and we see it in the atheistic literature, in the anti-God campaigns, in the destruction of Church property, and in the murder and persecution of the ministers of religion. Religion is banned in the Communistic State because they are opposed the one to the other. The principles of religion demand due worship to God; Communism demands worship of the State to the exclusion of God. Religion tells of a life beyond the grave; Communism envisions an earthly paradise and will have no other. In a word, atheism is the soul of Communism. Take it away and you no longer have Communism. You will have something which may or may not be good, but you have not Communism," declared Rev. Gavan P. Monaghan, B. A., Ph. D., in an address to the members of The Gyro Club at their regular weekly meeting held last evening in the Hotel Charlottetown.

Original Meaning

In his opening remarks, Dr. Monaghan explained the original meaning of the word "Communism" and then stated that "when we speak today of Communism, one thing and one thing only is meant, and that is Marxian Communism. It means the doctrine of Marx and Engels as interpreted by Lenin and Stalin, and as put into practice in Russia since November, 1917. This doctrine is based principally on the teaching of Karl Marx and in order to know what it is and how it works, we must know something about Marx himself and the things he taught."

He then outlined the biography of Marx, mentioned the doctrines of Hegel which influenced him, and explained in detail the fundamental principles of his philosophy, particularly with regard to the Class War, Society, Man and the Family, and Religion, stating: "It proposes a form of Society which is both unnatural and impossible; it hates with a diabolical hatred all forms of Democracy; it descends man to the level of the brute and destroys all principle of authority; it denies the existence of the human soul and it tries to root out from the mind and heart of man all knowledge and love of God. It would be impossible here to take the errors of Communism one by one and refute them individually. The whole system is honeycombed with errors. I shall merely mention two of them: Communism opposed to man and Communism opposed to God."

Why Communism Spreads

The speaker then turned to a discussion of the rapid spread of Communism. "How is it," he asked, "that such a system, with all its horrors, could spread so rapidly to all parts of the world?" "There are four main causes," he continued. "The lack of religious spirit in the world; the fact that Communism has an ideal; the shrewd propaganda of the Communists; and the cowardice of the secular press."

Continuing, he stated: "The way for Communism has been steadily prepared since the eighteenth century; for since that time European culture has ceased to be Christian. It still retained the moral standards of the Christian civilization of preceding centuries; but there grew up along with these Christian standards the doctrine that man is entirely subordinated to economic ends, that man was created to make wealth, that material happiness was his sole objective. In pursuance of this objective, no care was taken of his spiritual destiny; the working man was given no opportunity to attend to his religious duties; Sunday was merely another day of work, or a day in which to rest from the too strenuous labours of the working week. So, little by little, the world and the working man forgot God. God was eased out of everyday life, even out of Sunday life. The chief purpose of man's existence here below, the service and the glory of God was, forgotten and the economic welfare was dominant. In other words, the materialism which we condemn in Communism was a trait of our capitalistic civilization and very soon this civilization became spiritually bankrupt. It has inherited some religious principles from the past but it couldn't foster them because it hadn't produced them and when they were gone, there remained a void. Men soon discovered that they had no real objective; no ideal worthy of their nature; there was nothing in Capitalistic civilization to satisfy the cravings of the human heart. This applied evidently not to the Churchgoers, but to the far larger numbers of those who had never gone to Church or who had ceased to go. No ideal, no objective, man was simply a member of a vast army marching nowhere. For the unthinking man, this is not a great worry, but for the man who thinks, such a situation is intolerable; and so, many became dissatisfied with their lot and for relief turned even to Communism.

A False Ideal

"Now Communism has an ideal: outside of Christianity it is the only thing in the world today that has an ideal. This ideal of Communism is utterly false. It can never satisfy the natural cravings of the human heart for happiness; it is absolutely opposed to the very nature of man. But false as it is, it is an ideal; an ideal of justice, of equality, of fraternity, which in spite of its falsity, catches the popular fancy and inspires its devotees with a zeal and an enthusiasm that is worthy of a better cause. And this ideal of Communism has appealed not only to the downtrodden and oppressed, not only to those who felt pity for the downtrodden, but it appealed also to a vast number who felt they were without a goal in life and therefore lost. Communism supplied them with a goal. They were enthused with its program and they espoused its cause. And so we have our parlour pinks, our middle class people, our university professors, who are really sold on the idea of Communism and devote all their energies to the spread of its doctrines. Many of these, I grant you, are insincere; but many of them are quite sincere, or at least as sincere as it is possible to be when fighting for an unjust cause. Certainly, Communism appeals to greed, to lust, lust for place and power, lust of the flesh; and hatred and sloth and many other base motives. But the tragedy of it is, and also the danger, that it appeals to some of the highest and noblest and most enduring sentiments of the heart and mind. It appeals to our hatred of unjustifiable economic inequalities, to our sympathy with the downtrodden and oppressed, to our love of social justice. It appeals to our hatred of war and our love of peace. It takes advantage of our belief in a true brotherhood of man, which is higher and broader than national lines. It invokes our love of freedom and democracy. And it makes these appeals and capitalizes upon these ideals of ours largely by its policy of boring from within and victimizing unsuspecting men and women of this and of every country. This it does by its up to date methods of propaganda."

Stalin's Order To Followers

After describing some of the methods, the speaker stated: "Five years ago, Josef Stalin sent out from Russia to the Communists of the U. S. A. and doubtless to those in Canada and the rest of the world, the following command: 'Penetrate into all of the innumerable types of organizations which particularly abound in your country —labour, trade, civic, athletic, political, musical, social and even religious. Organize new groups ostensibly for these purposes. Conceal your Communism, disguise your purpose. When talking to people who believe in God, deny your atheism. Gain their confidence, secure key positions. Then gradually poison their minds. Having poisoned their minds, lead them farther and farther to the left. Accustom them to the thought of violent upheaval if necessity should arise. Break down their respect for authority. Prepare them psychologically and by spiritual disintegration for the great and coming day. Do all this in the guise of truth and justice, peace and humanity, and in the name of God Himself.' Following such orders, millions of men and women in the U. S. A. and in this country were made the dupes of Communism. Men and women who would rather die than be associated with such a doctrine were roped into organizations such as the League for Peace and Democracy, the League against War and Fascism, the Christian Front, the Popular Front and many other Communistic organizations. And the pity of it all is that it is the very high ideals and nobility of soul of these people that made them the readier victims of this new approach. Communists have worked their way into positions in Canada today so that they may dupe members of groups and organizations. So may we also be deceived some day if we do not watch ourselves and the associations of which we are members

"Another reason for the spread of Communism is the cowardice and the conspiracy of the secular Press. You and I depend on the press for most of our information and yet for twenty-three years it has given us very little about the workings of Communism, which with Nazism form the double-headed monster which is doing its best to destroy Civilization and Christianity. Even today, when the Press had decided to give us something about Communism, it does not show it up in its true light. It has veered from its tolerance, praise and even support of Communism but it does not expose the evil which is the very essence of it—Atheism, Godlessness—that destroys not only the idea of God but also all sanction of authority in society.

City Schools Burglarized By Two Young Men

Caught in the act of burglarising Queen Square School late Sunday night, two Charlottetown youths appeared before Magistrate K. M. Martin yesterday morning and were remanded for hearing until Thursday.

They were discovered by Sgt. A. J. McInnis and Constable W. G. Pe[illegible], who were on patrol duty at the time. The young men were betrayed by using flashlights which were seen by the Police.

They were taken to the Police Station and yesterday made a voluntary confession telling of several other breaks.

According to their story the youths burglarized the Holy Name Club on Saturday April 28th., and continued their wrong doing by entering three city schools over the week end. Prince Street, West Kent and Queen Square Schools were in turn visited by the burglars.

On the afternoon of Saturday, April 28th, they noticed that one of the rear windows of the Holy Name Club was open. Coming back late in the night, the young men entered the building and took some keys and a Credit Union book.

Last Friday night they succeeded in opening a door of Prince Street School with one of the stolen keys. This was at 10 o'clock in the night. Their main loot from this school was pencils, pens and other school articles. The sum of 51 cents in cash was also taken from one of the drawers.

At the same hour Saturday night West Kent School was paid a visit by the burglars who gained entrance by means of a little window on the fire escape. Nothing was taken from this building, however.

Continuing their escapade, the young men gained entrance to Queen Square School and ransacked the building. It was here that they were discovered by the Police at 11.30 p.m.

They attempted to escape but were captured in the lobby of the school by the Police. When searched, they were found to be in possession of a large number of keys, fountain pens, pencils, wrist watches, pen holders, jack knives, mouth organs and other articles.

They were finger-printed by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Anglo-French Co-Operation Has Strength

Written for The Canadian Press By MAJOR- GENERAL SIR CHARLES GWYNN

LONDON, May 5 —(CP) — After more than six months of war, it has become extremely enlightening to compare the excellence of Anglo-French co-operation with the less satisfactory state of affairs in the opening phases of the last war.

In the last war, though there was such loyal co-operation and determination to achieve a common end, it cannot be denied that there was an undercurrent of distust and criticism, largely due to a lack of full understanding of the share each was contributing to the war effort and of each other's methods.

By general consent British relations with France have never been so cordial or so well established as they are now. Nor have they ever covered such a wide field of activities.

After the First Great War it was realized by soldiers especially, that should Germany become a danger, France and Britain must again stand side by side, and that the causes of former rivalries had been eliminated. Steps were therefore taken to maintain contacts established during the war, and to clear up misunderstandings that had occurred in it by a frank interchange of views.

We are now gathering fruits from a well-prepared soil. War correspondents have reported the cordial relations existing between British and French troops, and in the villages where British troops are quartered.

Express Admiration

There is an eagerness to acknowledge the help given promptly and efficiently by all grades of the French Army and civil organization. There is outspoken admiration of the high morale and high standard of training in the French Forces.

No doubt, the prompt acceptance of conscription by Britain and the fact that France has not, as in the last war, had to sacrifice many lives while Britain prepared for action, have contributed to the happy condition which exist.

Further afield the agreement just concluded for co-operattion in economic and in colonial affairs is a good augury of a permanent recognition of the closeness of the common interests of the two countries.

Is it too optimistic to hope that, when the war is brought to a successful conclusion, our two countries will form the nucleus of a practical and flexible form of a Federation with which democratic nations may associate themselves?
