Plane captures Nazi U-Boat

BULLETIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(Tuesday)—(AP)—The BBC quoted Berlin broadcast early today to the effect that the Royal Air Force bombed Berlin again during the night for the second nocturnal assault in a row.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—(AP)—British pilots, attacking in coldly furious commemoration of one of Britain's darkest nights, beat at Berlin for hours last night and early today in a raid officially termed the heaviest ever delivered upon Hitler's capital.

It was payment in the red, familiar coin of fire bombs and explosives for the first mass air attack on London on the night of Sept. 7-8, 1940, an assault of eight hours and 18 minutes that cost the Nazis 66 planes.

Twenty Royal Air Force bombers and one fighter plane of squadrons of hundreds which crossed the channel last night in the white moonlight of Indian summer went down before German defensive fire, but this was the total loss of a great anniversary offensive that struck not only at Berlin but at Kiel and other far separated points in the Reich and along the occupied French coast.

Four German fighter planes of those that went aloft to meet the R. A. F. were shot down.

It was by every account a thrust of mighty power sharply illustrating how Britain's aerial strength has grown from a year ago to take the offensive where it once fought desperately only to protect this island.

Berlin's aerial arm, strengthened in a brief communique, was left slight with a series of tremendous losses.

"We could see the place like a map," said a returning flight sergeant.

Nazis claim Leningrad is Surrounded

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The German high command claimed tonight that the city of Leningrad is surrounded by the forces of the German army.

In taking Schluesselburg, 21 miles east of Leningrad on the Neva River and Lake Ladoga, the Germans were said to have reached the Neva "on a broad front."

This would place them much closer to Leningrad on the east and Schluesselburg itself, as the river runs from Leningrad to Schluesselburg.

The German radio said that Russian troops put up desperate resistance at Schluesselburg. ### Interpreting The War News

(By Kirke L. Simpson) (Associated Press Staff Writer) Hitler's legion, racing against time, is trying to get the Nazi objective of shattering Russian resistance, are on fresh notice from Moscow that the war will go on regardless of the fate of Leningrad, Kiev, Odessa or even Moscow itself.

Mass evictions of the population of the lower Volga region obviously is in preparation for successive new Russian stands no further west.

Nearly 400,000 people, some 65 per cent of them of German extraction, are to be moved far eastward because of reported harboring of Nazi spies and saboteurs.

Above all, that Russian move, forecasting a tragic winter pilgrimage for a whole people, spells out to Moscow certainly that the real Nazi objective is attacking Russia in the Caspian field. It represents a clearing of the ground far to the rear of the present Black Sea front in preparation for battles of next year to hold the road to that vital oil supply.

Only by winning access to the Russian fields on the Caspian can Hitler find means to replace the oil that is the life blood of his whole vast war effort. And it is apparent that the British and Russian leadership is convinced that he is already steadily bleeding his oil reserves away and must find
