

NEWS of the WORLD in PICTURES

Following in father's footsteps, 30-year-old Maharajah Yeshwant, right, of Indore, India, has married an American girl. The bride: Marguerite Lawlor, left, who met her new husband in California three years ago when she attended him as a nurse... The young Maharajah's first wife died.

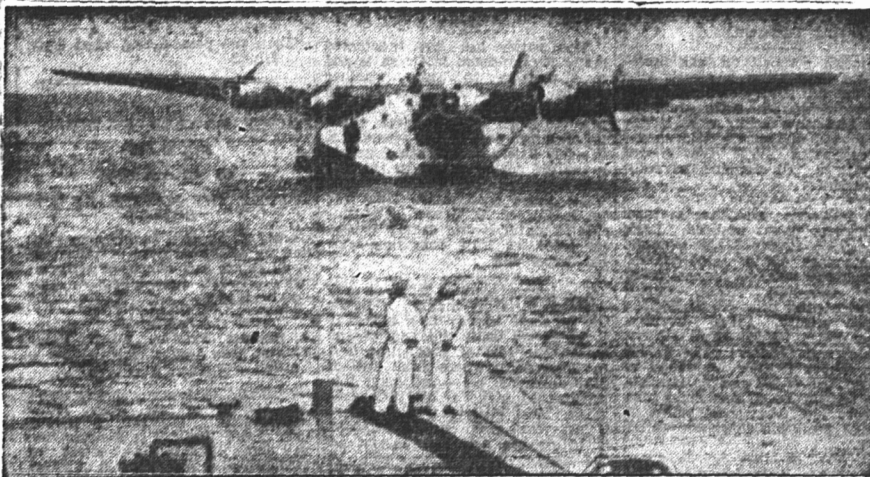

The Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, London, presented a brilliant scene when the gala performance in honor of the visit of President and Madame Lebrun of France was held. It was the first time for a quarter of a century that a performance of this kind had been held in London. More than 200 distinguished people were guests of the King at the performance. Yeomen of the King's body-guard in their picturesque Tudor uniforms did duty in the foyer and grand staircase. In the above photograph taken while the National Anthem was being played (from left to right) Queen Mary, President Lebrun, Queen Elizabeth, the King and Madame Lebrun. At back from left to right are the Earl of Athlone, the Princess Royal and Lady Patricia Ramsey.

In a plea for the lives of her loved ones, a Ruthenian peasant woman implores a Hungarian general at Chust, Carpatho-Ukraine, to spare her sons, scheduled for execution for resisting Hungary's occupation of Ruthenia.

The bird perched in friendly fashion on the rifle of a Japanese soldier at Hanchow, China, may suggest the dove of peace, but actually it is a working member of the Nipponese invading forces—a carrier pigeon used for military messages.

With a record complement of 21 persons aboard the giant Yankee Clipper is shown landing at Lisbon, Portugal, after hopping from the Azores. It was the second leg of a round trip to England from Baltimore, preliminary to the inauguration of regular transatlantic service.

Three sets of four, photographed at once, for the first time. Center of attention, of course, are those comparative newcomers, the Badgett quadruplets, shown in their Galveston, Tex., nursery. The girl-lookers-on: Mary and Roberta Keys, left; Mona and Leola Keys, right, of Oklahoma. The boys, left to right: Anthony, Bernard, Carl, and Donald Ferricone, of Beaumont, Tex.

Fleeing after a New York restaurant holdup, John Naumo, a recently released convict, forced his way into the apartment of an aged couple, whom he held as hostages. Located by police, he fired at them, shattering a window as shown below, while police, armed with pistols, submachine guns and tear gas, pled for his surrender. After an hour's unsuccessful siege, they summoned Father Francis X. Quinn. The priest, braving the convict's gun, climbed in the window and persuaded him to yield. Naumo is shown at left, above, with Father Quinn after the surrender.

Each year four native officers of the Indian Army are chosen to go to London to serve in the entourage of their Emperor. They are chosen on the basis of outstanding merit, all having served more than 25 years. The change is timed annually to coincide with the arrival of milder weather in Britain. His Majesty's Indian aides for this year are shown as they arrived in London a few days ago, (left to right) Subadar Major Sarda Khan, Subadar Major Taj Din, Subadar Major Rahim Ali, and Risaldar Ahmei Khan.

And now the peaceful Swiss, fearing violation of their traditional neutrality, are tightening up border defenses. Here a "barrage balloon" is being sent up from a snow-covered air-field near Basoch, part of a border defense plan against air raids modeled on that developed for London.

Londoners do get excited at times, and even gather in crowds at local points. Here is a scene in Little Downing street, London, where the British Prime Minister and the Chancellor of the Exchequer live. The picture was taken when Mr. Chamberlain was entertaining diplomatic and defense experts in advance of a statement in Parliament. And where a London crowd gathers there will always be found a vendor of drinks, etc., with his cart.