HEARD HIS LIMINATIONS

A small boy when told by his teacher at Sunday school that he would leave his body behind when he died, said in alarm, "I don't understand that." "You see," explained the teacher, "you will take all that is good with you to the better land and leave all that is naughty here on the earth." "Oh, he exclaimed understandingly, and then after a moment's sad thought, he added, soberly, "I guess I'm going to be pretty thin up in the better land, teacher."

Ladies' Secret To Darken Gray Hair

Bring Back Its Color and Lustre with Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe

Common garden sage, brewed in a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though it is troublesome, an easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, in a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wright's Sage and Sulphur Compound" thus avoiding a lot of mess.

White, gray, faded hair is not what we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wright's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant, and you appear years younger.

SAILOR'S THRILLING TALE - FOURTEEN DAYS IN AN OPEN BOAT.

Captain Murchison referred to resides in San Rafael and with him on the ill-fated ship was his nephew, Graham Macphail, son of Neil Macphail, also of San Rafael. Captain Murchison is a son of the late Captain Donald Murchison of Point Prim and sailed from Charlottetown in his younger days. (From the Auckland New Zealand Star of Sept. 28th 1921.)

Life at sea always entails the risk of perilous adventure, and the land lubber, are generally fascinated with the thrilling tales told by those who go down to the sea in ships and who have experienced disaster in some shape or form. Truth they say is stranger than fiction, which probably accounts for many a yarn being spun round something that has actually happened.

Probably the best way to describe the fate of the Columbia River which was wrecked a few weeks ago on Sunday Island, the most northerly of the Kermadec group will be to give a chronological account of the ill-fated trip from Auckland and the subsequent adventures of the crew on that uninhabited island hundreds of miles from human aid, the story of their search on the island for help and which was never found, and the braving of the broad Pacific in an open boat by Captain Neil Murchison and a volunteer crew, their arrival at Suva and the dispatch of His Majesty's ship Chatham to the rescue of the remainder of the crew.

The Columbia River, a five masted schooner left Auckland Septem-ber with neither cargo or ballast - an empty ship. Her destination was Oregon and for a couple of days she sailed gaily along with a nice southern breeze. On the afternoon of the 6th she was 20 miles to the west of Curtis Island, the course being intended to take her 20 miles to the west of Sunday Island. For some reason the island was not sighted. Although in the darkness of the following night breakers were observed ahead. An attempt was made to bring the vessel around but she forged along and literally piled up on a mass of rocks.

With the break of dawn a man was lowered from the end of the bowsprit to the beach and a strong wire hawser made fast to a rock. Then a trolley was rigged up and provisions passed ashore to meet the contingency of the vessel, as likely to break up and the crew forced to land and live on the island.

Captain Murchison a man of very prompt action next despatched men to explore the island and look for the people who were said to inhabit the place. All day the searching party were away and at night returned to report that they had not found a living soul. Only one good thing did the searching party report and that was that there were plenty of goats on the island. The next morning after the little band had breakfasted two search parties were organized to scour the island and search its fifteen miles of circumference. Climbing its hills and light beaches by night. Two days and two nights passed and then the parties returned but alas they had no better success than the first. The island was uninhabited.

On Saturday the Captain decided on making the hazardous attempt to go to Suva in an open boat a distance of 700 miles, the only other choice being New Zealand, a distance of 375 miles, the lesser distance however having the disadvantage of having the wind against them. A call for volunteers met with a ready response and five of the crew were selected and they in turn selected another member. The boat selected was a 22 x 6 x 2.5 row boat with one mast and a second mast was erected. Provisions for three weeks was stored in the boat and when all was ready the Captain and the six men set off in the frail little craft. With them they had blue lights, rockets and all as well as an ample supply of water.

Two sails were set and the little company divided into two watches, worked at the oars when the wind failed. Each watch comprised three men, one man relieving one of the rowers every half hour. After 24 hours at sea the Captain decided to go to Tongu which was only five hundred miles away but the elements decided otherwise and the wind veered to their original destination of Suva. The first day by means of the sail aided by the oars, 66 miles were covered. Next day a southeast breeze sent the boat scurrying across the water a distance of 99 miles, the record of the trip. But the wind was not always favorable and for two days the gallant party was held up by and on one day having rowed 25 miles in the teeth of a storm they were driven back 10 miles, despite two sea anchors, put out. Rain added to the discomfort. When the sun shone the heat was intense. At night the cold was intense and again they suffered. Day after day they struggled on toward Suva, and never sighting a sail in the broad expanse of water. For 14 perilous days the dreary trip lasted and at last on Sunday the 20th of September they at 11 o'clock, arrived at Suva and their haven. The port was quiet and none was there who knew the perils the insignificant little boat and her crew had braved. The Chatham seemed the natural vessel to hail and few words were necessary to bring forth a hearty welcome. The weary battlers with pained efforts got aboard the warship but so stiff were their limbs that one and all fell down on the deck when they stepped on board. But kind friends were quickly to their aid and soon they had forgotten their past misery in the enjoyment of the hospitality of the Brits. Captain Murchison had his anxiety relieved as to the crew who had stood loyally by the sinking vessel when the Captain of the Chatham undertook on the next day to sail for Sunday Island and effect a rescue of the marooned mariners.

DEATHS IN CANADA FROM TUBERCULOSIS

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.-Tuberculosis in its various forms was responsible for 5,225 deaths in eight provinces of Canada in 1920 according to a bulletin issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. In Ontario the number of deaths was 2,290; in Nova Scotia 785; in Manitoba 455; in British Columbia 466; in New Brunswick 388; in Alberta 331; in Saskatchewan 337; in P. E. Island 125. Quebec's statistics are not included with those of the other provinces, but it is not stated that the number of deaths in that province between June 1919 and June 1920 was 3,190.

Primary tuberculosis was the cause of 4,212 of the 5,225 deaths; tubercular meningitis 328; abdominal tuberculosis 229; acute military tuberculosis 96; tuberculosis of the spinal column 68; tuberculosis of the joints 27; tuberculosis of other organs 132; disseminated tuberculosis 31; lupus 2; scrofula 5. The number of deaths from tuberculosis in the eight provinces rose from 416 in January to 548 in May and declined steadily to 269 in December. In May 1921 the number of deaths from tuberculosis in the eight provinces was 453 of which 215 occurred in Ontario; 67 in Nova Scotia; 39 in New Brunswick; 37 in British Columbia; 35 in Manitoba; 34 in Saskatchewan; 23 in Alberta; 13 in Prince Edward Island. Statistics for subsequent months of 1921 have not yet been published.

MANY USES FOR CORK.

The finest cork in the world comes from Spain. The province of Andalusia is particularly famous for its cork trees. Cork stoppers manufactured in Spain are exported thence to all parts of the world; likewise fine and very fine and smooth sheets of cork which are used for tips of cigarettes, linings of hats and helmets and to some extent, curiously enough, for the printing of visiting cards.

Cork sawdust for the making of bricks and combined with coal dust and tar for fuel briquettes; also for packing fruit. The extent of its consumption for the last purpose may be judged by the fact that each barrel of grapes exported contains eight pounds of this material and annually the exportation of grapes from Spain amounts to 3 million barrels.

Finally the waste scraps of cork are pressed into bales, dried and shipped to France, England and the United States, where they are used for insulating and various other purposes.

George Loane Tucker, the pioneer, was noted for his fastidious tastes. Mr. Tucker was having one day in a Los Angeles taurant and at a nearby table a movie king whose table manners left much to be desired. The movie king's table manners were in a specially bad manner. Eating away he leaned towards Mr. Tucker and said: "This is darn good soup George, it sounds good," Mr. Tucker replied.
