SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VII. AUGUST 18.

THE RULER'S DAUGHTER.

Mark 5: 21-43.

GOLDEN TEXT.

"And taking the child by the hand, he saith unto her, Talitha cumi; which is, being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto thee, arise."—Mark 5: 41.

POINTED SUGGESTIONS.

By Rev. D. W. Snider.

The cry of need has right of utterance above the acclaim of the admiring and curious. Jesus always gives it the right of way. Little does He heed the babble of the crowd, but the beseeching voice of burdened prayer never fails to reach His ears or to commend His healing compassion.

And those who, under ordinary circumstances, cannot picture themselves as making an exhibition of their need before the gazing eyes of the world are indinerent to any manner of surroundings when love is in pain and urgent. The one who truly feels his need of Jesus will seek Him openly in any throng.

Possibly no deeper love-note is ever struck than that of parental love. No greater depth of anguish is ever reached in the human spirit than that which springs from concern for the welfare of a child. Children may fail to appreciate what parents fully understand what was burning in the heart of Jairus when, falling at the feet of Jesus, he besought Him much.

Of course, the multitdde was touched by the scene, but the mercurial throng is ever ready to be touched. It is ready for the new sensation, whether it means laughter or tears. The thing to be remembered is this: What lonesome and tragic things are happening in the heart of a crowd. The poor woman had nothing of the mood of the crowd upon her as she pressedher suffering way to Jesus that she might touch but a tassel of His garment.

But Jesus meets the faith-cry and the faith-touch by His divine sympathy and healing power. The desperate need of the ruler of the synagogue is not forgotten while he stays a moment to bless the woman whose trouble had been made worse by professional incapacity for nearly a score of years.

Those brief minutes, however, to the heart-broken father were long as her score of years. Would Jesus never come? And while he is in agony over the delay the word he feared to hear has been spoken. But Jesus heard it also. A message for the ages has come out of that fact. Listen: "Fear not, only believe." May we not guess that Jesus placed His hand upon the shoulder of the sorrow-stricken father when He said it. Jesus is the Comforter.

The merely curious and the scornfully unteachable deprive themselves of all opportunity to witness the working of the power of God. They are put forth from the place of divine and beneficent operation. There are none who so blind themselves to the sight of the highest and holiest things as the world's smart Alecs.

Jesus was pained at the funeral customs of His day. A portion of the time given to the study of this lesson might well be spent in a canvass of such customs today. Are not some of them pagan still?

The Master has instruction for the men of faith. Bless God for what was taught in the home of Jairus concerning death. Is it not time to take the view which Jesus has of it and to accept His mastery over it? "The child is not dead, but sleepeth." "Damsel, I say unto thee, arise."

LESSON VIII. AUGUST 25.

THE VISIT TO NAZARETH.

Luke 4: 16-30.

GOLDEN TEXT.

"He came into His own, and they that were His own received Him not."—John 1: 11.

POINTED SUGGESTIONS.

By Rev. D. W. Snider.

"Where he had been brought up." That's it, just about every time. Whenever a boy brings fame to an obscure village or turns the drift of it from ignoble fame, it is usually found that the home was behind him; earnest, faithful, godly parents to whom he had been subject. There is no substitute for home-training.

"As his custom was." There it is again. "Habit," which some one says "is ten times nature." is re-
