CHAPTER LVIII

It was a few minutes after eight when a wild-eyed, white-faced young man sprang from a shivering flivver before it had completely stopped and ran fleetly up the long path to the front door of the Curtis mansion.

"Where's my father, Sawyers?" Clay Curtis demanded, panting for breath.

"In the library, Mr. Clay. He hasn't had any dinner, sir. I wish you would try to persuade him to eat something."

But Clay pushed past him without an answer, almost running through the music room to the library.

"Dad! Where's Billy? What's happened to her?" he demanded.

"Why, Clay, son, I'm glad to see you!" T. Q. Curtis rose and held out his hand to his son.

"Where's Billy, Dad? What have you done to her?" Clay ignored his father's greeting.

"She's left the house, son. How did you know that anything had happened to her? She's perfectly well, she left of her own accord, over my appeal to her to stay—to stay always—"

"Then what did Winnie Shelton mean by telephoning me that Billy was in great danger and that I was to come here at once?" Clay demanded hotly.

"I think you'd better sit down a moment, son, and let me tell you what has happened here today. I'll be as brief as possible, but I insist upon your listening to me."

Clay did not sit down, but stood leaning against the desk, his hands gripping the edge of it. While his father rapidly sketched the events of the day, not glossing over his own folly, Clay's hot, angry young eyes never left T. Q.'s face.

"So Billy turned you down!" Clay cried out exultingly when his father had finished. "Thank God for that! But what did Winnie Shelton mean by that message of hers—that Billy is in danger?"

"Didn't Billy go home to her mother?" T. Q.'s voice betrayed his alarm.

"No, I've been at home since six. I think we'd better put a few questions to Miss Winnie Shelton," Clay decided grimly. "Just to be on the safe side where that hard-boiled baby is concerned, we'd better ask Mrs. Meadows to go to her room with us. You've still got her under lock and key?"

"I thought it best to have her kept to her room until tomorrow," T. Q. pressed a button on his desk and almost immediately Sawyers answered. "Please ask Mrs. Meadows to join me at once in Miss Shelton's room, Sawyers."

As T. Q. fitted the key into the lock of Winnie's door, Mrs. Meadows came hurrying from her own room, summoned by Sawyers on the house telephone.

Winnie was pacing up and down the room. Her small white teeth were biting savagely at the knuckles of one clenched fist, and her beautiful little pink and white face was distorted with fury.

"I thought that message would bring you on the run!" She walked upon Clay, ignoring T. Q. and Mrs. Meadows.

"What did you mean?" Clay seized her arm and shook her. "Where's Billy?"

"Less than forty-five minutes ago she was in Dal Romaine's apartment, helping him to pack his suitcase to elope with him."

"Where is Romaine's apartment?"

"You don't think they'll be there now, do you?" Winnie asked sarcastically.

"So that's what she meant when she said she had other plans for her life," T. Q. said dazedly. "My God! If she'd only confided in me—"

"You forget Mr. Curtis, that Dal Romaine is my nephew!" Mrs. Meadows interrupted laughingly.

"I'm forgetting nothing, Mrs. Meadows," T. Q. caught her up sternly. "I never trusted the foreign-looking devil, and now the girl who is dearer to me than any other person in the world except my son is running away with him to marry him—"

"Marry him!" Winnie's ugly laugh barked. "If I know that bird he won't marry her until she's legally adopted by T. Q. Curtis, the multi-millionaire!"

"What do you mean, Winnie Shelton!" Clay's grip on her arm tightened.

"Let me go, or I'll die before I'll tell you how to get on their trail!" she panted. "Now! I'll tell you all I know about this dark-skinned bird with the gypsy blood in his veins," she taunted them and herself bitterly. "But you've got to listen while I'm in the humor to talk. and her finger pointed dramatically at Mrs. Meadows, who went deathly pale—"sent for her grand little nephew as soon as she settled down in the lap of luxury and got the lay of the land."

"Mr. Curtis, I protest! I will not stay and be insulted—" Mrs. Meadows began majestically.

"You would pull that line, wouldn't you?" Winnie flicked her whip of scorn at the trembling woman. "No, you stay here or I'll shut up and let precious little Billy be ruined by the man she's run after so hard for a year."

"Go on, Winnie!" T. Q. commanded her sternly.

J. Anthony White Tells Remarkable Experience

Safeguarded His Health in South America With "Nerviline"

From far-off Jamaica comes the convincing testimony of Mr. White, who owes his very life to the remarkable properties of Nerviline. "Nerviline has been worth its weight in gold to me. Travelling in this colony and in South America, I found it an invaluable aid. Whether it was cramps, sour stomach or diarrhoea, Nerviline corrected the trouble quickly. If my throat was sore, or if I had earache, stiff neck or stiff joints, if I rubbed on Nerviline I always got quick relief. For sprains, muscle soreness and rheumatism, I have proved Nerviline to be a boon. It has always safeguarded my health, and I advise all others to go to the nearest chemist's shop for a bottle or two of this trusty family remedy."

SPLENDID JOINT MEETING IN NORTH BEDEQUE HALL

A large and representative joint meeting was held last Wednesday evening, the 15th inst., in the North Bedeque Hall. This community had not been favored for some years past in having a political meeting during any recent campaign, nevertheless this meeting was enthusiastically attended, notwithstanding a report circulated by interested parties that there was to be no meeting. The meeting had been advertised for three weeks, and had not been cancelled by the Conservative candidates.

Mr. D. B. McDonald was unanimously chosen as chairman by the meeting, and he presided in a fair, capable and impartial manner.

Mr. Walter M. Lea was the first speaker. He expatiated at some length on the legislation of the Bell Government, and tried to make it appear that the Government had spent less money and gave more service than the Stewart administration. He failed to mention the extra taxation on everything tangible and intangible imposed by the Bell Government. He also failed to remind the audience of his own injunction that if the people did not take their taxation medicine it must be administered to them as soon as it is administered to children. He criticized the Stewart Government for removing the poll tax and gave that administration no credit for imposing a tax on gasoline where outsiders as well as citizens are obliged to pay alike. He touched lightly upon the Government Control measure, stating that his colleague, Mr. Horace Wright would deal with it. Mr. Lea was a most respectful hearer, but failed to create any enthusiasm.

Mr. Louis Laird, Conservative candidate, was the next speaker. On rising he received a very warm reception from the audience. At the outset he outlined the pre-election promises of Premier Stewart from 1923 to 1927. Every one of these promises had been fulfilled with the exception of one, namely, the development of the mussel industry, which, owing to the later method of using chemical fertilizers rendered unnecessary. He referred to a number of planks in Premier Stewart's platform and justified each. By what he knew of Premier Stewart and his legislative measures during the past four years he assured the audience that the present platform would be carried out in its entirety. He spoke of the strides the butter and cheese industry had made during the past few years, mentioning particularly the high standard attained by these products during the past two years under the inspectorship of Dairy Inspector McDonald. As a result our cheese and butter stand today the highest in Canada in quality. The roads have been well maintained and the cost of construction has been about one-half of that under the Bell Government. The maintenance of the roads has been well kept up. In striking contrast to the neglect of his service under the Bell Government. The donations to charitable purposes, namely, the hospitals, orphanages, Red Cross, Deaf and Dumb Institutions, etc., which were pitifully meagre under the Bell Government, had been gener-

CARRIED WIFE TO BED

Suffered So She Could Not Walk. Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Minesing, Ontario.—"I am a practical nurse and I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to suffering women. For three months I was almost helpless and could not sit at the table long enough to drink a cup of tea. Many a time my husband carried me to bed, I would be so weak. Then he read the paper of a woman suffering as I did who got better after taking the Vegetable Compound, so he went and got it for me. When I had taken three bottles I was just like a new woman and have had splendid health ever since. When I feel any bearing-down pains I always take it; sometimes a half bottle or whatever I need. It is my only medicine and I have told many a one about it. Any one wanting to know more about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I will gladly write to her. I do all I can to recommend it for I feel I owe my life and strength to it."—Mrs. NERAL BOWSER, R. R. 1, Minesing, Ontario.

Do you feel broken-down, nervous, and weak sometimes? Do you have this horrid feeling of fear which sometimes comes to women when they are not well? Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is excellent to take at such a time. It always helps, and if taken regularly and persistently will relieve this condition.

ous under the Stewart administration. One of the principal planks in Premier Stewart's platform was the improved temperance measure. He said in this connection that Prince Edward Island cannot stand alone on this question among its sister provinces. Seven provinces have tried prohibition and they found it a failure. There are now only two provinces, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island that are out of line with all the other provinces. We, too, have found prohibition a failure under successive governments for 27 years, and he hoped Prince Edward Island would be in line with the other provinces after June 25th. Previous to prohibition coming into force in this province, the people knew nothing about rum-running, moonshine, home-brew, the drinking of essences and shoe polish, bay rum or bootleggers. All these came in under prohibition. The lid was lifted a few days ago in the Capital City of the Province and the revelations were startling. There were 157 places in which liquor was illegally sold. Are we going to have these conditions perpetuated in this Province? He thought the country was now awake and ready to correct these disgraceful conditions, and were prepared to give Government Control a fair trial. The general impression throughout the Province is that they are back of Government Control for better temperance. He read a personal letter from Mr. Frank Montgomery, a former resident of Bedeque, now residing in Wetaskwin, Sask., giving as he believed a true account of the liquor traffic under prohibition and Government Control in that province. While Government Control is not a complete cure it is regarded there as far superior to prohibition.

Mr. Horace Wright was the next speaker, or rather, he read extracts from certain newspapers dealing almost exclusively on the benefits of prohibition. He expressed practically no opinions of his own; he wanted simply to hold on to prohibition, and as administered at present. As his matter was not new he made a wearisome exhibition, and was quite coolly received.

Mr. Norman Lowther followed. Mr. Lowther modestly admitted that he was a young and practically inexperienced politician. He was cautious and careful in his remarks and was prepared to back them up. He was asked by one in the audience how much the present Government had spent in the enforcement of prohibition. Mr. Lowther replied in a very lucid manner the statistics of the Stewart Government with regard to prohibition. He fully satisfied the questioner and the audience why some persons who had been convicted were liberated before their jail term expired. It was not the action of the Attorney-General, but because of petitions to the highest tribunal for clemency and charity. By his explanation of all these matters he won the full confidence of his audience who applauded him warmly. Mr. Lowther was in a particularly favorable position to know about the brief prepared for the adjustment of the railway taxation of which the Province received $40,000, and of the brief prepared for the Duncan Commission for which the Province received an additional subsidy of $125,000, totalling $165,000 for all of which he gave Premier Stewart and his Government full credit. He referred to the fact that these claims had existed during the Bell and previous governments, and no effort had been made to procure them with the exception of that made by Premier Matheson, who secured $100,000 yearly on account. This account is still open. Premier Stewart secured a generous slice of it and he will get more of it, if elected, as it now seems quite certain he shall be. He was heartily in accord with Premier Stewart's improved temperance measure, and he felt sure that the Premier's promise in this respect would be fully carried out. He sat down amid loud and hearty applause.

Under the agreement, the first speaker, Mr. W. M. Lea was given ten minutes to reply. Mr. Lea gave this time to the federal representative, Mr. A. E. McLean, M.P., who spoke on the prosperity of the Province and the way in which the King Government was endeavoring to assist the people and particularly the farmers of P. E. Island, by having potato warehouses erected at different points; the improvement of wharves and a new railway station in Summerside. He touched lightly on prohibition and reminded the people that the less they spent in drink the more money
