CAPITOL SUMMERSIDE

Lucille Ball, James Craig in New Action-Romance

—Based on Clarence Budington Kelland's vivid story of the Old Southwest shortly after the Civil War, "Valley of the Sun" stars Lucille Ball and James Craig.

James Craig the scout, in trouble with Army authorities because of his sympathy for the Apaches, meets the restaurant girl Lucille Ball and with the aid of a British remittance man and an old desert character, endeavors to keep her from marrying Sawyer a crooked Indian agent.

Because of Sawyer's thieving, the Apaches prepare to raid the white settlement. They capture Sawyer along with the scout and the girl, but the scout makes a desperate effort to save Sawyer's life, and finally does so on the agent's promise to make restitution.

When Sawyer reneges and surrenders the scout to the Army authorities, the Apaches start the raid. How the scout escapes and the climactic scene of the film is being shown at the Capitol today.

The information was contained in an article directing a second appeal for help from the entire R.C.A.F. (The R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. have dropped more than 10,000 tons of bombs on and near the Krupp works at Essen, now the "most-bombarded city in the world.")

With their smashing victories the Allied troops had fulfilled the promise of Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Commander-in-Chief of all ground forces under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, that they would "drive the enemy into the sea."

To French troops, who fought valiantly in the drive upon Bizerte and in battles to the south, Gen. Henri Giraud addresses an order of the day declaring that "on Joan of Arc day—May 8—Tunis has been liberated, Bizerte has been set free."

Gen. Mast, whom Giraud named Deputy General of Tunisia, is a DeGaulist, and his appointment there is considered a move towards conciliation of French political elements. He now is in Beirut, Lebanon, recovering from injuries suffered in an accident, and Gen. Alphonse Juin, commander of French troops in the field, will assume his duties temporarily.

Very Large War Loan Meeting At Murray Harbor

Over two hundred and fifty people were present at the War Loan meeting at Murray Harbor last evening. The hall was completely filled with a number only able to find standing room.

The chairman was Mr. James F. Herring who outlined briefly the object of the meeting and then called on the principal speaker of the evening, Rev. W. C. Picketts who said that this War Loan is the greatest undertaking of this country ever faced.

He spoke about the motto of this loan "Back The Attack" and that we are pledged to the men who are going to make this attack, to a sacred contract we must fulfill.

He said the territory was not yet all covered and the loan books are still open but that when they close he felt confident King's County would be right up to front.

The next speaker was B. Graham Rogers of the Travel Bureau who is in charge of the moving picture being shown at these meetings.

During his remarks he thanked Mr. S. D. Hugh who had run special electrical wiring to the hall in order that the movies could be shown and also Mr. Robert Bell who was in charge of the hall.

As the speaker dried up considerably during the day a number of people came quite long distances to this meeting. The speakers were listened to with an equal attention and it was undoubtedly a most successful meeting. The war loan pictures "All These Things" and the Russian film created a great deal of interest.

Last Man From Dunkerque; In On African Kill

By ELMER DULMAGE Canadian Press Staff Writer

Nobody in North Africa can possibly be enjoying the sight of a German more than the British soldier. His name is George Alexander, the commander of all Allied ground forces that are now in the enemy's hands.

After waiting three years for this triumph, he must be loving every minute of it.

Grimmest Day Gen. Alexander remembers the grimmiest day of all for our side—when the British evacuated Dunkerque in June, 1940. He is famous as "the last man to leave Dunkerque" in the great evacuation that saved 350,000 British and French troops on the eve of fall.

He was Maj.-Gen. Alexander then. Back home after Dunkerque he was given the Southern Command in England when he came into close touch with the Canadians and won their admiration. His training methods were advanced, designed to prepare his men to learn of all that was to be suffered another day.

In March, 1942, he was named commander in Burma and there, with his forces almost outnumbered by at least three to one, he was forced to retreat.

Alexander Montgomery Then the Middle East Command came to him last August. The team of Alexander and Montgomery was formed with Gen. Alexander in charge of all operations and Gen. Bernard Montgomery at the head of the 8th Army. Together they saved Egypt and drove Marshal Rommel's Axis forces across Libya and into Tunisia, where the stage was set for the kill.

Under the American Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Gen. Alexander commanded the Allied ground forces—meaning, in the present assault, the British 1st and 8th Armies, the American 2nd Corps and French units.

"We are going to drive the enemy into the sea," those words he wrote not many hours before Bizerte and Tunis fell to his men.

Yes, he remembers Dunkerque. He doesn't intend that the enemy should similarly succeed in an evacuation.

S'ide Y's Men Hear Talk On Peace Planning

Mr. Harlan Ober of Boston, was the guest speaker at the regular weekly supper meeting of the Summerside Y's Men's Club last evening. George Clark presided.

Mr. L. W. Hancock advised the meeting that was the intention of the Prince County Victory Loan Committee to have $50 aerial bomb day on next Friday with a radio sale. He pointed out that there were more than 100 small subscriptions.

Mr. J. P. Arnett of the Summerside Board of Trade was present and addressed the meeting with reference to the proposed public meeting in the High School auditorium on May 25 to acquaint the public with the seriousness of the need for increased bed accommodation at the Sanatorium. The chairman then introduced Mr. Harlan Ober of Boston.

Mr. Ober took as his subject the need of immediate planning for peace. The speaker began by saying people were getting increasingly realistic and were looking into the causes of things. He said the causes of war were many and if we didn't conquer this disease of war our civilization might follow the ancient civilization into oblivion. During the last war if a person suggested talking of the peace the practical man would have said: "Let's finish the war first. Most people realize now that war is a most impractical thing. The British Empire is the greatest organization with a world view point in the world today and it could take a leading part in expanding these principles to the various nations in the world could federate."

The main theme of the speaker's remarks were on the need for world federation and on the evil of nationalism. He said that there need not be any great loyalties to a federation of states. Going back into history he recounted how William the Conqueror unified Britain which was up to that time a collection of many states. He said that the principles which he applied to England must be applied to the world view point in the world today and it would take a leading part in expanding these principles to the various nations in the world could federate.

A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by Mr. E. Bell and seconded by Lloyd Gorrell. Guests present were J. P. Arnett, Gordon White, J. P. McNelis, J. J. Enman and J. E. Murphy.—S.

Sea-Power!

Not all the Empire's sea-power speaks from the mouths of firing guns.

Great, silent schools of North Pacific salmon are supplying another form of power... the power of nutritious food.

Chemists have shown that the oil in canned salmon is as rich in vitamin "D" as high-quality cod-liver oil.

That is why millions of cases are moving to Britain and Empire fighting fronts... a fact worth remembering in times of peace.

Canadian Army Women Become Staff Officers

OTTAWA, May 7 (CP)—Establishment beyond question of the legal status of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation was one of numerous suggestions made in the House of Commons today before members adopted a motion to set up a select, 23-member committee on radio broadcasting.

For nearly three hours the House debated the motion of War Services Minister LaFlèche to set up the select committee.

It was carried shortly after six o'clock when the House adjourned until Monday. The debate did not bring any opposition to the motion but gave members an opportunity to discuss the report of last year's committee and suggest what should be studied this year.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, said the CBC had been variously described as an independent corporation and as an arm of the Government. This "centaur-like" status of the corporation should end, he said.
