Can never more be filled.

Gertrude Stein Dies In Paris

PARIS, July 29 — (AP) — Gertrude Stein, 72, the beloved but puzzling American writer who opened her heart and her home to hundreds of American soldiers during the Second Great War, died Saturday night in the American Hospital at Neuilly, a Paris suburb.

There had been no earlier reports that Miss Stein was ill and hospital officials declined to state the nature of her illness or how long she had been confined to hospital. A native of Allegheny, Pa., Miss Stein began writing while a student at Radcliffe College and published more than 20 books and other works—most of them so obscure as to be virtually unknown.

Such typical phrases as "A rose as a rose is a rose" and "Pigeon on the grass also" gained Miss Stein a world-wide—if headshaking—literary reputation.

Miss Stein lived in France for more than 40 years. She never married.

Miss Stein's death came only a few days after publication in the United States of her latest book, "Brewster and Willie".

Lore, a close friend of the famous French painters Picasso and Matisse, Miss Stein was for more than 40 years a leading and familiar figure in the artistic and literary circles of Paris' left bank.

ice fields July 22 and steamed into Thule, in Smith Sound north of Baffin Bay.

The contingent was led by the converted ice-breaker, U. S. S. Whitwood commanded by Lt. Comdr. William H. Davy, another member of the Byrd expedition. The ice-breaker North Wind and the seaplane tender U. S. S. Norton Sound followed in the Whitwood's wake.

As the ice retreats, the ships are scheduled to continue working northward in an effort to simplify existing knowledge of navigational and weather conditions in the arctic and to provide cold weather routine training for the crews.

The ships are scheduled to return to Boston in October.

Coast Guard Ships In Arctic Fleets

WASHINGTON, July 29 — (AP) — A small contingent of United States Navy and Coast Guard ships has penetrated through arctic ice fields into the Greenland harbor of Thule, only 950 miles from the North Pole, and the farthest north any large ship has reached at this season of the year, the Navy Department disclosed today. Last C.W.A.C. In Halifax Area

HALIFAX, July 29 — (CP) — The last members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps in the Halifax area prepared tonight to return to civilian life this week as the corps at Military District No. 6 was scheduled to reach "nil strength" July 31.

From a wartime peak of 800, strength of the C.W.A.C. here has dropped to 50 at the present time.

First recruits for the C.W.A.C. in Halifax, which is the centre of the military district covering Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island were signed on Sept. 30, 1941. After that women in uniform gradually took over jobs held by men in the district, ranging from driving staff cars to handling complicated ranging instruments at the Army's anti-aircraft artillery school at nearby Eastern Passage.

C.W.A.C. members in this district were the first to be taken off strength in Canada. The picture for the remainder of the Dominion is a gradual closing of women's army establishments with all members at depots by Aug. 31.

U.S. To Conduct Giant Super-Rockets

WASHINGTON, July 29 — (AP) — Several score giant rockets, including missiles designed to reach substantially greater heights than were attained by the German V-2, are to be built for the United States Army Air Forces to find out more about the upper atmosphere, officials disclosed today.

Plans call for contracts with one or more aircraft manufacturers to construct 100 rockets capable of reaching altitudes ranging upward from less than 50 miles to more than 130 miles. The total cost is estimated at approximately $2,000,000 and some are expected to be ready for firing by the fall of next year.

These rockets, research officials said, are strictly for the scientific purpose of carrying instruments aloft to collect data on cosmic rays, along with information on such matters as atmospheric pressure and temperatures. They will not be weapons but are to serve as pioneers for the long-range guided missiles and "space vehicles" which Maj. Gen. Curtis E. Lemay, air forces research director, has predicted as likely developments of the next few years.

As a next stage in the effort to explore the ionosphere, a whole family of experimental guided missiles with one member capable of reaching 500 miles above the earth with a 500-pound load is a glow in the eye of air forces' researchers.
