

Woman's Realm -:- Social and Personal -:- Fashions -:- Literature

The HOUSEWIFE and HER ACTIVITIES

APRIL Who is this but April... Darning down the lane... Weeping in the sunshine...

Wide brimmed hats are smart especially with open crowns... The "tenor" collar is one of the latest fashions...

BOY POSSESSES POWER OVER DEADLY SNAKE

A child of six whose pet is a large multi-colored poisonous snake is beloved by the superstitious villagers of Nandyal, Punjab...

LONG WEDDED COUPLE DIE ON SAME DAY

"Until death do us part." A husband and wife of Youngstown, Ohio, joined hands in death just as years ago they had joined in matrimony...

CHILD OF SIX HAS BRAIN OF ADULT FROM ANATOMICAL VIEWPOINT

A child has three ages—mental, physical and chronological, instead of only chronological, Dr. T. Wingate Todd, professor of anatomy in Western Reserve University, Cleveland, told the Cincinnati Academy of Medicine recently...

THE CRYSTAL CYLINDER

Crystal cylinders are now being used for smart decorative effects, replacing the tanks which were previously in favour...

AN "ALL-GOLD" SPRING

Women are to go all gold this spring, it is foretold. Collars and cuffs of gold tissue, gold thread neckties and golden buttons are to be widely seen...

ATTRACTIVE HEAD-DRESSES

Head-dresses are the fashion for evening wear. Among those seen on a recent occasion were a spiky head-dress of pink quartz, a wreath of pink glass and blue farget-me-nots...

HOW TO CHOOSE POULTRY

Always be careful to see that the breast-bone is not broken; this is sometimes done to make a bird appear plump. The young cock bird has smooth legs and short spurs...

Most good poulters nowadays prefer to chill lightly the birds rather than freeze them, as the chilling process does not destroy the delicate flavour of the bird as freezing does...

BEAUTY TREATMENTS BECOME MORE AND MORE ESSENTIAL

Beauty treatments become more and more essential. Here is the latest recipe which is guaranteed to result in perfect health—the basis of perfect beauty...

DRY MEALS ARE GOOD FOR INDIGESTION

Hurried meals are injurious to the stomach, and are often the cause of flatulence afterwards, says a doctor. The first process of digestion takes place in the mouth...

ATTENTION

GRIDDLE CAKE MAKERS

For that Golden-brown perfection use Barbour's ACADIA BAKING POWDER

Barbour's ACADIA BAKING POWDER

G. E. BARBOUR CO. LIMITED

Dorothy Dix

Make Life Interesting for Your Husband or Wife and You Will Have Made Him Vamp-Proof and Her Sweet-Tempered—For it is Dull Evenings That Make Fretful Wives and Wandering Husbands

One of the obligations of matrimony on which we do not lay sufficient stress is the necessity for husbands and wives to make life interesting for each other. Yet this is not only one of their highest duties, but it is the one thing that would do more than anything else to make marriage a success...

After all, married people are just children at heart. As long as they are interested and diverted they are good. It is only when they are bored that they get into mischief and crave new playmates and do forbidden things...

This is a matter of common knowledge, yet when the average couple get married they do not give it a thought. They seem to take it for granted that the supply of romance they laid up in their courtship days will last them to their golden wedding...

Sometimes they are grouches and fault-finders who never say a pleasant word to their families. Sometimes they are glooms who keep the domestic atmosphere down to the freezing point...

When these men find that their wives have grown bitter and disgruntled, they throw up their hands in amazement over women's unreason and feel themselves physically comforted...

What women want is something besides food and clothes. They want spiritual as well as physical sustenance. They want to be taken home a bunch of violets now and then instead of a head of cabbage...

How men ever got the idea that just to be married was all the joy any woman asked for and that all the amusement she ever craved was just cooking and washing and tending the baby, and that she had come to the end of a perfect day when she had spent the evening watching him snooze over his newspaper...

And wives fall into the same mistake. They expect their husbands to be satisfied with them because they are good cooks and housekeepers and good mothers and good penny-pinchers...

And they are terribly surprised and shocked and feel that they have been very much ill used when their husbands forsake them for some gay and witty women who entertain and amuse them and puts pep into life for them...

Many recipes are given to wives about how to hold their husband's love—and, faith, wives need them—but they might all be boiled down into this: Make life interesting for him and you make him vamp-proof...

"Apologize at once," she replied. "I only meant it for a joke," replied the child. "Well," said her mother, hoping to smooth things over, "it would have been a much better joke if you had said, 'How pretty you are.'"

WOMEN CAN'T HAVE BOTH

Winning Ways and Sluggish Liver Clear Complexion and Poisoned System

It seems just bad luck for most women that the times when they want to look and feel their best, something happens. Sick headache, nerves, aches and pains and a feeling of depression...

Beecham's PILLS THE GREAT REGULATOR

THE COOK'S CORNER

Rhubarb Floe

Two cups stewed and sweetened rhubarb, 4 tablespoons flour, 3 egg whites, 3 egg yolks, 2 cups milk, 1/2 cup granulated sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla...

Rhubarb Turnovers

If you're planning rhubarb turnovers make at least two for each member of the family. They will want them. You need 2 cups rhubarb, cut in 1/2 inch lengths, 1 cup sugar, 1/2 cup water, 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons butter...

Rhubarb and Raisin Pie

Rhubarb and raisin pie—does that sound like a strange mixture? It's a luscious one. The ingredients: 2 cups rhubarb cut in inch pieces, 1 cup seeded raisins, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons butter, 1/2 cup sugar, 1 egg...

Upper Pie Crust

Do you have trouble getting the upper crust from the pastry board and slithering it in water to cover until rhubarb is tender and raisins are plump. Strain and thicken the liquid with flour and butter blended...

New Spring Smartness

Illustrated Dressmaking Lessons Furnished With Each Pattern By Ruth Rogers

Think of your favourite color and imagine how fascinating the scheme would be in a princely silk for this jaunty little dress for today's party. The ruffle trim can be of white, of plain toning crepe or lingerie as crisp plain embroidered or crinkled organdy...

No. 682. Size... Name... Street, Address... City... State

WAIVES THE HEARING

A colored man was arrested after Government agents had discovered a still on his premises and was brought before a United States commissioner. "What do you plead" asked the commissioner...

You Can't Fool a BLOOD Test

On November 14, 1932, a pale, thin girl walked into a physician's office and had her blood tested. The reason for her condition was at once evident. The haemoglobin content of her blood was only 68 per cent. Red corpuscle count only 4,800,000...

Sale of Household Furniture

AT 235 FITZROY STREET ON TUESDAY, APRIL 24th AT 1.30 P. M. Parlor, Dining Room, Bedroom, Kitchen Furniture, Carpets, etc. Terms Cash. J. A. McDONALD, Auctioneer.

Valuable Property in Charlottetown For Sale by Tender

Sealed tenders will be received by the undersigned to May 1st, 1934 for the purchase of 10.15 acres of land in Charlottetown, lying between the St. Peters Road and Kensington Road adjoining the Canadian National Railway, being the property of the Prince Edward Island Railway. A plan and description of which may be seen at the office of W. K. Rogers, City.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted. S. A. MACLEOD, Chairman Property Committee Prince Edward Island Hospital

AUCTION SALE OF LAND

Valuable farm of 39 1/2 acres at Tarantum Lot 35, with good barns. Property of the late James P. McAdam. Well watered. More than half the land clear and in high state of cultivation, balance has good growth of wood. FRED MACDAM, Executor. J. A. McDONALD, Auctioneer. L-2041

CLOSING OF ROADS MOTOR TRUCKS

Under authority of the Highway Traffic Act, Section 110, the Lieutenant Governor in Council has ordered with effect forthwith the closing of all public highways in this Province, outside the incorporated city and towns, to motor trucks which when loaded weigh in excess of 2000 lbs. The said public highways to remain closed until the 2nd day of May, 1934.

What Every Widow Knows!

By LUCILLE VAN SLYKE CHAPTER 54 BITTER SWEET BERRIES The drive to Greenwich with Mr. and Mrs. O'vany was rather a revelation to Molly Benedict. They were elderly and peaceful. Their car was a cumbersome closed one, moved under the sedate guidance of a chauffeur who knew their dislike for speed...

A Morning Smile

"Lily—'So you done mortgaged our 'll home.' " "Yes—'Je's temporarily, honey, 'll de mortgage am foreclosed." A minister and his wife were receiving a visit from a parishioner.

Sale of Household Furniture

At 55 Fitzroy Street On Thursday April 26th at 2 p. m. Odd chairs, mahogany book case, wardrobe, bed room furniture, dishes, carpets, etc. Terms Cash. J. A. McDONALD Auctioneer.

AUCTION SALE

There will be sold by public auction on the premises on Friday, April 27th, 1934, at 12 o'clock noon, the tenement houses and lot numbers 110 and 112 King Street, Charlottetown, and at 139 P. M. of the same day the cottage and lot number 12 Alley Street, Charlottetown. J. A. McDONALD, Auctioneer.

What Every Widow Knows!

"She is very ill now!" Molly asked. Mrs. O'vany sighed. "Desperately. Heart trouble you know. Propped up in her pillows, every breath torture. She has grown steadily worse these last few weeks. What I wanted to explain was this. She is one of my dearest friends—we were in school together. She was a distant relative of her own husband's and was adopted by her father when she was a girl of ten. Under much obligation to the senior Rogers. Owe him everything. She had and everything she was. And her husband died about three years after Kerry was born. Between the two of them, herself and her father, she was almost hidden in a mass of ivy. A superb old brick thing with great white pillars before it. The car stopped at a side entrance and a man servant came out and opened the car door for them. "How is she today, Hailer?" Mrs. O'vany asked. "Not so comfortable, madam," he replied. The hall was dim and rather oppressive. Molly waited while the chauffeur brought in the bags. Her own small one was handed to a maid who led her up the broad stairway. "Mrs. Rogers wanted you to have the door."

What Every Widow Knows!

Mr. Kerry's old room, the maid explained as she opened a door. "I'm at the end of the corridor if you want anything. Dinner will be at half-past seven." The door closed behind her, leaving Molly standing in the middle of a great cavern of a room, low ceilinged, but rather brightly gay. It was just as the youthful Kerry had left it twelve years before when he had gone away to college. The same prep school trophies hung on its walls. An oak over the mantel piece, cups won at tennis ranged along the mantel shelf, a wide window seat stacked with pillows adorned with school monograms. Big chunky furniture, the kind that had been called mission— Molly caught at a bookcase to steady herself. She felt faint and queer. This Kerry whose presence lingered in this vast and silent spot, was not her Kerry. Born of a younger brother of his, she found herself thinking. He smiled at her from a big group photograph of a hockey team—a chubby, mischievous Kerry whose towed head was cocked sideways from a huge old "turtle neck" sweater. Over the picture frame hung a dried branch from a bitter sweet vine, its dusty berries still showing the bright tinge of its gay orange and red foliage. Kerry himself had put it there. She knew that. She remembered his telling her about it. "Know that stuff that call bitter 'west'?" she seemed to hear him say. "Older it gets the prettier it is." There was a hurried tap at the door.

What Every Widow Knows!

Mr. Kerry's old room, the maid explained as she opened a door. "I'm at the end of the corridor if you want anything. Dinner will be at half-past seven." The door closed behind her, leaving Molly standing in the middle of a great cavern of a room, low ceilinged, but rather brightly gay. It was just as the youthful Kerry had left it twelve years before when he had gone away to college. The same prep school trophies hung on its walls. An oak over the mantel piece, cups won at tennis ranged along the mantel shelf, a wide window seat stacked with pillows adorned with school monograms. Big chunky furniture, the kind that had been called mission— Molly caught at a bookcase to steady herself. She felt faint and queer. This Kerry whose presence lingered in this vast and silent spot, was not her Kerry. Born of a younger brother of his, she found herself thinking. He smiled at her from a big group photograph of a hockey team—a chubby, mischievous Kerry whose towed head was cocked sideways from a huge old "turtle neck" sweater. Over the picture frame hung a dried branch from a bitter sweet vine, its dusty berries still showing the bright tinge of its gay orange and red foliage. Kerry himself had put it there. She knew that. She remembered his telling her about it. "Know that stuff that call bitter 'west'?" she seemed to hear him say. "Older it gets the prettier it is." There was a hurried tap at the door.

What Every Widow Knows!

Mr. Kerry's old room, the maid explained as she opened a door. "I'm at the end of the corridor if you want anything. Dinner will be at half-past seven." The door closed behind her, leaving Molly standing in the middle of a great cavern of a room, low ceilinged, but rather brightly gay. It was just as the youthful Kerry had left it twelve years before when he had gone away to college. The same prep school trophies hung on its walls. An oak over the mantel piece, cups won at tennis ranged along the mantel shelf, a wide window seat stacked with pillows adorned with school monograms. Big chunky furniture, the kind that had been called mission— Molly caught at a bookcase to steady herself. She felt faint and queer. This Kerry whose presence lingered in this vast and silent spot, was not her Kerry. Born of a younger brother of his, she found herself thinking. He smiled at her from a big group photograph of a hockey team—a chubby, mischievous Kerry whose towed head was cocked sideways from a huge old "turtle neck" sweater. Over the picture frame hung a dried branch from a bitter sweet vine, its dusty berries still showing the bright tinge of its gay orange and red foliage. Kerry himself had put it there. She knew that. She remembered his telling her about it. "Know that stuff that call bitter 'west'?" she seemed to hear him say. "Older it gets the prettier it is." There was a hurried tap at the door.