Bronze Bell Missing From Church Spire

MEDIA, Pa., July 22—A workman went up the 60 foot spire of the Lima World Tabernacle to remove a 75 pound bronze bell—and found it mysteriously missing.

The bell, an heirloom, owned by Mrs. Oscar C. Wilson, was loaned to the church about two years ago. The Rev. Edward L. Foote, pastor of the church, suggested that someone might have removed the bell from the loft as a lark, but police said they suspected a thief intended to melt it down and sell it for old metal.

While there they are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. McManus.

GEDDIE MEMORIAL CHURCH

New London. This historic church founded in 1836, overlooking the waters of New London harbour from the western shore, is to be the scene of services which it is hoped will result in a revival and renewal of interest in the life and work of the late Rev. Dr. John Geddie. The congregation has decided to set aside the last Sunday in July each year for this purpose. On Sunday, July 30th, at 11 a. m., Rev. W. M. Kannawin, D. D., of Toronto, will preach and at the evening service, which commences at 7.30 p. m., Rev. R. Moorhead Legate, D. D., of St. James Kirk, Charlottetown, will be the preacher. There will be special music at both of these services. There can be no doubt that a large number of people will desire to be present at one or both of these services and it is suggested that those who come from a distance should start in good time. If the weather is fine it may be necessary to hold the services in the church grounds.

STORY BOOK VERSIONS OF LOVE AND MARRIAGE

NEW YORK, July 22—A group of Columbia University educationists discussed today on the subject of divorces in Hollywood.

Said Dr. Goodwin B. Watson, psychologist:

Too many people are guided "by the story-book versions of love and marriage."

Clifford Lee Brownell, assistant professor of education, said the current group of divorces in Hollywood is a "great piece of work to educate people about marriage."

Another, who believes that the economic conditions of husband and wife often point the way to the divorce courts—Dr. Harold F. Clarke, economist, thinks it highly possible there may be developed a plan for subsidizing marriages of young folks—by whom. He did not say.

PENNSYLVANIA APPOINTS WOMAN LABOR SECRETARY

HARRISBURG, July 22—The woman governor Pinchot credits with uncovering "serious sweatshop conditions in Pennsylvania" today because state secretary of labor and industry under a Pinchot mandate to "carry on the battle of the people against sweatshops to the fullest extent."

Pleasant and good looking, firm and business-like, Miss Charlotte E. Carr received the assignment at a time when strikes are numerous in the state, and a legislative committee is investigating wages and working conditions. A native of Dayton, Ohio, she is 43, and doesn't care who knows it.

IF NATIONS WOULD HAVE CO-OPERATION

CHICAGO, July 22—The world as it could be was described by noted feminine leaders in addresses to the International Congress of Women's evening session last night.

"When nations cooperate" said Dame Rachel Crowley of England, in her address on that subject. "They have made remarkable progress in health, social and labor problems."

She cited the experience of the League of Nations in these fields, asserting its accomplishments there had been almost as great as its lack of success in such matters as disarmament, the Sino-Japanese issue and the World Economic difficulties.

"I feel sure" she said, "that if Japan had known the United States, which is not a member of the League of Nations, and the 56 nations in the League were sure to co-operate, it would have withdrawn from the (Sino-Japanese) conflict. But it knew we were not working as one world and gained courage from the fact."

"The material foundation has been laid for a new cultural age," Miss Jane Addams of Chicago's Hull House, told the delegates, "and the energies of mankind will have to find an outlet in the area of cultural advance."

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. ALEXANDER FALCONER

There passed peacefully away on Thursday, July 13th, Mrs. Alexander Falconer, a life long resident of South Granville. She had been ill for some months but bore her sickness with true Christian fortitude. Mrs. Falconer was the eldest daughter of the late William and Christy Gunn and was born May 6th, 1854. The funeral service was held on Saturday 15th. A short service was held at the home. Her remains were then taken to the Presbyterian Church of which the deceased was a life long member and service conducted by her pastor, Mr. Osborn. After the service all that was mortal of a kind and loving mother was laid to rest beside her husband who pre-deceased her by 25 years. In the community where Mrs. Falconer lived her many friends and acquaintances will miss her kindly acts and cheerful disposition so characteristic of the departed, but with her family a deeper sorrow exists, as she was the centre of their affection and to her their joys and sorrows were confided. There are left to mourn a family of five daughters and four sons who were privileged to be with her in her last illness. Mrs. Malcolm McLennan, Pleasant Valley, P. E. I., Mrs. Duncan Munroe, Mrs. Clyde Adams, Miss Flora M. of Providence, R. I., and Mrs. Chesley Howatt, Tryon, P. E. I., William H. South Elliot, Maine, George A. Shirley, Maine, John K. at home and Coll H., of Flagstone, B. C., also one sister, Mrs. Linus Allendorf, Wallerstown, Mass., and two brothers, Donald Gunn, of Vancouver, B. C., and Robert Gunn, Shirley Mills, Maine. (Patriot Please Copy)

WIVES OF AVIATORS SAY MRS. POST MUST BE UNDER A STRAIN

ST. PAUL, July 23—Maybe Mrs. Wiley Post is under a strain, the St. Paul Chapter of Loving and Loyal Wives of Aviators surmised today—but young women, they decided, should not be warned away from aviator husbands.

Apparently Mrs. Post, whose husband is now attempting a single-handed flight around the world, left too much of an opening when she advised members of her sex not to marry fliers.

The Trail Back Home

(H. L. Paugh)

IV

We travelled south of the lake often within sight of the water, across Wisconsin and Michigan, having left Minnesota far behind. I would judge the hoe the most suitable emblem for Minnesota. Many of those whom we met on the road carried hoes. Man and hoe seemed inseparable in this State. How strange those little patches of clearing seemed after the open spaces of the West. And that hoe farming would have been amusing if it were not so pathetic. The early settlers of the West can tell some tales of calm endurance. But those backwoodsmen who have cleared their land inch by inch, the men of the axe and hoe, what they have endured none but pioneers know.

Michigan is the iron state. The soil of Iron County is extremely red, much more so than many parts of Prince Edward Island. Ironwood, Iron River, Iron Mountain and such names are given to the towns of this region. On a steep incline by the highway was written in tiny growing plants, "Welcome to Iron County."

After a week of travelling we reached Sault Ste. Marie. We stopped to fill up with gas. And whom should we meet but the one man whom we knew in all that vast territory.

We crossed into Canada by ferry. It was with a feeling of elation that we hit the highway once again in our own native land. We headed for North Bay on Lake Nipissing through rough rolling country, on winding hilly roads. Great mountains of solid rock appeared to sit on otherwise level ground. Wherever a crack showed in the rock a stunted tree was bravely struggling for existence.

Next morning we picked up a young man from the relief camps. He was making his way the best he could to the railway. He had been caught in a heavy rain the night before. When we came upon him he was trying to dry letters and pictures from home. He carried these in a knap sack through all his travels. But he carried all his clothes on his back. We passed many relief camps containing from two to three hundred men each. Every camp flew the Union Jack. These men worked on the road. They were widening and straightening it out. This was no easy task for they often had to blast through several feet of solid rock or clear the primeval forest. They intend cementing these roads when properly built.

At length we reached Ottawa and spent a short time on the spacious grounds surrounding the parliament buildings. These magnificent buildings are of massive rock and me thought as I gazed upon their lofty towers how there could be so many rocks left in Ontario. The grounds are beautiful and artistically laid out, overlooking the Ottawa River where the cannons are placed. They are monuments to Canada's great Jacques Cartier, stand forever pointing to the ground, a fitting tribute to the explorers of our land. Queen Victoria, guarded by the British lion with Liberty awaiting to place the laurel wreath upon her brow, occupies the most prominent place. There are monuments to Mackenzie, the leader of the reform party, and some of those men whose efforts brought about the union of the provinces to form this great Dominion of ours. The most important of these being Sir John A. Macdonald. The grounds were guarded by red coats.

From Ottawa to Montreal was a delightful morning's ride. Many places that we passed had rugs for sale. Some were very beautiful. This region displayed splendid orchards in full bloom. Many winding streams make many bridges necessary. The scenery along the river was magnificent and tourist accommodations were well provided.

We spent part of the day in Canada's largest city, and visited Eaton's store. The building occupies a whole block with parking space for cars at the back. We travelled along the St. Lawrence for days. The chilly wind from the water made the air quite cold.

We did not go through the city of Quebec but crossed on the Quebec bridge just below the city to the town of Levis. This magnificent structure now stands suspended in mid-air, a glorious feat at last accomplished after failure. It looks substantial enough to last for generations. The highway occupies the centre. The railroad is on one side of the road, the street car line on the other with walks on the outer side of the bridge.

The railway runs along the river valley through Levis which consists of one street only. Directly behind a perpendicular wall of stone rises to a great height. The Heights of Levis, famous in history from which the English stormed the citadel of Quebec in the fateful year when the French hold on Canada was broken. As we stood upon that spot and viewed the city across the river with its steep inaccessible banks, we pictured that scene as described in the old school readers. The boat with Wolfe in its stern calmly floating down the river as he repeated the famous words "The paths of glory lead but to the grave." The landing at an unguarded spot on that eventful morning hundreds of years ago, while the garrison stormed the citadel from the heights above our heads. Here victor and vanquished shared a common fate, a common monument, and an honored place in the annals of Canada's history. The sacred ground upon which our heroes bled and none may trample o'er its sod with heart unmoved nor tears unshed.

We were now on the south bank of the St. Lawrence. We followed its course as far as Riviere-Du-Loup. The low mountains on the north can plainly be seen. The river is ever widening and dotted with tiny islands. It appears to be very rough a bad place for navigation during a storm. Hereafter to be found in abundance conveyances and relics of a by gone age that would delight the heart of an antique collector. Few people in this part of the country can speak English. Our conversations were limited to parlez-vous Francais.

From Riviere-Du-Loup we travelled south to St. Leonard. Then through Northern New Brunswick to Dalhousie. It was in this region that we frightened people almost out of their wits. The driver blew the horn to warn some pedestrians that a car was approaching, when a woman threw up her hands and shrieked with all her might, then started to run. A boy followed after. As far as we could see they were still going.

Through the lumber country of Northern New Brunswick as well as elsewhere the lumber yards were filled with lumber, much of which was old and weather beaten. The rivers were piled with logs. The mills stood idle.

The next lap of our journey was east to Chatham. A ferry crosses the Miramichi here but we detoured to New Castle to visit relatives. We left at eleven o'clock, reached Capr Tormentine in time to catch the boat and crossed to Borden.

Once again we stood upon our own native land.

The trip had taken two weeks. We travelled three thousand three hundred miles and consumed a hundred and fifty gallons of gas. We thoroughly enjoyed ourselves and saw a wonderfully interesting country. We intend to make the return trip by a different route and look forward to it with enthusiasm.

BAKER-MCARVILLE NUPTIALS

As the strains of the Wedding March was sweetly rendered by Mrs. Edgar Hickey, a very pretty wedding ceremony was solemnized at the Chapel, Indian River, Wednesday, June 21st, when Cecilia Ann, youngest daughter of Mr. Annie Baker, New Annan, became the bride of Mr. Leo McArville, a popular and prosperous resident of Margate, Rev. R. F. Macdonald performing the ceremony. The bride who is a popular young lady both in her own home-place and surrounding ones as well, was attractively attired in Royal Blue with sand hat, shoes, and accessories to match, and was attended by Miss Arlene Enman, who wore a pretty blue and grey combination, while the groom was ably supported by his brother, Mr. Fred McArville. Immediately after the ceremony, the bridal party motored to the Capitol, where they partook of a wedding dinner, thence to the home of the bride, where a delicious supper was served to the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. A large and jolly crowd of charivariers greeted the young couple, who, with the guests, whiled away the evening with music and dancing, after which the happy couple left for their future home at Margate, followed by every good wish from their many friends. Previous to her marriage the bride was given a miscellaneous shower of useful and costly gifts at her old home. The color scheme was pink and white and as the Wedding March was played by Mrs. G. W. Ramsay, Cecilia made a pretty picture dressed in pale pink, as she followed the acting young bride and groom in the persons of Ruth Enman and Charles Waugh respectively, to the room where the basket and bundles of gifts lay. The parcels were opened by Miss Ernestine Marchbank and the verses read by Mrs. Geo. Waite, who passed them to the bride-to-be, who in turn passed them to Miss Jean Walker, who nicely arranged them on a table nearby. After this procedure, an address was read and a beautiful blanket was presented to Cecilia by members of the Traveller's Rest Institute, in appreciation of her services as a past member, after which she feelingly thanked her friends for their generous giving and "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow" was heartily sung in unison. Dancing and music was enjoyed by a large crowd, the music being supplied by Mrs. George Ramsay, Mrs. Edgar Hickey, Messrs. Brendon Driscoll, Allie MacNeill and Vernon Campbell. A delectable luncheon was then served by the ladies, after which a hearty handshake was given to the prospective bride who has the very best wishes of all for many happy wedded years as she journeys along the routine of life.

Below is the address from Maple Leaf Institute, Traveller's Rest: Dear Sister Cecilia:—

Having received word of your approaching marriage, which informs us that two happy hearts will be made one, your sister members of the Maple Leaf Women's Institute wish you much joy. Please accept this gift with our earnest congratulations and good wishes for a long and happy married life.

May each succeeding year find you happier than the one before.

God bless you and yours and surround you ever with His choicest gifts.

Signed, on behalf of your sister members of Maple Leaf Institute, Mrs. Gladys Gunning and Mrs. George Waite.

Mr. and Mrs. McArville were later waited upon by friends of Margate and presented with a beautiful clock which testified to the popularity of both bride and groom.

AVONLEA INSTITUTE

An observer might have noticed on the evening of July 19 between the hours of 7.30 and 9.15 p. m. many carriages and cars approaching the home of Mrs. Chester Woolmer, North Rustico, the event being the monthly meeting of Avonlea Institute.

In the absence of the president the meeting was opened by Miss Elva Bernard, vice president and the usual routine followed, after which a most interesting report of the Charlottetown Convention was given by Mrs. B. C. Woolmer who with Mrs. Allan Wyand acted as alternates for the appointed delegates, Miss Marion Webb and Mrs. Roy Woolmer.

Among the many important items of business reported from the convention was the extremely high up-keep of our Provincial Sanitarium—not only on account of so many non-pay patients, but from other unforeseen items of expense.

At the conclusion of the meeting a dainty repast was served by the lunch committee, and the gathering consisting of 13 members and 10 visitors dispersed to their homes feeling that they had spent a profitable and enjoyable evening.
