FIRST CHARLOTTETOWN GUIDE COMPANY

By French guns blaze continually at German positions along the Siegfried Line, perhaps heralding a coming French sally into Germany's most powerfully defended positions or perhaps just a threat to keep the Germans from withdrawing troops from that area.

There will be a meeting of this company at St. Peter's Cathedral Hall at six thirty on Wednesday evening, when the concert tickets will be distributed.

The sweeping progress made by the German armies in the north has been at the cost of heavy losses and immense expenditure of equipment and ammunition. It is possible the French High Command has a shred of faith of just how close the Germans are approaching to the time when the northern offensive may fall.

A wonderful response has so far been made by the Guides of this province to the request of the Chief Commissioner for Great Britain for contributions towards an Air Ambulance Service for H. M. Forces.

While the Germans can not afford to withdraw troops from the Siegfried Line to reinforce the forces fighting in northern France and Belgium.

Remember, Guides, Rangers, Brownies and Guides we still have until Saturday to send in our donations to buy gifts for our country and let us try to make a really worthwhile sacrifice. Canada is at war because the Empire is at war and this great Empire was never more in need of our help than she is today. Every member of the great Guide sisterhood in Prince Edward Island past and present has a part to share in this gift. No matter how small a contribution, so let us unite with the Guides of Canada and help to win the war.

First Graduating Class—In 1923 the first class of graduates left the City Hospital and the first class of nurses who co-operates very closely with that of the Medical Profession. I am sure that each one of you desires to be an ideal nurse.

The nurse is of the type that radiates her influence in the sick-room and hospital. She is of sunny disposition. She is alert of mind and active of movement, considerate in her handling of patients and conscientious in the observance of rules.

During your nursing work you will have knowledge of many things which are regarded as professional secrets, and also many other secrets regarding your patients. All of these you are to keep in confidence, and this is one of the best tests of the character of a nurse.

Referring to the economic conditions in relation to the running of a hospital, he said that his Government had taken into consideration a plan whereby the hospitals would be greatly aided. The Public Health of the Province should be the first consideration of the Government and all Governments have been lax in this respect, he declared.

His Honour, Lieutenant-Governor, B. W. LePage, expressed pleasure at being present at the graduation and listening to the address.

Following was the text of Dr J. D. MacMillan's address to the graduating class: I esteem it a great honor and privilege to have been invited to address an assembly of Graduating Nurses on this your Graduation Day.

For your co-operation and the splendid way in which you performed your duties during the past three years I wish to thank you very much. Let this tradition of the work of the good Sisters who have guided you and who have taught you a knowledge of the finer things in life.

What is loyalty? It is fidelity, faithfulness, constancy and devotion. Loyalty is the basic principle of right conduct and the basis of our moral obligation to think and act rightly. It bids us to be true to our associates and to ourselves.

Nurses, you have now reached the goal of at least one of your ambitions in life, but do not rest here. Great art of nursing. The greatest hindrance to progress in any kind of human endeavor is contentment with things as they are, and an unwillingness to give new ideas a fair trial.

Nursing is a service, a beautiful service. It is necessary to our fellow-man. It is a service which co-operates very closely with that of the Medical Profession. I am sure that each one of you desires to be an ideal nurse.

She is disciplined and dainty. She is dependable and neat. Careful, capable and canny. Cool, courageous, smart and sweet.

She is soft as silk or satin. She is as hard as any nail. Has a woman's intuition. With the logic of the male.

She contends with circumstances. She is the joyful, faithful, zealous. Though she shakes from head to heel.

She is a Messenger of mercy. From the Prince of Peace and Love. She is sagacious as a serpent. She is as harmless as a dove.

She is the servitor of Science. She has wisdom deep and wide. She is forceful, fast, graceful, calm, unhurried, dignified.

She is the daughter of duty. Sent to seek and serve and save. And she's on the job forever. From the cradle to the grave.

Trinity United Church Canadian Press Directors Meet

TORONTO, May 28—(CP)—The board of directors of The Canadian Press today decided to seek Dominion legislation to establish property rights in news and to speed collection of news telegrams.

The board was advised by J. A. McNeil, general manager, that The Canadian Press would be represented with the 1st Division, Canadian Active Service Force, when it goes into action. The CP has maintained the British connection with the 1st Division since it went overseas in December and is the only news organization in the Empire with representative attachments to any unit of the British Expeditionary Force.

It is obvious that with such a history, the nursing profession has a right to be proud of its achievements and in our course we have had our share of hardships and our responsibilities in living up to them. A true nurse dedicates herself to a self-sacrificing service for the welfare of humanity.

We are grateful that we have had our nursing education under the aegis of the Church, which, at the cost of great material sacrifices, has fostered the sciences, and in her schools of nursing, she has given us a religious, cultural and professional formation.

As long as you did it to one of these, my dear brethren, you did it unto me. (Matt. XXV 40). Classmates farewell, but keep this Faith with you. That sees the good, the beautiful, the true.

That brightly to life's shadowed exiles brings a gleam of dawn. The ray of hope to strive for better things. That has and holds, though at times proud towers nod. The love that leans on earth but touches God.
