

REFUSING TO BUY A PIG IN A POKE.

Most makers of packaged medicines keep their formulae secret. They don't even tell the druggists what the ingredients are.

People used to be satisfied with the secret method, and were willing to take it for granted that all these preparations were able to do what was claimed for them.

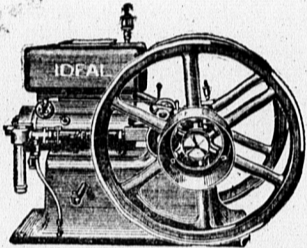

Now-a-days it's different. People are refusing to buy a pig in a poke. Everyone thinks that they have a right to know what is in the medicine they take and for which they pay good money. Refusing to divulge the formulae and mysterious and miraculous claims do not convince the public of an article's merit—rather the reverse.

And to fill this demand of the public the up-to-date druggist of to-day is recommending and selling packaged medicines, "made in the open," as it were. He knows the formulae and the relative merits of different preparations offered, and it is your privilege to ask him about the value of any packaged medicine for any purpose.

You may not know whether certain ingredients in a medicine will benefit you, but the fact that your druggist knows every ingredient in each Nyal's Remedy is your protection. It is his business to know your right and to give his opinion before buying any medicine.

DR. SMITH'S ADDRESS

she would like an opportunity to teach in a school. I happened to have charge of graded schools in the city, and one-room country schools, and I told her there was a country school a little way out. "Oh," said she; "I do not want a country school." I said, "That is all I have." She said, "If I do well in the country school, may I perhaps be promoted later on to another school?" I said, "I do not know whether you would call it promotion or not, but perhaps if you do well there—if I regard you as a good teacher, I may transfer you to a place where the salary will be higher." She said, "I will take the school." She went out and took the school. After she was there three or four weeks, she came to see me, apparently very unhappy. She said, "Mr. Smith, how long is it going to be before I can have another school?" I said, "I don't know—don't you like that school?"

"No." "Why? What is the trouble? Aren't the children all right?" "Oh, they are fine—the children are all right."

I said, "Well, you may have trouble with the community—have they been criticizing the size of your hat or the color of your gown, or some matter such as communities do criticize teachers and ministers' wives?"

"No." "Then it is my fault, because I have not been giving you the things you need in the school?"

"No." "What, in the world, then, is the matter?" I said, "I went through the elementary schools, I went to High School for four years and to Grammar School for two years, and I thought, after all this, I might do some educational work."

"Then why don't you do it where you are?" I said, "I can't. Nobody could do educational work out there."

"Why not," I said. "Why can you not teach and do educational work out there?"

Then the reason came out. "Oh," she said, "I can't—it is so small."

I said, "How many children are there?"

She said, "Only twelve."

The magic of that figure struck me in an instant, and I said:

"Only twelve children! And yet do you realize that the Teacher of teachers—the Man of Galilee—selected out of the great masses just twelve, and through His influence and His work, and through that small band of twelve, the world has been transformed and regenerated, and is one day to be saved!" He in His divine wisdom saw that the world was not to be purged of its sins save as the individuals in the world are purged of their sins!

And so, my friends, is not the lesson that we as teachers and as parents may learn from that divine life, that we shall be able to do no work in education; that we shall be able to do no work that shall live after us; that we shall be able to do no work that will lead to a better citizenship, except as we are able to get a grip on the individual—a grip that will hold that will help, that will lift that individual, through all the days of his life.

I thank you.

Another Man's Testimonial

The heating system we have installed in my home, consisting of a jacket heater and 4 radiators, is doing really wonderful work. By this system every room in the house is heated to a sunny June temperature at the cost of fuel for one stove. There is less ashes, bother and trouble with this system than with the ordinary stove and the gain in comfort and saving in fuel more than pays for the cost of this system. I did not know what real winter comfort was until I tried your system.
