Five witnesses for the claimants were on the stand yesterday as the case of The King vs. Northumberland Ferries Limited opened before the Exchequer Court of Canada in the Court House in Charlottetown. Cross-examination of the fifth was still in progress when the presiding Judge, Mr. Justice E. R. Angers, Ottawa, adjourned the Court until 10.30 this morning.

The case is a reference to the Exchequer Court in respect of a claim of the Ferry Company for additional compensation for the two ferries "Charles A. Dunning" and "Sankaty" which were requisitioned by the Dominion Government. The amount received from the Government by the company for the requisition of the former was $92,764.63 but Northumberland Ferries are dissatisfied with this amount and are asking for $175,000. The price paid by the Government for the "Sankaty" was $83,900, but again the ferry company consider this amount too little and are asking for the "replacement value" of the boat.

Both ships were taken over by the government before they were placed on the Prince Edward Island-Nova Scotia service. First one was taken then the second. Subsequently, however, a boat known as the "Erie Isle," but later named the "Prince Nova" was placed on the service last year. The original name of the "Charles A. Dunning" was "Seaborne." It was re-christened by the company when it was bought in 1939. A few months after it was taken the "Sankaty" was purchased.

Those giving evidence yesterday included: Herman Jeagle, New York; W. J. Roue, Dartmouth; J.A. Strang, Halifax; J. Wesley Roberts, Cariboo, and Lt.-Col. C. L. MacKay, Charlottetown.
