This line is about ten miles in length and runs across country consequently making it much harder to keep in order than if it were a straight line, nevertheless it has been kept in fairly satisfactory condition. This company has adopted the method of estimating and paying their tolls a year in advance which is found to be a fairly satisfactory method. The estimates being guided by the previous year. The officers for the ensuing year are W. J. Jenkins, President; Almon Wood, Vice President; Alex. Scott, C. W. Robertson and Alfred Reid, The Secretary. Luc-Jew Jenkins was re-elected.

THE WAR THIS WEEK

By H. M. Peters
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The 21st week of the war opened with a fighting speech by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who urged neutrals to join the Allies against Germany, and closed with a dramatic dissolution of the 18th Canadian Parliament.

At sea Britain lost two destroyers, H. M. S. Grenville and H. M. S. Exmouth, with heavy loss of life. Several small freighters, the majority of them neutral, were sunk by mine or torpedo. A German statement that her submarine production had attained a tempo of one completed each day was doubted in Allied capitals.

The western front remained inactive. The Finns continued to beat back Russian attacks in Karelia and northeast of Lake Ladoga but punishing Russian air raids on Finnish communications and manufacturing points were maintained. The growing Finnish air force struck back with raids on Russian bases, including Kronstadt.

Reports that German troops are policing the Galician-Rumanian frontier, taking over control of territory awarded to Soviet Russia in the fourth partition of Poland, alarmed Rumania. The reports came at a time when German envoys were emphasizing in Bucharest that the Rumanian increase in quantities of Rumanian oil and that French owned companies must not be forced to ship oil to Germany.

The King spent Wednesday with his Canadian soldiers at Aldershot, formally reviewing the Royal Canadian Artillery, the Royal Canadian Engineers and the Royal 22nd Regiment and passing through the various other units of the First Division.

Mr. Churchill's call to the neutral, as expected, did not bring protest as was done by the British and United States governments when Mexico expropriated oil properties owned by British and American companies and possibly resort to some trade retaliation. But when their vital interests in the war are involved they may do more, especially as Rumania is under certain obligations to the Allies by reason of her guarantees of her independence.

So long as Germany gets an appreciable quantity of Rumanian oil the Nazi regime has a sound reason for respecting Rumanian neutrality. By attacking the country the Germans, instead of obtaining more oil, might get none at all. Transportation facilities would be disrupted as least temporarily. The Rumanians might destroy their wells. With French and British assistance they might hold a German army in check.

On the other hand, should Great Britain and France compel Rumania to cut off oil supplies to Germany, the Nazi would have nothing to lose on this score by waging war.

Glanzig Eeak 25 Years.—A British patrol squadron frustrated a German raid off the east coast in the week of Jan. 21-27, 1915, sinking the cruiser Blucher. More than 500 German seamen were lost. Two enemy battle cruisers and the British cruiser Lion were damaged. On land, the Allies held the attacking Germans on all sections of the western front.

Organization of Third Division Is Expected

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—(CP)—Organization of a third division of the Canadian Active Service Force is expected to follow despatch of the second division overseas.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons that the second division would be sent abroad "as soon as may be possible" but indicated this would not happen until after the general election which likely will be March 28.

At the same time it is the intention to train the second division in Canada to a greater extent than was the case with the first division now training in various overseas headquarters in various centres will be brought together in sufficiently large formation to permit of some field manoeuvres.

The non-permanent active militia is organized on the basis of six divisions. The peacetime militia organization was made the basis of the C. A. S. F. except as to the training of the first division, now training in England, includes number of units from the permanent force as well as units from the various militia divisions. This was done in order to give representation to the various parts of Canada. Similarly the second division, now mobilized and training in Canada consists of units scattered across the country.

The third division, when and if it is mobilized, will be formed the same way.

Shippers in the Island province appear to be shipping almost exclusively by rail at the present time.

ALL EYES ARE HEAVENWARD these days as both Allies and Germany expect momentary mass air raids as result of statement of war on western front. Threat of Invasion Is One More Burden in the Belgian King's Tragedy-haunted Life

With the tragedy of a second invasion hanging over his country, Leopold III, King of the Belgians, has furthered every effort to strengthen the army. Above, he reviews troops at Brussels.

Rumania is on the spot because of her rich oil wells. Germany needs Rumanian oil and is reported to have told Rumania the delivery of substantial quantities is a matter of life and death for her.

NEW SOLDIER'S HARDSHIPS EARLY

When the retreat was finally stopped, the Belgians were only left with a tiny northwest patch of their country, which they valiantly defended for the balance of the war. Here King Albert remained with his men. Here he kept his son. In fact, he made the boy at 14, join the troop and take his turn at digging trenches and all the rest of the hard work of a private soldier.

BELGIUM IN THE MIDDLE

His time as King since then has not been without its troubles. There were economic and sociological domestic crises. Then, with the rise of Hitler and his Nazis, King Leopold faced a new danger for his country and emphatically proclaimed its neutrality. Before that, it had been the virtual military ally of France. Once more France and England and Germany recognized its neutrality. But Leopold realized the tragic possibilities for a little country wedged in between France and Germany. He supported the Parliamentary program to build a line of forts protecting Belgian frontiers. He furthered every effort to have a strong Belgian army. So, as the clouds of war once more darken her borders, Belgium is as ready as a small but rich country can make itself against a great power.
