47,550 PURSE WON BY SALLY'S ALLEY, TEN TO ONE SHOT

(Special to The Guardian.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.— With consummate ease, Sally's Alley ridden by Johnson in the silks of William H. Kilmer won the thirtieth running of the Rich Futurity, a six-furlong sprint for two-year-olds and established a new record of 1.11 for the race at its present distance. The Rancocoas stables' Zex with Sande in the saddle was second, three lengths back and driven by Wilderness, of the R. Wilson colors ridden by Ensor. Wilderness by closing fast finished two lengths ahead of Cyclops, one of the favorites.

Salley's Alley, a filly by Allumur- Salvolatile, took the lead at the first quarter, shooting past Zev like a streak and finished galloping.

The New Yorker took the blue ribbon and a purse of $47,550 from a field of twenty-three, which the starter had difficulty in getting away, keeping them at the barrier for twenty- three minutes while the crowd of 30,000 howled. Sally's Alley paid those who backed her to win ten to one.

Realized $1,500,000 From Fur Auction

(Montreal Gazette.)

Three days sessions of the Canadian Fur Auction sales Company Ltd., ending yesterday in the Rose Room at the Windsor Hotel served to demonstrate a considerably higher tendency in fur prices as compared with prices last May The total sales were over $1,500,000. The auction drew buyers from a number of foreign countries, specially from the United States The results of the auction were very satisfactory, 90 per cent of all the skins offered being bought and the shippers were very well satisfied with the results.

Considering the season the offerings as a whole were small which is one of the reasons for the higher prices, and another factor is that there is a very urgent immediate demand for what was offered.

At yesterday's sale a feature was the offering of fox skins. There was an offering of 455 white fox, which went at $5.50 a skin. This is unchanged since last May.

Silver fox, all Canadian brought $285 a skin there being 257 offered. The buyers of this line were largely American and French. The price is unchanged.

Russian furs made a strong bid for recognition in the market and succeeded very well in the volume of business accomplished and in prices.

Kolinsky, a small Russian fox-like animal, was offered to the extent of 1,174 skins and the high price was $2.60 per skin.

Persian lamb skins remained unchanged at $5 a skin, all of Russian variety. The offering was 14,273 skins.

When Fitch, another Russian fur, was offered, prices began to mount as compared with prices of May last. The top price for this fur was $3.10, with an offering of 2,026. This was 10 per cent higher.

Russian squirrel brought the top price of $1.666 on an offering of 23,780 skins. This was an increase of 20 per cent.

MANY MUSKRATS.

It was in the muskrat line both Canadian and American that quantities were offered. In the Canadian variety there was an offering of 207,382 skins and the prices at which the different lots were sold showed a 10 per cent increase. In the best lots Eastern Canada muskrats brought as high as $2.85 a skin; Manitoba brought as high as $2.80 a skin and Alberta skins went to $2.36.

The American muskrat soared higher in price proportionately than any other skin offered at this auction. They went 50 per cent higher than in May, when the best lots sold at $1.10 a skin The offering was 55.356 skins The reason for this large increase in price is the fact that manufacturers have sommitments calling for this skin.

American and Canadian buyers were almost equally strong in the muskrat market.

Live Subleets Discussed

it is of practical importance that we should remember. It is no less essential that we should have a power of obliviscence for the rest. The problem of the memory trainer is to strengthen this habit of separating out the important from the unimportant. Cases of memory in the crystal-gazer and the hypnotic subject were discussed.

At this point Dr. Stewart took a friendly shot at some medical men of his acquaintance who were enclined to dismiss these unexplored subjects after the manner of the jury that found in a mysterious fatality case "that the deceased died through being hit with something sudden." They call it something or other in scientific language and leave it at that. "I asked a medical friend to tell me what the medical people had to say about hypnotism. He pulled his chin in a reflective way that belongs to the profession and looking wiser than any man ever was, he said 'we regard it as a case of inhibition.' I laughed and said 'thank you' and he wanted to know what I was laughing at."

Undoubtedly there is something yet to be explained about hypnotism and crystal gazing, continued Dr. Stewart. The crystal gazer sees pictures but it is very difficult to say what their origin was. A close analysis however, reveals the fact that they are odds and ends of forgotten experiences that the crystal gazer had in the past, which have been stored up—buried in the subconscious mind—and which have awakened in some strange way through the process of crystal gazing.

Many experiences in life are forgotten and it would be a terrible punishment to be unable to forget them all. The speaker humorously described the troubles of a college professor who was said to be unable to forget the Latin compositions of his pupils, which ranged from indifferent to extremely bad and which brought him to a state of pitiable distraction.

The second sort of mental curiosity was dreaming. Dr. Stewart spoke of the analysis of a dream's content, considering first the view that its raw material comes exclusively from the experiences of waking life, and asking how then one is to explain dreams of flying or of falling down precipices. He pointed out that in a dream we are almost always concerned with visual imagery; it is almost always a picture that unrolls itself. Sounds are more rarely recalled, and perfumes almost never. Is it so that we always dream, though we do not always remember our dreams when we wake? Is it so that there is no "coherence" in the visions of the night, but just a little chaotic medley of sense-impressions? What is a "night-mare?" Dr. Stewart took these points up in turn, speaking about the sleep-walker, the sleep-talker, Freud's view of the dream-consciousness as being more "true to life" than the waking consciousness, and about the dream as often largely determined by the environment of the sleeper. Illustrations were quoted from novelists, especially from Dickens.

"Instinct" was the third curiosity of mind to be discussed. Various theories and definitions of "instinctive" action were reviewed, and the truly instinctive was distinguished from the reflex, the automatic, the consciously purposive.

The word "instinct" like the word "democracy" has of late suffered from being too much "knocked about" until we have forgotten its real meaning. When a word loses its significance and becomes a mere figure of speech it should be dealt with as the government deals with coins that have got battered out of recognition—it should be re-minted.

It has been said that mankind has a "religious instinct," a "fighting instinct," etc. Is this so? Are instincts a good thing; or are they neither good nor bad but capable of being good or bad, according to the circumstances? There were some suggestive ideas on the subject of Instinct which Dr. Stewart hoped more thoroughly to go into in the course of his further lectures.

Dr. Goodwill presided at the evening lecture, at the conclusion of which he extended to Dr. Stewart the thanks of the meeting.

It was announced that this afternoon's lecture will be on "Anatole France" and in the evening "Coddling the Criminal."
