WATCH WEEDS IN ALSIKE

A statement just issued by the Dominion Seed Branch calls attention to the importance of watching weeds in the stands of alsike clover intended for seed purposes. In particular, Bladder Campion and Catch fly should be rogued from the crop, as seeds from these weeds are very difficult to separate from alsike. Black Medick is another common enemy and one which is possible to rogue out of the crop. It is pointed out that in recent years the market for Canadian alsike seed has decidedly fallen off. While this is in large measure due to the tariff barrier applied by the United States, an equally important reason is that much of our alsike seed has come to be inferior in quality owing to infestation with weed seeds. Only seed of high purity and generally fine quality may be expected to command a ready market.

SEE SIGNS OF INCREASE IN CATTLE PRODUCTION

Certain conclusions may be arrived at from a study of the cattle data presented in the twelfth annual report on the Origin and Quality of Commercial Live Stock Marketed in Canada in 1931, issued by the Dominion Live Stock Branch. Intentions to increase production are indicated, not so much in the fact that store cattle purchases were some 10,000 more than in the previous year and the heaviest since 1928, but more because of a very marked curtailment to the liquidation of cows and heifers. Despite an increase sale over the previous year of some 23,400 cattle of all kinds, there was a decrease in the number of cows and heifers of 33,655 head, or of approximately six per cent.

N. S. Church Has Boston Connections

BOSTON, Mass., July 27—About 1760, when people from New England began to take possession of the lands in Nova Scotia that had belonged to the exiled French Acadians, various religious sects sprang up, forming a bond between the New England and early Nova Scotian churches. One of these, an Anglican church known as Old Holy Trinity in Middleton, N. S., was built in 1787-1791 through the enterprise and effort of Rev. John Wiswall from Boston, appointed missionary in 1783 to succeed Rev. Henry Bailey, whose Anglican mission originally embraced Cornwallis and Annapolis, seventy miles apart.

Old Holy Trinity Church, which is a county landmark, is still standing on the original site at the lower end of the town of Middleton. In good state of preservation and is surrounded by the parish cemetery, where Mr. Wiswall is buried. In the New Holy Trinity Church built in 1903, there hangs a tablet to his memory, inscribed as follows: "Sacred to the memory of the Rev. John Wiswall, A. M., who was born in Boston, U. S., 3rd April, 1731 and ordained by the Bishop of London 1764. He left his native land in 1775, in consequence of a Revolutionary struggle, and was appointed Rector of the Parish of Wilmot in 1789 where he continued until his death Dec. 2, 1821. He was the first clergyman of any denomination who settled in this place."

The establishment of Old Trinity Church at Middleton was due largely to the efforts of Mr. Wiswall. When Halifax was founded there was no resident bishop, the lieutenant governor being commissioned to receive and make appointments to ecclesiastical offices. Receiving a mandate from the governor, Mr. Wiswall, resigned at Cornwallis and began work in the parish of Wilmot.

He began preparations at once for establishing a church centre, and Middleton was selected. In his work he was aided by Bishop Inglis, Mayor Bayard and Captain (later General) Ruggles. Work progressed slowly, because the people were poor and struggling hard to make a living, but Mr. Wiswall persevered and August 4, 1791, saw the work advanced enough to hold the first service.

The church was practically completed in 1792. The bell was donated by Colonel Bayard and is still used in the new Holy Trinity. The original silver communion set, altar cloths and Bible are carefully preserved.

INSURANCE POLICY FOR MILLION POUNDS

ANNAPOLIS ROYAL, N. S., July 27.—An insurance policy for $1,000,000, is in possession of Daniel Owen, K. C., local lawyer, who received it from his cousin, Sir Douglas Owen, K. C. M. G., K.B.E., chairman of the National War Risks Insurance Scheme during the war. In that capacity, Sir Douglas issued all policies approved by the Imperial government.

This one—among the largest—bears the date July 25, 1917. It is signed by Sir Douglas Owen on behalf of His Majesty's Government and has revenue stamps on it to the value of about $23,000.

It covered a schedule of ships and cargoes enumerated in the policy, and amongst other things specified "all kinds of goods and merchandise, and also the body, tackle, apparel, ordnance, munition, artillery, boat and other furniture in the ships or vessels approved under the scheme above mentioned."

It contained the stipulation that "this insurance is only to cover the risks of capture, seizure and detention by the King's enemies and the consequences thereof, or any attempt therat, and all consequences of hostilities or warlike operations by or against the King's enemies, whether before or after the declaration of war."

Forty mascots typical of those which soldiers carried in their pockets have just been placed on display in the Imperial War Museum, London. When men arriving home on leave were approached on the subject by inquirers interested in folk-lore, they would seldom admit at first that they favored any charms. But many infantrymen carried a loose tunic button and many cavalrymen a horse's tooth. Others had lucky farthings, and men from Devon had faith in small perforated stones. Some men made crosses for themselves in bone or metal or carried emblems sent from home. Small mascots in the form of black cats or pigs and even pieces of coal were not uncommon and it was usual with many to carry a
