DAUGHTERS OF MIDAS BY ANNE AUSTIN

CHAPTER XX

At half-past five that afternoon Billy Wells laid her precious violin in its case, and went to the kitchen, flexing her left arm that was stiff with hours of playing.

Mrs. Wells did not hear the girl's light footsteps. As Billy stood there a tear rolled down Mrs. Wells' plump, ruddy cheek, and splashed upon the paring knife that flashed so busily over the surface of a big potato.

"Mother! You're crying! And you said you were happy!" Billy cried accusingly. "I'm not going! That's all there is to it! I'm not going to leave you here!"

Mrs. Wells laughed shakily and retrieved the potato she had dropped in her surprise. "I reckon a body's got a right to cry for joy!" she protested.

"It wasn't joy," Billy insisted. "Oh, honey, what a beast you must have thought me today, because I jumped so at the chance to leave you. Didn't you know I couldn't do it, really? You've been so good to me always."

"And a fine mother I'd be if I let you make a fool of yourself and pass up the opportunity of a lifetime! Land alive! You'd be going to Europe to study if you had the money, wouldn't you? And I'm sure I wouldn't go to Europe with you," she lied bravely, "with nobody but foreigners to talk to, and no habits. Of course you're going to live at Mr. Curtis' for a year. Now, get out of here and stop bothering me, or fix the salad if you're going to hang around the kitchen."

"Woo! Woo!" Billy laughed and kissed her mother on the back of the neck.

"It'll just be for a year, and you can come home as often as you like. And don't think I'll be so all-fired lonesome either. I'm going to feed Clay so well that he won't think of changing boarding houses."

"It was not going to be easy, Billy," beginning to shrug at small sums like five dollars. "I'll take a lesson every day if he'll let me. I suppose I'll be lucky if he lets me come three times a week. I'm going to learn more music in a year than any girl ever learned before. And when the year is up, I'll bust into New York and bully a manager into booking me for a concert tour."

"Half an hour later the sound of the front door opening told them that Clay had come home from work. It was not going to be easy, Billy," ly decided, as she sat down opposite Clay at the little round dining table. He looked tired and discouraged.

"Somebody's birthday?" He tried to make his voice jocular as he passed his plate, his eyes roving hungrily over the unusually festive meal. "Heavens, but those lamb chops look good!"

"I did it," Billy acknowledged proudly. "And I made the salad and mashed the potatoes. Mama's good girl!" she applauded herself, hoping to win a smile from those tired lips.

"That's right—you didn't work today. Well, what's the latest news from the psychopathic ward? Did my eccentric father make you general manager of the Curtis Store?"

"Better than that," Billy told him, keeping a tight rein in her temper. "Wait till after supper and I'll show you. What's the news?"

"Ralph Truman was at the factory today—showing a delegation of women's club uplifters what a model factory looks like. He stopped and spoke to me—about you," and he gave Billy a long, meaningful look.

"He sat next to me at dinner last

Women Secure

against lost charm, this new way of solving oldest hygienic problem—offers true protection; discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND Registered Nurse

SHEER gowns and ill-timed social or business demands hold no terror for the modern woman. The insecurity of the old-time "sanitary pad" has been ended.

"KOTEX," a new and remarkable way, is now used by 8 in 10 better class women.

It's five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads!

You dine, dance, motor for hours in sheerest frocks without a second's doubt or fear.

It deodorizes, too. And thus stops all danger of offending.

Discards like tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You ask for it at any drug or department store, without hesitancy, simply by saying "KOTEX." Be sure to get the genuine.

Do as millions are doing. End old, insecure ways. Enjoy life every day. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

KOTEX No laundry—discard like tissue

When she had left, it was at Clay's suggestion that they washed the dishes before giving themselves up to music. He had become proud of his technique as a dishwasher, refusing to allow Billy to soil her lovely white hands in the greasy water.

"Are you happy here, Clay?" Billy asked suddenly, as she hung her damp towel upon the drying rack.

"Here, in this house, with you and your mother, yes," he answered slowly. "I don't think I was ever so happy with people in my life. But Billy, the factory is tearing me to pieces. I don't know how I sprang to his feet, and strode toward her as if he meant to snatch the instrument from her hands. But when he did touch it, it was with fingers as gentle and reverent as her own.

"It's two hundred years old," she told him, in a joy-shaken voice. "Your father gave it to me."

"Then—God bless him for a very Christian gentleman," old T. Q.'s son said in all reverence. "I take back all the unfilling things I've said about him and his motives. With that instrument and your genius—Billy, you're a lucky girl. If you could only have a decent teacher—"

Billy turned abruptly from him to lay the violin upon the top of the piano. Her moment was upon her. She went to him slowly and laid her hands upon his shoulders.

"Clay, I'm going to have the teacher—Professor Navratil of Vienna, who teaches at the university, you know. He's really wonderful! I've heard him play. And I'm going to have all day every day to practice."

"Then I was right," Clay interrupted her in a strange voice. "So Dad has found his daughter. Well, if he had looked the world over he couldn't have found a better. I suppose—he looked down at her with quizzical eyes—"we're brother and sister now. Not exactly what I had hoped for, but—"

"How did you know?" Billy demanded, startled. "But if you're looking for sisters, maybe Nyda Lomax and Winnie Shelton will suit you better. He's making all three of us his wards for a year, to rain us for our chosen careers. I suppose you knew that, too?"

"Three of you?" Clay frowned. "Good heavens! He's a thorough chap, isn't he? Three girls for a year! Talk about caution! Oh, heavens, this is funny! What a merry little hell he's picked out for himself—and for you!"

It's two hundred years old, your father gave it to me.

WHEN, wearied and dust-flecked, the fair traveller of coaching days descended from her jolting conveyance her first thought was of the soothing, cleansing beauty of Yardley's Old English Lavender Soap.

After more than five generations Yardley's still removes the stains of travel, delightfully purifying and refining the skin with a mellow, creamy lather of purest quality—still leaves its elusive fragrance clinging to radiant cheeks.
