

Nickel Strike Is Postponed

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., June 1.—(CP)—A strike of 1,200 employees of the International Nickel Company refinery here has been set for midnight Monday night in demand for a wage increase of 20 cents an hour.

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., June 1.—(CP)—A last-minute meeting between company and union late tonight decided to submit to a conciliation board the wages and union security dispute between the International Nickel Company refinery and its 1,200 employees here and the strike deadline set for Monday night at midnight was cancelled.

In a dispute with the same company at Sudbury, however, where another 11,000 workers are involved, negotiations were understood to be still open with prospect of appointment of a conciliation board.

At Port Colborne the refinery workers, members of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (I.M.S.W.), seek a new pay rate of $1 an hour, compared with 80 cents they have been getting.

Negotiations here between the company and local 637 of the Union broke down late Saturday after talks covering the past two weeks, with a conciliation officer from the Ontario Labor Department sitting in during the final two days.

Saturday's final conference was followed by a Union statement setting the strike deadline for midnight Monday night, 48 hours after expiry of the present contract.

The union announced arrangements for 25 workers to continue on maintenance work to protect the company property against damage and to maintain the power-house service, which powers the town's fire alarm signals system.

The union will not attempt to prevent office and staff personnel entering or leaving the plant in event of a strike.

Protection was also assured the company against "freezing" of the furnaces, indicating some hope remained of a last-minute settlement.

CENTRAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Dr. C. H. Phillips, of Calgary, Alta., opened his series of special lectures at the Church of Christ Sunday night with a message on "The Church as an Eternal Idea with God." In his exposition, Dr. Phillips quoted freely numerous passages of the New Testament especially setting forth the divine elements of the church of the general church of modern Christianity. Dr. Phillips declared that the conception of the church as consisting of all the various denominational bodies could not be right as this would make God responsible for the confusion, a possibility denied by Scripture.

Turning to a positive consideration of the theme, the speaker declared that the church is the ultimate expression of the love of God; that it existed in the mind of God for all purposes, divine and human. This purpose, declared Dr. Phillips, was the possession of a peculiar people who should manifest God's wisdom and share His glory.

Further developing his theme, the visitor from Calgary declared that the means and method for procuring this "people of God" were eternally in the mind of God. From out of the race, God had eternally purposed to purchase a people through the redemption of Christ. The methods by which the means were to be employed was also fixed by God. He purposed, said Dr. Phillips, that divine mercy should be coupled with human submission, divine grace united with human faith. To properly bring about this cooperative activity, God planned to make known His purpose and means through "the gospel" and to submit to His will, the people who believe in the message and explained that this is the first and introductory study of a series that will eventually reveal the church as it is today recognised by the Word of God and the future divinely destined for the institution. The second of the series is entitled "The church as a divine pattern revealed in the Old Testament."

Mr. Dunbar, the resident minister, stated that the meetings are open to the public and are intended to make some contribution toward the realization of a better understanding and appreciation of the church and the ultimate unity of all believers in Christ.

to shore when rescue workers tied a cable to it, and Mike Viriglio got out his tractor to pull it in, helped by other residents in their rowboats.

Angeline Viriglio, his daughter, saw the craft as it circled for a landing and then crashed.

"It was coming in toward the river, but I guess it was too low. When the pilot saw the trees ahead of him he tried to pull up, but he hit the trees and then the plane went right into the water. It was awful."

Jean Battisto was one of those who tried to right the plane and get the men out.

"The cabin wasn't full of water when we got there, but we couldn't do anything to get them out. It kept floating down the river, and we broke our ropes four times trying to pull it right side up. By the time it touched bottom and we could get the cable fastened on it, the men were dead."

The eight-passenger plane left the Fairchild plant last Friday for an extended trip to Labrador, but was forced to return for instrument repairs. It wasn't expected today, and the first employees at the plant knew was when they saw it circling overhead.

Normally, seaplanes come in for a landing across the water, but today, with a stiff northeasterly wind blowing, the pilot had to approach anchorage from the land side. It was while gliding in, about 40 feet above the river edge, that a sudden gust or shift in the wind threw the plane out of control, and before the pilot could get the gun for safer altitude he was swept down and hit the trees.

played in the C.N.R. shops in Prince Edward Island. This number had dwindled to around 700 owing to the decrease in operations hitherto carried out in those shops. At present, he told the vice-president, there is no guarantee that opportunity to learn skilled railway mechanics will be afforded any from the Province.

Centralization

Mr. Wallon pointed out that present-day railway economics tend towards centralization of repair work at a few key points across the Dominion, and could hold out little hope for increased work for the C.N.R. shops in the Island. This trend, he said, was even more apparent with the Canadian Pacific than the Canadian National Railway. He looked with favor however on the matter of apprenticeship quotas and is taking the question up with maintenance chiefs of the road.

In making his point about the desirability of granting a quota of apprentices to Prince Edward Island, Mr. McLeure wrote that if the present policy is followed, the time will come soon when there will be no skilled railway mechanics in Prince Edward Island save some who may be imported.

It was not a good thing, he said, that a Province, or even a section of a Province should lose men with highly-specialized skills and be without opportunity to replace them. He assured the C. N. R. officials that there would never be the slightest difficulty in filling the quota of apprentices allocated in a decision to institute a quota was reached.

"The Canadian National Railway people seem to be very cooperative in this matter," Mr. McLeure told The Guardian today, "and I have reason to hope that they will institute a quota for apprentices in the fairly near future. Our men have always done well in competition with workers from any other part of the Maritime, and I'm sure that the railway authorities intend to give them a fair deal."

non-military grounds. President Truman, after creating the commission six months ago, urged that the emphasis be on non-military benefits. He even changed the title of the commission to eliminate the word "military" in a statement on Dec. 20, he said "the military phase is incidental to what I have in mind."

Members of Commission

Dr. Compton is president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a noted scientist.

The other eight members are: Joseph Davies, former ambassador to Russia; Charles Wilson, president of General Electric; Dr. Daniel Poling, a churchman; Judge Samuel Rosenman, former presidential adviser; Mrs. Ann Rosenberg, industrial relations consultant; Dr. Harold Dodds, president of Princeton University; Truman Edmund Walsh, regent of the foreign service school of Georgetown University.

They covered the whole field of national security in their report. They recommended universal training only as one essential part of an eight-point security program, and said that it should draw funds away from the other phases, it would be a mistake to adopt it.

They said the whole defence program would cost "staggering" sums more than the United States has ever spent in peacetime, and "we view with horror" the need for spending these billions.

But the price of failure to take precautions now may be "loss of our possessions, our liberties, our lives, and the destruction of mankind's hope for an enduring peace."

King's County M. P. In Federal Budget Debate

Following is the text of the address by Dr. T. V. Grant, Liberal M. P. for King's, as reported in the Budget debate in the House of Commons on May 23:

"Mr. Speaker, in the few minutes at my disposal I can refer only briefly to what has been said by the last few speakers. The hon. member who has just taken his seat (Mr. Timmins) seems to have been converted to a policy of social legislation, because he devoted from half to three-quarters of his time to social legislation and said that the government was very slow in bringing it down. In that respect he was somewhat different from the hon. member who preceded him, who said that the family allowance was a brazen bribe to the people of Canada.

"The hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Shaw), in speaking this evening, spent a good deal of his time in talking about the Maritime Provinces. This is an old political trick, getting away from one's own part of the country and going to the other end to talk about unemployment there, when there is none perhaps in his own part of the country.

"I listened to the Tory member from Queen's (Mr. McLeure). I could not catch all he said today, but I read in yesterday's Hansard how he began his speech last night. He referred to Marc St. Laurent and said: 'I would not want to repeat it because I am afraid we are getting on our hands in this House. I case of senile perversion. Old fools are the worst fools.'

"He said that he was speaking for the Province of Prince Edward Island. I want to remind the House that the hon. member was speaking for the Tories of Prince Edward Island, the minority and a very small minority of the people of Prince Edward Island. The hon. member also said that he hoped that in a by-election in Prince Edward Island, I would remind him that if there is a by-election there it will not be a dual one like the last one he ran in, and he will not be able again to hold on to the coat-tail of another member.

200 witnesses over a five-month period, reported in detail on the nature of possible future warfare. It said the only real security for any country lies in the "abolition of war," and the main hope of this is the United Nations. The United States must continue to "focus all our statesmanship" on an international program to eliminate the use of atomic weapons.

"But this effort has so far been unsuccessful." And so long as there is no system of inspecting the atomic activities of every country, there can be "no certain security."

"Without such safeguards the United States must not only retain the atomic bomb, but must proceed actively with its further development and production."

The commission also said the military weakness of the United States "weakens the United Nations, because at the very time we have committed ourselves to a position of leadership in building the U. N., we have allowed our military strength to fall away from us."

American air and sea strength is "somewhat more formidable" than that of the ground forces but even this "is being eroded so rapidly that it cannot long be considered a shield against possible attack."

The "precipitate drop" in military preparedness would have the "inevitable effect of encouraging those to whom weakness on the part of the peace-loving nations is a passport to aggression."

The commission said on the basis of testimony from scientists and military experts that the era of "inter-continental" rockets with atomic warheads wipe out tens of millions overnight" may come within 25 years but not much sooner.

But "one need not accept the notion of push-button warfare to recognize the indescribable horror that would accompany the initial attack in an atomic war."

"Responsible scientists in their testimony estimated the American period of immunity from such an attack 'at not less than four years and not more than 10 years.'"

President Truman created the Compton Commission last November and it began meetings Dec. 20. He asked the group to study the basic need and the various plans for universal training "in relation to over-all planning for the national security."

Canada Prosperous

"I also congratulate the Liberal party on the fact that today to get into this House. That is how he got in at the last election, and he cannot deny that. His speech today bears out what appears in his biography in the Parliamentary Guide, which says that he was at one time a commercial ambassador. Well, all I have to say is that he made a commercial speech today.

Fur Price Guarantee

"I did think he was not fair in speaking about the fur business, because he gave the Government no credit for saving the fur situation in Prince Edward Island this year. The Government this year gave the fur men in Prince Edward Island a guaranteed price equal to the average price over the last three years, and saved the fur business of Prince Edward Island. My hon. friend and a few other men like him put the fur business on the rough in Prince Edward Island. As he was speaking, I was just thinking that the Tories must have had a bet among themselves as to who could make the most ridiculous speech and, after listening to the hon. member for Queen's, I would say that he won the bet.

"When a doctor is called out to see a patient he keeps an open mind until he arrives at the bedside. That was the state of mind I tried to maintain the night the budget was presented to the House. My diagnosis of the Liberal Opposition, in their reaction to the budget, is one of shock, shock from bitter disappointment, shock from shattered hopes, and shock that one or two of them, notably the hon. member for Lanark (Mr. Blair), who is of my own profession, seemed to retain their normal demeanour in the House on that occasion, and I decided that I would leave the treatment of his colleagues to him. I think he has made a very good job of it. Of course time is a great healer, and I notice that some of our hon. friends opposite have been coming back to life in the last few days.

"I should like in that connection to dedicate a few lines to the hon. member for Lanark: 'He listens earnestly to tales of grief, forgets himself, that he may give relief To bodies suffering, or tortured minds. In service to all men, his pleasure finds.'

Lauds Budget

"I have thought from the first, Mr. Speaker, that this budget did not need any defence. I suppose that some hon. members on this side of the House rose to speak on the budget in order to make their first speech. I noticed that one of the most sensible Conservatives in the House, the hon. member for Davenport (Mr. MacNicol) overran his time, and he did not mention the budget at any time during his whole budget speech, which made me think that he had nothing at all to say against the budget.

"This budget reduces taxation and shows a large surplus, and these are the two chief things about any budget. When we find taxation reduced and a substantial surplus we are generally satisfied that everything else is fairly good. But the hon. member for Muskoka-Ontario (Mr. Macdonnell), the financial critic of the Opposition, seemed to be affected much more than the rest of his colleagues, and he made a confession to the effect that if his party were in power the people of this country would have to pay a higher rate of interest on mortgages and notes of hand and so forth which they owed to these rich people. He also said that if his party were in power there would not be any surplus, or words to that effect. That is about all that I could gather from his speech.

"Every hon. member who has spoken in this debate has congratulated the young Minister of Finance (Mr. Abbott), not only on his budget, but on the splendid manner in which he delivered it, and I wish to join with others in extending my heartiest congratulations to him. I also wish to congratulate every member of the Liberal party, back benches and myself included, upon the way we stood behind our leader through thick and thin because we knew he was right, and so I want to congratulate the whole Liberal party as well as the Minister of Finance on that wonderful budget.

Canada Prosperous

"I also congratulate the Liberal party on the fact that today

Canada is more prosperous than ever before. That has been admitted by almost every hon. member. Canada is the third trading nation of the world today. I remember that in 1930 Canada was the fifth trading nation of the world."

Mr. Stuart (Charlottetown): "What Government was in power then?" Mr. Grant: "The Liberal party;" it went out in 1930. By 1935 Canada was the eighth trading nation of the world."

Mr. Stuart: "What party was in power then?" Mr. Grant: "The Tories. The excuse they gave was that there was a world depression. That is why Canada went down to eighth trading place in the world. If Canada went to the eighth trading place some other nations took her place. They must have been prospering. Another nation took her place and she went down to eighth place, et cetera. Today, under a Liberal government, she is the third trading nation in the world. Canada is a country of something over ten million people. There are countries that have hundreds of millions of people, and yet we are the third trading nation of the world under a Liberal government.

"We hear many wails from all parties on the other side of the House about prosperity. Do they ever look at the reports of the bank presidents of Canada? These reports show that, in spite of all the money people put into Victory bonds to win the war, they have twice as much money in the savings bank now."

Mr. MacKenzie: "Including the C. C. F.?" Mr. Grant: "Yes, including the C. C. F. They have twice as much money in the bank today as they ever had before. How does that come about in a country that some people are wailing about? Sometimes they forget and say that we are the most prosperous country in the world. Where did the money come from for the people of the country last year to buy more insurance than they ever bought in any other two years? Last year the people of Canada bought $1,777 million worth of insurance.

Social Legislation

"Where do they get the money? Bennett did not send it to them. We are now told by our Tory friends who have become socialists themselves that we have turned socialist. If my hon. friend makes another speech like the one he just made he had better go over with the C. C. F."

"It was not since the C. C. F. were created in Canada that we had social legislation. We had social legislation in 1923, the Old Age Pensions Act under a Liberal government in 1927; the fair wage and eight-hour day in 1928; the Farm Loan Act in 1928 and the Family Allowances Act in 1944, of course, and unemployment insurance and scores of other social legislation before our hon. friends of the C. C. F. party commenced to function.

"Last year the Tory member for Queen's talked about the unemployed and jobless in Prince Edward Island. I said in the House afterwards that there was no unemployment in Prince Edward Island with the exception of some returned soldiers who had recently come home and were not yet rehabilitated. Well, there was an awful noise about that in Tory circles. The leader of the Opposition on the Island got up in the Legislature and said that I was an outcast or words to that effect. I had said that fishermen were banking money down there. He said, the idea of fishermen banking money; the idea of a man talking like that in Ottawa! Well, I leave it to him. That is Tory mentality."

Mr. Knowles: "Question." Mr. Grant: "The hon. gentleman talks enough in the House. The hon. gentleman is very proud. He knows what Pope said about pride. He said: 'Of all the causes that conspire to bring about the ruin of a man's erring judgment, and misguide the mind, there is no stronger bias rule. Is pride, the never-falling vice of fools.'

Quotes Guardian

"The Guardian newspaper, which was at the time I think somewhat under the influence of the Tory member for Queen's, came out last evening with an editorial, and of all the lacking a man ever got for saying the Prince Edward Island had no unemployment, I got it to take the time to read the editorial, because my hon. friend said that Liberal papers sometimes find fault with the government. This is from the Tory Guardian newspaper of April 17, 1947. It was nine months after I made my speech. The heading of the article is: 'Our Island Prosperity,' and reads as follows: 'Annus mirabilis well describes the past year as the prospects for the coming year. We have been free from catastrophes due to nature or man's making, and have enjoyed ideal weather, social, health and business conditions for almost eighteen months.'

"That goes back a year before I said there was no unemployment, and are still going strong in this respect. Mr. R. P. Hartley, superintendent of the Federal

Retail Druggists To Meet On June 4th

Designed to promote the latest sales methods to foster better relations between pharmacists and medical men, a meeting of the Prince Edward Island Pharmaceutical Association which is to be held in the Charlottetown Hotel June 4th promises to be of much interest both to druggists and medical men of the Province.

The morning session is to be taken up with the presentation of selling methods to druggists and sales staffs and the showing of a motion picture "Drug Stores Tomorrow," and will feature a talk given by V. E. Hessel, Toronto, a member of the Board of Commercial Interests.

The afternoon meeting is designed for store owners and will be taken up with the discussion of local problems and affairs and the showing of motion pictures dealing with pharmaceutical activities.

The evening session to which all doctors are invited will be in the nature of a "get-together" for druggists and medical men.

Several motion pictures have been planned for the evening, featuring "Therapeutic Uses of Folic Acid," "Use of Sulphadiazine in Urinary Tract Infections," and "Penicillin in Medicine and Surgery." Talks of interest to those present also have been scheduled for the evening session. At the close of the meeting a buffet luncheon will be served.

Auto Race Driver Complains

INDIANAPOLIS, June 1.—(AP)—Bill Holland, 32 seconds behind his teammate, Mauri Rose of Chicago, winner of Friday's Memorial Day 500-mile automobile classic, said Saturday "it's the roughest deal I ever got."

Holland, who led until the last few laps, got an "off" signal from his pit crew and Rose passed him. Both drove identical new four-cylinder cars owned by Lou Moore of Ventura, Calif.

"The first time I knew I didn't win the race was when I pulled into the pits and heard the man on the loud speaker say, 'Holland second,'" said the 39-year-old veteran of the dirt tracks.

"I asked the men in my pit why they didn't tell me, and they said, 'Moore wouldn't let us.'"

Moore, who built the Blue Crown Spark Plug specials, told a reporter: "I had no preference. I gave both drivers the same. There are a lot of rumors going around. I know. I'm sorry if there was any misunderstanding. Bill has a wonderful future."

Holland, who was competing in his first "500," gave his side of the story: "All I was getting was the eye signal. I thought I had a lap on Rose. I was running half throttle when Rose went by. I waved to him. I guess I waved $100 to him. (That is the difference between first and second prize.)"

"I was going into the turns at 80 miles an hour after I got the eye signal. I thought I had it in the bag. I would have won the race by a lap and a half."

Ruffin Fights Tonight; Stories Are Recalled

By Sid Thomas

MONTREAL, June 1.—(CP)—With Bobby Ruffin and Griffin-town Gus Mell slated to tangle here Monday night in a welterweight set-to, Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson comes up with some anecdotes about the three fights Ruffin staged in New York with that other doughy Montreal brawler, Johnny Greco.

As relayed by Fergie from Ruffin's manager, Maurice Waxman, the yarns give some of the backstage doings.

Before the first fight there was the celebrated episode when Ruffin left his dressing room before ring time and was gone about 10 minutes. There were wild reports that he was taken out by mobsters who put the heat on him, but Waxman laughs that to scorn.

What happened, so the boss character says, is that Bobby went out for nothing more alarming than having his nose sprayed. Seems in the right direction and Prime Minister King's recent statement is a source of gratification to the Salvation Army." Lt.-Col. William Dray, Salvation Army resident secretary for Immigration in Canada, said in an interview here Saturday. He has concluded a tour across the country discussing immigration problems with welfare agencies and government officials.
