Nutrition Problems Discussed

An exceptionally interesting and instructive lecture was delivered before the Charlottetown Fox Club last evening by Professor Oscar Eri, research Professor at Ohio State University, formerly Head of the Dairy Department of that institution for 26 years.

Professor Eri stressed particularly the dire need of more sanitary practices on Fox Ranches, particularly in the preparation of feeds. Meats that are decomposed very rapidly producing toxins which the liver of the fox must counteract. Continuous feeding of decomposed materials to the fox, since the fox has a relative small liver, results in disaster.

In ordinary temperatures decompose very rapidly producing toxins which the liver of the fox must counteract. Continuous feeding of decomposed materials to the fox, since the fox has a relative small liver, results in disaster.

Food deficiencies, particularly in regard to the various Vitamins and minerals ultimately result in deficiency diseases, such as scurvy, as an example, in case of iodine deficiency in the diet. Further, since the natural mineral elements in the soils have been depleted over a long period of cultivation and leaching, the grasses and vegetation on which the animals live and which the fox eats, are low in mineral elements, especially, and consequently the ultimate food of the fox is likewise low in these elements, and therefore must be strengthened by the addition of minerals in organic and inorganic form in the proper proportions. Such a system of feeding strengthens the resistance of the fox to diseases.

The Professor related many instances in practical operation where attention to the minute feeding of various minerals and Vitamins has changed failure to successful operations.

The feeding of various vegetables and sprouted grains as part of the daily ration was emphasized, and pointed out that on the largest ranch on which he overuses the feeding, these are fed continuously. Sprouted wheat and corn is used there on all breeding foxes.

Professor Eri, who is technical adviser for Sungle feeds, makes an annual visit to Prince Edward Island, and expressed his appreciation of the Island and the hospitality of the Island people.

A CYCLIST'S CELEBRITY
Over the hills of Kelly's Cross The cyclist flying goes Into the vales of Kelly's Cross While the evening sunset glows.

Have you ever been out on a drowsy eve
With the shadows sinking low,
Paddling a cycle with grace and ease,
On a highway—trees all a-row?

The forested hills loom before your eyes
As you sink into the vale,
And the sun falls down in the west,
While the evening breeze it falls.

Then you mount the grade with a weary stride
And the sun comes back to view;
Yes, the walking traveller envies your ride,
But you laugh and look at the blue.

As you reach the top with a forward stretch,
A new wonder waits for us all;
The straits, in their evening glory fetch
A laughing smile at the flaming ball.

They toss and pitch with an awkward ease,
As the evening shadows lower
On the top of the crest—you are sinking fast
Into a green valed bower.

Before you know, you're winding up
For a halfway mount on the hill,
And you'll envy the cyclist of Kelly's Cross
As she rolls in the gate with a spill.

Then the call is to all of the sporting class
Who wish for real thrilling drives,
To follow the way of the pre-described lass
And have the best time in their lives.

Over the hills of Kelly's Cross
The cyclist flying goes,
Into the vales of Kelly's Cross
While the evening sunset glows.

Service of Remembrance
A Service of Remembrance was held in honour of the faithful members of the U.B.W.M.U. who this last year have passed on to a higher service. DEATH OF

He became secretary of treasury first in the administration of Warren G. Harding, and was held over by Presidents Coolidge and Hoover.

Republicans called him "the greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton", but in his public career he was long the target of Democratic party criticism. By some he was made the symbol of great corporate wealth. In 1924 there was an unsuccessful attempt in the Senate to drive him from office.

The public never knew the real power and force of his inner-circle advice to the Republican party.

He was widely regarded as one of the ablest supporters of Herbert Hoover as President. In 1928 he was Mellon was swung the big Pennsylvania delegation in line for Hoover and smashed a powerful "stop Hoover" movement.

brunt of Japanese aggression. "Tomorrow it will be that of those other nations who still stand in the way of Japan's ambitions," he said.

In an interview with Reuters News Agency, Quo Tai-Chi criticized Great Britain and the United States for having "failed to maintain strict neutrality in the present conflict," not preventing Japan from using Shanghai's international settlement as a base for military operations.

"Japan's declaration of a blockade is further proof, if further proof is needed, that Japan is in the midst of engaging in a large-scale war of aggression aimed at nothing short of the complete subjugation and conquest of China according to a plan," the envoy said.

The injury to the Ambassador called forth large headlines in British newspapers.

"We greatly deplore this outrage especially at such a critical time," said a Chinese Embassy statement.

"The incident focuses attention on one fact," the statement continued, "the machine-gunning of civilians outside the war zone is occurring every day in China."

"A Japanese attack of this kind against innocent civilians is a crime against all humanity. It is only when a notable like Sir Hughie is involved that the fact is disclosed to the world. A glance at a map is sufficient to show that the road (on which Sir Hughie is traveling) was entirely away from the war zone."

PRESS COMMENT
LONDON, Aug. 27—(Friday)—The Daily Mail and the Daily Herald, widely divergent politically, today both were editorially calm over the shooting in China of the British Ambassador, Sir Hughie Knatchbull-Hugessen, by Japanese aircraft.

The Mail (Conservative) noting that "all circumstances indicate this unfortunate happening undoubtedly was an accident—like 'if friendly relations are to be maintained between Great Britain and Japan all possible steps should be taken to see that unfortunate accidents are avoided in future."

The Herald (Labour) says the Japanese "certainly are not such fools as to make a deliberate attack on the British Ambassador or even a British car at this stage."

"It was a tragic accident—like the bombing of the Deutschland perhaps—and no Brown is going to ask for a sequel like Almeria."

HELSINGFORS, Aug. 26—(AP)—Archie San Romani, Kansas, bet he'd set the world's record for the 2,000 metres today when he ran the distance in 5:16.7. San Romani defeated Taisto Maaki, Finnish runner, who also broke the old record of 5:18.4 set by Kaleeride Jonsson in July.

today not far from the Montague Road and extended from Bell's Hill, three miles out to within less than a half mile from the town.

The buildings in danger in the Mt. Stewart area yesterday included: Frank Feehan's and Thomas Reas on the Anderson Road; Alex. J. McKenzie's at Scotchfort; James McLaughlin's and Addison Coffin's at Mt. Stewart.

The fire at its nearest point was about half a mile from the village of Mt. Stewart which was in no immediate danger unless there was a change in wind direction.

Rain Unlooked For
Weather reports for today gave little hope of rainfall within the next twenty-four hours to aid the fire. In fact, there were three inches of rain has fallen since July 1st. Mr. Warren Burns, meteorologist at the Charlottetown Experimental Station said last night, 1.06 inches precipitation was recorded on August 11 at Charlottetown but high winds for the past several days have dried soil and vegetation to the tinder point.

Origin of the fire near Montague which was first noticed in brush on Alex McPherson's farm, Union Road on Tuesday evening, was unknown. As soon as the fire was discovered men rushed to the area and as the flames had but slight headway succeeded in preventing them from spreading. They were unable however to completely subdue the fire which was smouldering in the drystrumps and brush. Guards were posted Tuesday night and through the day Wednesday further efforts were made to stamp out the smouldering ember. By night fall the situation appeared under control.

Fire Gets Beyond Control
Early yesterday men again patrolled the danger zone but a rising wind shortly before noon suddenly drove the flames beyond the control of the fire-fighters. Mounted police were hurriedly called to take charge of the situation. Police at Montague had earlier been called to fight a serious blaze at Martinvale and men from a detachment of the Charlottetown appeared from all sections attracted by the volumes of smoke.
