SILVER FOX CAPTURED AT NEW ANNAN RACE TRACK

A beautiful silver black fox which had escaped from Mr. Frank Tuplin's ranch and made the woods surrounding New Annan race track its habitat for the past month, was run to earth one evening last week.

SYNCHRONIZATION

Girl of Eleven Pale and Lifeless

So Nervous and Irritable That She Finally Kept to Her Bed—By Using the Great Food Cure She Grew Strong and Healthy

Italy Cross, N. S., June 5.—In every school there are children who do not seem to be able to stand the strain of school work. The confinement indoors, the poor ventilation, the strain on the eyes and the nerves, all combine to sap the vitality and to undermine the strength of the human body.

Because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has proven exceptionally effective under these circumstances, it has come to be considered standard as a restorative treatment for pale, weak, nervous children.

What a pleasure it is to watch the color return to wan cheeks and to see the child romp and play as a healthy child should. This experience of Mrs. Hartman will surely interest you. Mrs. Stephen Hartman, Italy Cross, Lunenburg county, N. S. writes: "My little sister at eleven years of age became nervous, irritable, and seemed all tired out. She had no appetite, was lifeless and drowsy, and her complexion grew pale and sallow. Finally she had to keep her bed and have somebody with her all the time. She was afraid of everything, would get excited and tremble till the bed would shake. As she seemed to be getting worse under the doctor's treatment, mother decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. After she had used about four boxes improvement was noticeable, and it was wonderful to see how much brighter and stronger she grew week by week. She used ten boxes altogether, and they cured her. She got fat and rosy and went to school every day with an ambition that she never seemed to have before. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone, for it was indeed wonderful what it did for her."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of six boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

SOMETHING TOWARD IT

It was the last car for the suburbs that night.

Suddenly there came the tinkle of a coin dropped on the floor of the car and the benevolent old gentleman who was sitting in the corner seat leaned over and picked up something.

"Anyone lost a $5 gold piece?" he asked. Nine passengers searched through their pockets and announced that they had.

"It is dated 1896," said the finder. "The things of the losers were thinning. Four avowed that their lost coin bore that date.

"And it is worn on one side," said the old man. "Yes," glibly lied one passenger. "Then, here you are," beamed the old man. "Here's a nickel toward it."

GERMANS FORCE CAPTIVES TO DO MUNITION WORK

AMSTERDAM, June 2.—The following story of life in a munition factory at Cassel, Germany, is furnished me by a prisoner of war. I give it in his own words: "Henschels steel factory since the outbreak of the war turned the whole of its resources over to the production of munitions. Approximately 20,000 people were employed there in the latter part of 1915 and amongst these were 2,000 prisoners of war who were sent there, not knowing, until they arrived, the nature of the work they were to perform. The majority of the prisoners immediately realized they were at a munition factory, refused to work, but either through force, persuasion, or guile, they subsequently remained.

The method of compelling a prisoner to work is peculiar. On arrival at the works the prisoners are given a good meal, a few bottles of beer, and things to smoke. They are interviewed by the firm's interpreter, whose duty it is to impress on the prisoners that it is not a munitions factory. They only make bicycles, pocket knives, razors, etc. The field guns and siege guns, machine guns, and thousands of shells you see stacked on every spare foot of the yard—well, they paint these. You flatly refuse to start work, and a German officer of high rank appears, who the interpreter informs you, is in charge of the works of the prisoners of war, is invested with supreme power, and can sentence you to death. You again refuse to work, and immediately you are surrounded by twenty sentries who tickle your ear with the butt of their rifles or a bayonet.

When you regain consciousness, you find yourself under ground in a cell close to the exhaust pipes of the various machines. You stick this usually three, four, or five days, and then suddenly the interpreter asks: "Will you work now?" Should you answer in the negative you are left another three or five days. Should you tell him you are thirsty and hungry, having had nothing to eat for three or five days, he informs you that if you consent to work you will have anything in reason that you desire. He takes you to a dining hall and you do justice to the food given you. Then you are given a few bottles of lager beer and a cigar. Your guardian-angel unfolds to you a wonderful tale. I give you the conversation exactly as it took place between the interpreter and myself: "He said: 'If you will work for us at our trade (crucible steel smelting), we will pay you 25 marks a day, out of which you pay ten marks for food and lodging. You shall live in a house in town with civilians, and be allowed to wear civilian clothes. When your work is finished you may go anywhere you wish, providing you are accompanied by the German in whose house you are lodging. There is no reason why you should not be comfortable.'"

The informant goes on to tell of deplorable moral conditions, encouraged by the authorities. WITH THE PRUNES From the Yonkers Statesman "We missed you for several mornings," remarked the blonde typewriter to the thin boarder as he glided into the meatless-wheatless breakfast table.

"Well, see if you can miss this one, Cutie," replied the conundrum-thrower. "Why is the English general, Sir Julian Byng, the hero of Cambrai, like Annette Kellermann, the swimmer?"

"One has made good in fights and the other in tights," suggested the bank-clerk with the red necktie.

"Won't do," answered the man who started the trouble. "Listen. Here's the answer: Because they were both made famous by the tanks."

Little Judging the First Two Days Capt. the Rev. T. G. Wallace, of St. Stephen's Church, in an address to the graduating nurses of the Western Hospital yesterday, told this story: Father Ryan, in his discourse, told his parishioners how on the last day all classes and all peoples would be assembled before the Lord for judgment. Meeting the priest next day, Pat told his reverence how he had enjoyed the sermon adding: "Did you say, father, all peoples would be present on Judgment Day?" "Yes, Pat," was the answer. "Those on the west front, and on the east front, and the Ulstermen and the Sinn Feiners, and everybody?" Pat continued. "Yes," was the reply. "Then, I'm thinking the Lord won't do much Judging the first two days."
