DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

gay crowd and rolls home with the milkman. Furthermore, parents didn't use to have to worry about what a nice girl would do. Nice girls didn't smoke, nor drink, nor even pet, unless they were engaged to a young man, but what with the present day bars and roadhouses there are plenty of things to give parents gray hair and wrinkles before their time.

FORESEE DANGER

It is because parents cannot keep their own daughters from doing the things that other people's daughters do, and because fathers and mothers know that these little ignorant girls, who think themselves so wise, are in such danger, that it makes all who have daughters feel that they are tackling a great and unsolvable problem.

Of course, bringing up boys is likewise a job that is full of anxiety and heartaches, but the worst that can befall a boy is not so tragically bad as what can happen to a girl. For a boy to be talked about does not blast his reputation as it does a girl's. For a boy to get drunk is not the same as it is for a girl to get drunk. For a boy to lead a loose life does not put him beyond the pale as it does a girl.

The world judges a woman harder than it does a man because it expects her to be better and purer. And God help us all when we cease to expect this.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I have a young son who has just started going out with the girls. I have always encouraged him to bring his boy friends home, and have told him to bring his girl friends also, but my friends think I am not doing right in this. What do you think?

A WIDOW.

ANSWER: You are exactly right to have your son bring his girl friends as well as his boy friends to your house. That gives not only him, but you, a line upon them.

A girl seen against the background of a home shows just what she is, and many a little gum-chewing bobby-socker, who looked attractive enough on the street, will display her lack of refinement in your drawing room, and thereby disillusion your son. And you may be sure that your boy is only going with nice girls if he brings them home with him.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a young man, very much in love with a girl of 16. Our parents will not consent to our marriage because we are so young. It is our intention to get married secretly, and I expect to land a fair job in a few months. What is your advice?

WONDERING.

ANSWER: Don't do it, son. Wait at least till you have pulled off that "fair" job and have some way of feeding your wife. You know girls of 16 are a hungry lot. Also, they have to have clothes. And consider this point: Don't you think it is a pretty rotten thing for a boy to get married and take his wife home for his poor old father to support?

VISITING NEW GLASGOW—Rev. and Mrs. Roy Webster and their children will call here this week to spend a day or so with Mrs. Webster's parents on Fraser Mountain before proceeding to New York where they will leave Sept. 10 for China. ENJOYED VISIT HERE—Mr. Stanislaus B. Pitre, police magistrate and judge of the Juvenile Court for the district of St. Paul, Alberta, and Mrs. Pitre, who spent three weeks visiting friends and relatives in Bloomfield, Wellington, Miscouche, Summerside, Rustico, Charlottetown and Souris, have left on return to their home. It was 42 years since Mr. Pitre had left his old home in Bloomfield and naturally he found great changes, many good ones, but also, not a few which he considered not so good. Mr. Pitre, a former student at Saint Dunstan's College, taught school for some time in Bloomfield. He and his family moved to Manitoba in 1905. Here he taught school for several years in the vicinity of Winnipeg. In 1928 they went to Alberta where Mr. Pitre continued in the teaching profession until seven years ago when he received his present position in St. Paul. Mr. and Mrs. Pitre have brought up a family of ten children, all of whom are living and doing well. They state that nearly all Prince Edward Islanders in Western Canada have met with a very considerable measure of success in the larger field afforded them in the Western Provinces. The many friends of this highly esteemed couple were delighted to see them enjoying such good health and to learn of their success.

ELLEN'S DIARY

of us, and we went to The Fair. James and his namesake chose to remain at home with us, much to our secret delight. And we loitered the afternoon away with the small ones. It was not nearly so hot as yesterday, a pleasant breeze cooling the valley for us. And once, near to the supper hour, there was a sudden gust that slammed open doors and whirled clouds of dust along the lane. Threatening clouds had massed then, but even as we kept watch of them they scattered, without giving us the benefit of rain in the district.

James was reminiscent once, for Jamie's sake And Jamie listened round-eyed and attended to every word while his grand-father recounted for him all the details of his first trip to the Old Exhibition in the now far away past. I could go back with James to enjoy the scenes of those former years." I suppose I must have been about twelve then, for I went with my father—and I was only fourteen when he died. We drove old Cleveland — of course he wasn't old then—a much respected animal out of those and later years "and I remember the morning just as well as if it had been this one. It was lovely, and not so hot as these days have been for it was held later in the year" James' glance lingered on the water on the pond, which glistened in radiant sunlight, and on the grain field ripening on the slope above then followed the course of a car moving in a dusty trail along and beyond the hill beside.

We left him alone with his thoughts. Then "he was a horse we bought in Lot 30 — had him for years, until he died not long before your grand-mother came here. He's buried back in the woods. I could show you the exact spot — though it's grown up now with trees. Before we got any distance on the road, we caught up with other wagons, for everyone drove horses and wagons in those days—and nice it was, Ellen—and as we neared town there would be a line of them on the flint road." "The flint road" was a new expression to Jamie, but he let it pass and "How many wagons?" he asked, "would there be a dozen?" "A dozen!" James replied searching his memory, "there would be a lot more than that—and the racing there would be, if a fellow had a good horse! Cleveland was quite a trotter himself, and I remember we had many merry brushes with other horses on the way to and from The Exhibition that day. "You know, Ellen" he said, turning to me, 'they may rave about how wonderful an era this one is for young folks and make fun of the 'those and buggy days", but all the same those were pretty nice times to live in." "Yes, he said, looking rather pityingly towards Jamie, who is, I would consider a favored lad in many ways, "those were days I would not have missed for anything.' But dear me, this day has almost gone to join those. Our young charges are asleep, one in the wide old bed in the room above the kitchen here, and a small busy lass with a bright curly head in her own in the house across the lane. James is keeping watch over there until such time as I come to relieve him. And with the rumble of every car that moves along this now next-to-deserted road of ours, I fancy Jock and Jeanie are returning. And now Paul, who knows more than I about such homings, sets up a joyful bark, and is off the verandah in a rush and down the lane in the darkness. It can mean only one thing—our young folks returning.

Until tomorrow — Diary—Goodnight.

ALBION WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The Albion Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Alex Jackson on Monday evening, August 4th. Meeting opened by singing the "ode" and repeating the "creed" in unison. Nine members responded to roll call by naming their favorite colour. Two visitors were present.

The minutes of July meeting were read and approved. The committees gave their reports, and new ones were appointed

The entertainment programme was in charge of Mrs. W.D. Fraser and Mrs. Bert Taylor.

The proceeds of the sale of tickets for our nursery mat amounted to $24.60. The lucky ticket was drawn by Helen Jackson and won by Mrs Warren Kemp.

Mrs. James Creed was appointed to buy soap, towels, etc. for school before re-opening. Mrs. Richard Westaway invited the members for September meeting when roll call will be answered by exchange of pickling recipes. A very delicious luncheon was served by Mrs. Jackson assisted by Mrs Taylor.

BATTLES NOT WON GIRLS, WHEN YOU'VE CAUGHT HIM

"Why doesn't somebody tell women that it is a lot more important for a man to be proud of his wife's looks than it ever was before they were married?"

The man who asked that question in his letter went on to say how many men of his acquaintance had married attractive girls who, in a few short years lost most of their attractiveness.

He reasoned —and perhaps rightly so—that women who grow careless about their figures and are unimaginative about their dress — just don't realize how important their looks are to the man they married, comments a woman writer.

When girls are out to get husbands, they certainly know that a man wants to be proud of his date. They'll spend two hours getting ready to go to the movies and half a day glamorizing themselves for a dance.

Of course, most women — after they take on the full-time job of housekeeping and being a mother, have less time to spend on their appearance.

But with a little will power they can keep their figures. With imagination and planning they can get in enough beauty licks to make the most of whatever beauty is theirs at any age.

All they need to remember is that it is much more important to a man to be able to say with pride, "This is my wife," than it ever will be for him to say, "This is Miss so-and-so."

Use CERTO to get 50% MORE JAM or JELLY
Quick... Easy... Sure Results

1 SHORT BOIL saves time and work. To make jam with Certo you need only a one to two-minute full, rolling boil . . . for jellies only a half-minute to a minute.

2 YOU GET 50% MORE jam or jelly than with old-fashioned, long-boil recipes. The Certo boil is so short that very little of your precious juice has time to boil away in steam.

3 FRESH FRUIT TASTE and colour are retained in Certo jams and jellies. They taste delicious, look appetizing because the boil is too short to spoil the fresh flavor or dull the natural colour.

4 TESTED RECIPES Give sure results. See booklet under the label. Follow exactly the one for the particular fruit you are using. Certo is fruit pectin—the natural jellying substance extracted from fruit.

A pound of jam or jelly made with Certo contains no more sugar than a pound made the old long-boil way
