NEVER QUESTIONED HIS OWN METHODS

A Few Sidelights in the Life of J. Pierpont Morgan, Financier and Art Collector

Few men were more widely feared yet more generally trusted than J. P. Morgan. Those who met him only in a business way saw a man rough, emphatic, and repellent, inaccessible almost as the Emperor of Russia when he chose to be, known as the worst man in the world to interview, and as a man who believed absolutely in himself and apparently never questioned the correctness of his method.

The collection of books and works of art was his chief pleasure, but he had numerous other diversions. His favorite sport was yachting, and his steam yacht Corsair was one of the largest and most sumptuous private vessels afloat.

Mr. Morgan's collection of art works probably is the most valuable individual one in the world. Once Mr. Morgan kept abroad a collection of objects of art valued at $3,000,000 rather than pay the duty on them demanded by the United States Government.

Many anecdotes are told of J. P. Morgan's methods and mannerisms in business dealings and in social affairs. A firm of jewelers who had received a fine pearl decided to send it down to Mr. Morgan and let him have first bid on it.

The jeweler answered: "I can understand now how it is that you have earned your place as the leading financier."
