'Winnie' Wishes Hitler Were In Range

Straight from the shoulder, Winston Churchill always talks, and straight from the shoulder he shoots, too. This photo shows him on a recent visit to a British armament plant, where he tried his hand with an automatic gun. LONDON, Aug. 12—(CP Cable)—"Missing" was the ominous word written tonight beside the illustrious name of Wing Commander Douglas R. Bader, curly-haired air-stunter who gained most of his fame as the legless leader of the all-Canadian squadron of the Royal Air Force, now shrouded by death or transfer of most of its Canadian identity.

The brief word that Bader failed to reach home after one of his numerous sweeps over enemy territory was given out by his mother at the village rectory at Sprotborough, Yorkshire. Confirmation was made by the air ministry which, at the same time, announced a similar fate had befallen Lt. E. S. Lock, 2-year-old holder of the D.S.O. and the D. F. C. and bar, all awarded by the King at the same time.
