The next number, which guest was shown how to make a reef knot by a guide and a knot game followed. Another game, the King's jelly was lots of fun. The girls then formed a horseshoe around an improvised camp fire and their captain read from their log book showing great activity on the part of the girls under their capable leaders. Opening Of Manitoba Legislature

WINNIPEG, Feb. 20—(CP)—Legislation for formation of a land court will be placed before the third session of the 20th Manitoba Legislature which got underway here today. The speech from the throne, read by Lieutenant-Governor W. J. Tupper, K. C., announced plans for the court which would handle settlements of farmer's debts.

The speech said the Dominion Government would be asked to keep the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act operating until the land court was ready to take over debt problems. Co-operation of the Dominion will be required to obtain necessary powers for the court and representations with this view in mind have been made to Ottawa officials.

Legislation will be introduced to extend operation of the youth training program which has assisted both rural and urban young people during the last year. It is hoped to absorb young people trained under the plan, in industry.

A feature of the speech was the announcement that in 1938 for the first time in 20 years there were more discharges from mental hospitals than admissions. Operation of clinics for mental hygiene "are now showing most positive and gratifying results," the speech said.

HOW TO AVOID RICKETS IN YOUR PUPS

Fox Breeders! You cannot expect good breeders or good pelters from weak, sickly pups. And loss of pups is a serious set-back. Rickets and weakness can always be traced to wrong feeding. All too often rickets shows up on ranches where the owner is "saving money" buying cheap feeds deficient in essential minerals and vitamins. Our recommendation, based on long experience and the results of large breeders, is: feed a properly balanced Fox Food like R-M Vita Crumbla "A" or "B" (Reg'd) as part of the ration. These well known foods have been on the market for many years and are among the very best. "A" is for pelters and "B" for breeders. They are manufactured by Ross-Miller Biscuit Co., Ltd., of Napanee, Ontario. Both foods are rich in vitamins and essential minerals to counteract any tendency to rickets. You'll find good results follow steady use. The latest feeding schedules may be obtained without charge by writing the company.

Unemployment

It was apparent, Mr. Neill said, that the provinces, particularly Quebec, would not agree to a constitutional amendment necessary to enable the Federal Government to enact and administer an unemployment insurance scheme.

In the United States, a similar problem was overcome by including an insurance clause in the Social Security Act and imposing a tax which was payable by all the states but which would be applied to the insurance fund if the state concerned entered the scheme.

It would be useless to attempt to impose an insurance system on the provinces but Mr. Neill was convinced if legislation similar to that adopted in the United States were enacted in Canada the provinces would ultimately enter the scheme as was the case with the states.

There was no question of the need or of the value of unemployment insurance, Mr. Neill said. Most countries in Europe had it and Great Britain had operated a system of this nature since 1911. Much support could be found for the move in Canada. The main parties had endorsed it and he thought a measure of support could be found in the Social Credit group.

"The only discordant note has come from the Canadian Manufacturers Association," Mr. Neill said. "Reactionaries" were unable to realize that such a scheme would work for their ultimate good. Alternative schemes had been offered in the United States, Mr. Neill said, mentioning the Townsend plan and movements promising subsandial allowances to all citizens.

Mr. Neill reviewed the efforts of the last Conservative Government to introduce an unemployment insurance scheme which was later found unconstitutional, and the steps taken by the present government up to the point where Alberta, Quebec and New Brunswick refused to agree to the necessary amendment to the British North America Act.

Mr. Neill thought too much attention was being paid the views of the provinces on this question. He believed such views were initiated by a few "politicians" and did not properly reflect the spirit of the British North America Act.

John R. MacNicol, (Con. Toronto-Davenport) supported the resolution. He was sorry the Unemployment Insurance Act passed under the Bennett Government in 1935 was not placed in operation. Had Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett been returned to office the Insurance Act would have been placed in operation It might have been challenged in the courts but at least the people of Canada, particularly the working people, would have seen it in operation.

Angus MacInnis (C.C.F. Vancouver East) supported the resolution and commended the mover, "I think we are all agreed as to the need of employment insurance," he said. The happy feature of such a system was that those who qualified for its benefits obtained them in time of need without going through the unpleasant formalities preliminary to obtaining direct relief under the present system.

Sir Robert declined to disclose the contents of the memorandum, saying merely Great Britain had offered "friendly suggestions" for Franco's approval or rejection.

Smoke Signal Brings Assistance

EDMONTON, Feb. 20— (CP) — Two thin columns of smoke—the old Indian distress signal—today were credited with bringing supplies to a trapper and his family just as they neared the end of the only food they had on hand, moose meat.

Pilot Sheldon Luck of United Air Transport noticed the signal Saturday while flying the mail to Whitehorse, Y. T. It rose from a cottage near a little lake nestled in a deep mountain-rimmed valley about 100 miles west of Watson Lake on the British Columbia-Yukon border.

With the trapper, Billy Smith, Luck left the supply of 50 pounds of emergency rations carried by all pilots flying into the Canadian northland.

Is Impressed With Housing Development

TORONTO, Feb. 20—(CP)—Ontario and Toronto appear to be far behind other sections of Canada, and the Maritime Provinces in particular, with respect to housing developments, speakers said at the opening session of the National Housing Conference here today.

"I planned to say in my speech tonight that Canada had done nothing concrete towards housing improvement," said Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, general chairman of the conference and former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontrario. "After hearing these reports I shall be obliged to make some changes in my address."

Dr. Bruce said he was impressed with an an address by Mary E. Arnold of Reserve Mines, N. S., in which was described the co-operative housing plan put into effect by the Reserve miners in the past two years.

"Behind the whole idea is the belief that if you awaken in men the knowledge of the power they have to do something, they will do it," Miss Arnold said.

"After the miners in Reserve started a credit union and cooperative store a small group decided their greatest need was housing. So 10 miners organized a housing study cricle two years ago.

"Today, just a mile and a half from Reserve, a town of 800 miners, we have Tompkinsville. It is the first project under the Nova Scotia Housing Commission which made money available under the Housing Act."

Miss Arnold said the Tompkinsville houses on the open market would be valued at $3,400. Under the contract conditions they were built for $2,400 each. She said the amount of money actually involved was $1,500, which the miner borrows under the act, and $100 he subscribes himself.

"These houses are not what might be termed 'working men's houses,'" she said. "They are real homes with large basements, 10-inch concrete walls, a glorious kitchen, hardwood floors, three bedrooms and well-appointed bathroom. In addition, each has an acre of land for subsistence farming.

"The maintenance cost of the houses is $9.66 a month, which covers interest, taxes, amortization and so on, and, in addition $2 a month is subscribed for a reserve fund."

Professor S. H. Prince of Nova Scotia told of the work of a citizens' committee organized in Halifax nine years ago which succeeded in having the first housing legislation in Canada put through the legislature. The act has proved favorable to the Antigonish movement and assisted greatly in the co-operative housing unit at Reserve Mines, he said.

Great Britain Too Must 'Export Or Die' Says Oliver Stanley

LONDON, Feb. 20—(CP-Havas)—Great Britain, too, must "export or die," Oliver Stanley, President of the Board of Trade, warned Germany tonight.

While the United Kingdom has "no desire for cut-throat competition backed by state aid," he said, "we do want, and we must have, our share of the export trade of the world."

Evidence that Stanley was addressing his remarks directly to the Reich, which he is scheduled to visit in March during the period when British and German industrial representatives are seeking to avert an Anglo-German trade war, was seen in he fact he deliberately picked up the "export or die" phrase used by Chancellor Hitler in the Fuehrer's last Reichstag speech.

The Board of Trade president spoke at Mansion House at a banquet given by the government to celebrate the British industries fair, opened at Olympia and Earl's Court exposition palaces today by the queen. Wares of 67 nations are on exhibition.

The Duke of Gloucester, speaking for the Royal family at tonight's banquet, pleaded for faith in the future, remarking that "if business men will only refuse to regard gloomy possibilities as probabilities, they will create a wave of confidence that will travel across every ocean."

Mr. Stanley appealed for a halt on the armaments race, which he declared threatened to create a false prosperity.

URGES HOUSE ENDORSE HUGE ARMS OUTLAY

Sir John Simon Opens Defence Debate In British House.

LONDON, Feb. 20—(CP Havas)—Stating an increase above the $7,050,000,000 already authorized for Great Britain's five-year rearmament plan was "now certain" unless the international situation improves, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer today called on Parliament to endorse the doubling of the $2,000,000,000 defence loan maximum.

In a resolution embodying the recommendations and estimates of last week's white paper, Sir John urged Commons at the outset of a two-day armaments debate to grant a new ceiling of $4,000,000,000 for financing the defence machine. Use of the large sum would be extended to civilian defence, protection against air raids and stocking of food reserves.

No Income Tax Increase?

Although cautioning the House against "premature" conclusions, the Chancellor recalled there had been three income tax increases in the last three years and indicated the Government expected to meet the 1939-40 defence outlay of £580,000,000 through current fiscal resources and borrowing. His announced belief that the "present generation is already playing its part" in contributions to the war chest indicated there would be no further tax levies this year.

The coming fiscal period, the Government spokesman predicted "will see full-blast production and be a year of most substantial progress."

"Unprecedented" expenditures were imminent, he admitted. That they would surpass the previous giant 1937-42 estimate "is really now certain unless some rapid change for the better takes place in the international field," he said.

Situation "Horrible"

Sir John described as "horrible" a situation which required such enormous payments for war preparations instead of for "peaceful progress." A general limitation on armaments, he said, would be a boon to Britain and the world.

But, he continued, other powers were faced with the same disastrous burdens. He expressed confidence that Britain aided by its financial strength and "democratic faith", would emerge unshaken.

In presenting the Government resolution, Sir John told the House that of the £1,500,000,000 originally set down by the white paper of Feb. 17, 1937, for the five-year plan, it was now evident that fully £1,250,000,000 would have to be spent within the first three years.

He pointed out that hitherto the passive defence outlays had not been included in the regular armaments budget, although they were an essential part of the nation's protection system. He urged that the use of borrowed capital was thoroughly justified for purchase of equipment and foodstuffs which would strengthen the country's defence in time of war.

The defence debate will continue tomorrow with Clement Attlee, Labor Leader, and Prime Minister Chamberlain participating. Debate today was limited to financial aspects of the question, but tomorrow it will embrace the whole field.

Approve Sale Of Planes And Ships To Foreign Powers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20—(AP)—A Russian proposal to build battleships in United States yards and a Netherlands plan to buy more than 100 military airplanes here won the approval today of some of the most outspoken Senate critics of President Roosevelt's handling of warplane sales to the French Government.

The approval was qualified, however, by assertions that the United States should disclose none of its military secrets, make all sales on a cash basis and conduct negotiations with the prospective purchasers "in the open."

The Soviet Government, it was recently reported, is to send a naval mission here to negotiate for construction of two battleships in this country. State Department officials understand that a Netherlands military mission is already in this country to arrange purchases of airplanes and other war materials.

Senators Bridges of New Hampshire, Nye of North Dakota and Austin of Vermont, all Republicans said they could see no objection to either the Russian or Netherlands proposals.

Draft Bill To Combat Wave Of Terrorism

DUBLIN, Feb. 20 (CP Havas)—The death penalty may be imposed for acts of treason committed within or outside the state under the terms of Eire's new treason bill, the text of which was published tonight

Designed to combat the wave of terrorism imputed to members of the illegal Irish Republican Army, the bill is described as an "act to provide for the punishment of treason and ancillary offences, and repeal the treasonable offences act of 1925."

Treason is specifically defined as "levying war against the state, assisting any state or person or inciting or conspiring with any persons to levy war against the state, or attempts by force of arms or other violent means to overthrow the organs of the Government established by the constitution, or partaking or being concerned in or inciting or conspiring with any person to make or partake or be concerned in such acts."

The first section decrees death for every person convicted of committing treason with the state. Sub-sections provide similar punishment on conviction to anyone who, being an Irish citizen or who ordinarily lives within the state, commits treason outside Eire.

The bill provides that anyone charged with treason and indicted before the Central Criminal Court of Dublin is to be arraigned and tried under the same procedure as a person charged with murder. No person is to be convicted of treason on the uncorroborated evidence of one witness.

Section two of the bill rules that anyone who encourages, harbors or comforts a person engaged in committing treason shall be judged guilty of a felony, unless the defendant can prove he had no knowledge of the crime.

The bill's third section provides for the punishment of those concealing treason. Anyone knowing that an act of treason is intended or proposed and does not inform authorities, shall be judged guilty of a felony. Prison terms are provided and in the case of section two fines may be imposed.

U. S. Senator Lashes Out At Dictator States

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20 — (AP)—Senator Pittman, Nevada Democrat, denouncing dictator states as intent on dominating the world, declared tonight that Americans would die if necessary to preserve the things they "consider worth more than life."

Ridiculing the policy of appeasement and the United States isolationists, the chairman of the United States Senate Foreign Affairs Committee called for a firm stand in defence of American rights "throughout the universe."

Such a policy, he said in a speech prepared for the Washington Star's radio forum, was the most likely to keep the United States out of war.

As for attempts at appeasement, by giving way to demands of dictator states, he declared:

"The policy of appeasement has not only been unsuccessful and ultimately destructive, but has been immoral.

"It is evident that no person can die but once, and the period of life is limited, and that it is far better that he die a few days earlier for christianity, justice and liberty than that he live a little longer in cowardice and degeneracy."

his ambition. Sometimes in the prison she had had fancies of meeting him and making him realize it. . . .

She bent her head to hide her suddenly burning face.

"Twenty-seven shillings a week isn't much, of course," she said, gaining time to think.

"No, the other jobs are better, unless you have something else to do in the mornings."

"Yes, but a private family — I don't know that I wanted a job with a private family very much."

Perhaps if it were Hewitson he might not recognize her after all. People didn't. Her stepfather had not. In court she had worn a hat. . .veryone said how much she had changed.

"Well, that's all I have at present that would be suitable."

The woman shut her book with a final air.

Christabel drew a breath and spoke on impulse:

"Then I'll apply for the job at the clinic!"

"Just as you like."

The woman wrote out a card with the address of the clinic on it.

"It's in Bering Street. The best station to go to is East Ham, and then take a bus. That was how my friend used to go. Let us know if you get the job."

"Thank you, I will."

Christabel went down the stairs holding the card, her nerves tense, her heart beating hard.

She walked slowly in the direction of Notting Hill Gate tube station.

She could still draw back. Ring the agency and say she could not take the job, but would try for one of the others. But the idea of meeting Hewitson had brought her to life. It was a ghose who had gone up the stairs, a woman bitterly alive who came down them.

She had appeared in court as Mary Christabel Milsom, so that the name Christabel Collet would not bring her to Hewitson's mind. Why should he recognize her if her stepfather had not?

The idea frightened yet fascinated her. She knew it was profoundly unwise from every point of view. She would try to get away from the past. With Hewitson about she would be back in the midst of it, dwelling on feelings which were much better forgotten.
