Changes in Canadian Corps General staff

(By Ross Munro)
(Canadian Press War Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, April 27—(CP Cable)—Details of important changes in the general staff of the Canadian corps, involving the succession of two Canadian brigadiers to posts held by outstanding British officers, were made known today at corps headquarters.

Brig. E. L. M. Burns of Ottawa prepared to take over the duties of Brig. M. C. Dempsey as brigadier of the general staff handling all military operations of the overseas army.

Brig. G. R. Turner of Fredericton, has been promoted to succeed Brig. C. A. P. Murison as deputy adjutant and quarter-master general.

The changes will be made within the next few weeks, making the corps of the general staff completely Canadian.

In the corps since its formation last summer there had been two brigadiers of the general staff, Brig. Dempsey handling operations and Brig. Turner working closely with Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, the corps commander, on such matters as broad corps policy involving its present expansion.

Brig. Turner now moves up to deputy adjutant and quartermaster-general—a vital administrative and organizational position — and Brig. Burns will be the only brigadier of the general staff in the new set-up.

Brigs. Dempsey and Murison had been with the corps on loan from the British army.

Enemy Column Begins Advance Into Egypt

British believe motorized column composed principally of Italians.

(By Eric Bigio)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

CAIRO, April 27—(AP)—Two motorized columns believed made up mostly of Italians were reported tonight advancing into Egypt south of the Salum escarpment with light British forces harrying their every step.

Informed sources said the move south of Salum was being accomplished by two motorized columns but a general headquarters communique declared that Axis detachments "crossed the frontier at several points" Saturday night.

"Our light mobile forces remained in contact with the enemy, harassing their advance," the communique added.

The advance of the Axis detachments, said to extend some 15 or 20 miles south of the coat, thus produced a situation similar to that of last September when the Italians, who then had four or five divisions at their command, pushed beyond Salum to Sidi Barrani, about 50 miles from the Egyptian-Libyan frontier.

The Italians were at Sidi Barrani when British troops launched their winter offensive that carried them beyond Bengasi, Libya.

The possibility that the present Axis comeback might develop into a push against Sidi Barrani was not ruled out by British authorities but they indicated that the Axis columns now are nowhere like the strength of those Italy had in the area last year.

It was said the Axis advance into Egyptian territory had been effected at a cost of some Axis material as a result of the British harrying tactics.

The British communique said there was no change in the positions at the Libyan port of Tobruk, 80 miles west of the frontier, where a British force is holding out against repeated attacks by Germans and Italians and doing some attacking of its own.

In Ethiopia the headquarters communique said, operations in all areas were "continuing satisfactorily."

There British troops are reported closing in on Dessie, where the last big force of Italians in Ethiopia is stationed.

German-Italian troop concentrations just outside Tobruk were shelled and scattered Friday by the garrison of that fortress, British headquarters announced Saturday.

Compulsory Service For Home Defence

Col. J.L. Ralston announces new policy; Will retain men called for four-month course.

OTTAWA, April 27 —(CP) — Compulsory military service for home defence will become a reality under a policy announced by Defence Minister Ralston during the weekend. Hitherto the compulsory principle has been applied only in providing military training.

The Minister told a press conference Saturday the men called up under the National Resources Mobilization Act and now undergoing a four-month course of training would be detailed for duty in Canada on completion of their training.

Their services will be employed for coastal defence and internal security duties to relieve men of the active army who were available for overseas service.

At the same time the Minister indicated a new appeal for volunteers for overseas service would be issued in a view to obtaining about 22,000 men to make up deficiencies on recent enlistment quotas and to bring active army units in Canada up to strength.

Poem quoted By Churchill In address

Following was the poem quoted from by Prime Minister Winston Churchill yesterday in his broadcast address.

SAY NOT THE STRUGGLE NOUGHT AVAILETH

Say not, the struggle nought availeth,
The labor and the wounds are vain,
The enemy faints not, nor faileth,
And as things have been they remain.

If hopes were dupes, fears may be liars;
It may be, in yon smoke concealed,
Your comrades chose e'en now the fliers
And, but for you, possess the field.

For while the tired waves, vainly breaking,
Seem here no painful inch to gain,
Far back, through creeks and inlets making,
Comes silent, flooding in, the main.

And not by eastern windows only,
When daylight comes, comes in the light,
In front the sun climbs slow, how slowly,
But westward, look, the land is bright.

—Arthur Hugh Clough.

Clough was born in Liverpool, January 1, 1819, the son of a cotton merchant. His young boyhood was spent in Charleston, South Carolina (where his brother, who died of "stranger's fever," lies in the churchyard of old St Michael's) When he was nine he was sent back to England. At Rugby, then under the headmastership of Dr. Arnold, Matthew's father, he became the outstanding student of the school. When Clough entered Balliol College in 1937, Oxford was already at the full tide of the Oxford Movement led by John Henry Newman; but for Clough the revival of the medieval religious spirit caused in the end a reaction to rationalism. In 1843, two years after his graduation he was elected a fellow of Oriel College. In 1852 at the suggestion of Ralph Waldo Emerson he came to the United States and settled in Cambridge, Mass., where he supported himself by tutoring and writing magazine articles. He returned to London the following year to take a position in the Education Office (which Carlyle had procured for him) and to marry a cousin of Florence Nightingale's. In 1861 he travelled on the Continent for his health. He died, November 13, in Florence, Italy, and was buried in the Protestant Cemetery. Clough is one of the more significant minor figures in English poetry, because his poems, like those of his friend Matthew Arnold, express the doubt and uncertainty caused by the challenge to supernatural faith made by natural science. His characteristic mood, however, is one of courage and joy in achievement. His verse is simple and sparing of ornament, but it has the strength of sincerity.

Air Minister Bid Godspeed To airmen

BY JOHN LEBLANC

A MARITIME R. C. A. F., STATION, April 27 —(CP) —Drawn up within a cavernous hangar at this huge military camp, hundreds of airmen heading eastward toward the skies of war as graduates of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan heard Air Minister C. G. Power's goodbye from Canada:—

"Go forth into battle! May your eye be always keen, and your aim always sure."

Canada's Godspeed to the blue-clad men, whose safe arrival in Britain was announced today, was not for themselves alone. The Minister's words were a "token" farewell, too, for all those others who will flow from the Dominion as the training scheme strikes its flood tide.

In time, it was said, the reinforcements for the battle of the air will be leaving in such numbers that it will be impossible to give each individual group such a ministerial send-off. So Maj. Power delivered a blanket valedictory from Canada to all the skymen from the corners of Empire, and from other lands, who will pass through the Commonwealth course in the Dominion.

From a makeshift rostrum in the great shed, the Minister spoke a scant 300 words to the ranks of officers and men on the Sunday morning before they embarked.

Let the enemy know, he told them, that "the Angel of Death is abroad in the land." They would be "marshalled flights of freedom, the serried squadrons of justice."

"Sweep on," he urged. "Fight on, fly on, above enemy lands; through enemy skies— until final victory is won . . you are freedom's sons arrayed in freedom's cause."

Ranged before the Minister were men from the Canadian Atlantic to the Pacific, from Britain, from Australia and New Zealand, from the Colonies, and from the United States. They comprised the largest group yet to leave Canada under the air training scheme.

As newsmen talked with the men after the farewell formalities, the standard question was "when are we going to get started for over there?"

Officers and non-commissioned men were among their number. Soon to embark at an east coast Canadian port, they had been concentrated here in preparation for the last stage of the journey to the seaboard.

Before he left, Maj. Power inspected the group. Walking up and down their ranks, he stopped frequently to chat briefly with men.

Maj. Power was accompanied by Air Vice-Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of air staff.

After the ceremony, camp officials took them on a tour of the air establishment at the camp. They looked over the site where a landing field is being constructed on terrain which not many months ago was swampy wasteland.

One flying officer stepped up and produced a shoe for Maj. Power to examine, pointing to a cracked sole. The Minister inspected it, questioned the complainant on whether other fliers had experienced the same trouble and promised to look into the matter further when he got back to Ottawa He jotted down a reminder as he left.

Predicts farm Labor shortage

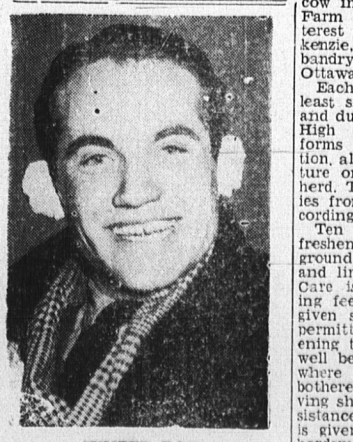
HALIFAX, April 26 —An acute shortage in farm labor would occur in Prince Edward Island within the next two months, was the prophecy of Senator J. E. Sinclair, Emerald, P. E. I., in Halifax Friday night. He was in the Nova Scotia capital on a business trip.

"The proportion of men enlisting from the province in the services has been higher in P. E. I. than any other province in the Dominion," he stated, "and it has left a great shortage of man-power which will be felt when the farms begin to operate for the summer." On the other hand Senator Sinclair said the province was anticipating a boom year in the tourist trade and tourist bureaux were preparing "for a large influx of tourists."

"It is because of the tourist trade," he said, "that a new ferry service, to make three daily round trips, is to be inaugurated next month between Wood Islands, P. E. I., and Caribou, Nevo Scotia. The ferry will carry autos and trucks as well as passengers."

Senator Sinclair said the new Trans-Canada Airways service, twice daily to the Island, would also appreciably aid the tourist trade. "People more and more," he said, "are becoming air-minded, and the new service has been well received on the Island."

Occupied in farming, Senator Sinclair said that fox pelts were bringing from 50 per cent to nearly double the price they brought this time a year ago. "It has been a great stimulant to the trade," he said. Stall-raised beef, he added, were also bringing better prices. He stated that farmers were selling potatoes at less than cost, however, and saw no hope for a change for the better at the present time.



JUMPED BAIL

British and Canadian authorities today are "ready to send a destroyer" to bring back Baron Frantz von Werra, ABOVE. Col. Hubert Stethem, director of internment operations in Canada, made this announcement last night at Heron Bay, Ont., when U. S. Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson revealed the Nazi flier had jumped $15,000 bail and had fled to Peru.

Care of The Dairy Cow at Freshening

(Experimental Farms News)

Attention to the dairy cow at calving time is very important. Not only is this so in order to obtain a healthy vigorous calf, but also to influence the milk production of the cow during the ensuing lactation. An outline of the care that each cow in the Central Experimental Farm herd receives may be of interest to dairymen, says C. D. Mackenzie, Division of Animal Husbandry, Central Experimental Farm Ottawa.

Each cow has a dry period for at least six weeks before freshening and during this time she is fed well. High quality legume roughage forms the basis of her winter ration, along with the same meal mixture ordinarily fed to the milking herd. The amount of meal fed varies from 4 to 10 pounds daily according to her condition.

Ten days or two weeks before freshening a meal mixture, such as ground oats 2 parts, bran 2 parts, and linseed oilmeal 1 part, is fed. Care is taken to avoid constipating feeds. In addition, the cow is given some exercise daily, weather permitting. A few days before freshening the cow is placed in a clean, well bedded stall, free from drafts where she may be quiet and not bothered by other cattle. During calving she is not disturbed unless assistance is required, and then this is given only by an experienced herdsman or a veterinarian. When the calf arrives it is taken away from the cow immediately, care being taken to be sure that it can breathe normally and that it is rubbed dry. The colostrum or first milk from the cow is given to the calf.

After calving, the cow is given a drink of luke warm water. She is kept warm and comfortable and is allowed to rest quietly for twelve hours. Then she is given a warm bran mash. Two bran mashes are given on the second day and two on the third day. During this period a limited amount of good quality legume hay is fed.

A little milk is drawn from the udder three or four times a day for the first day or so, and, if milk fever is expected the cow may not be milked dry until after the third day. The udder is watched for indications of inflammation and if this condition exists and persists, it may be relieved by frequent milking and rubbing with camphorated vaseline. On the fourth day she is given the meal mixture mentioned above until all inflammation and congestion have disappeared from the udder. Then the usual meal mixture fed to the milking herd may be given. Cows are usually started on four pounds daily and the quantity is gradually increased to the full production ration by about two or three weeks after calving.
