LETTER FROM DR. ROSS
NOW IN ENGLAND

7th Sept. 1915
Sir,—We boarded the Corsican by lighters at Quebec. The boat did not pull up to the pier. We had a very fine passage, not a white cap, hardly a ripple on the sea. There was no seasickness aboard, but a good many were sick from enteric troubles. There were nearly 2000 including the crew on board of whom a great many were women and children, the wives and mothers of the men. The meeting in the middle of his toilet. We were very glad to see each other. Fortunately he had the Colonel's auto at his disposal for the day and I was just "It." Capt. Jenkins is looking very well and almost recovered completely from his accident. He will have the complete use of his arm. He is very popular with his fellow officers and is doing very well. His A. D. M. S. Col. Fotheringham, an old class mate of mine whom I met over here gave me a very fine report of him.

As we journeyed to Otterpool who should I meet on the road but Col. Ings. He looks very well. The meeting made me think that either Prince Edward Island was very large or the world is very small.

At Otterpool I struck the whole of Prince Edward Island. A likelier bunch of fellows you could not see anywhere—brown, alert, keen athletes every one of them hard as nails with muscles of iron. I miss my guess if they do not give a good account of themselves. They will compare favourably with any equal number of soldiers anywhere. I can't remember them all, but I saw Bobby Anderson, who has a horse that can unharass himself, I saw Charles Toombs hitherto himself, I saw Charlie Toombs and was very sorry I did not have time to have a game of Chess with him. I saw Harry McDougall, Jack Gordon, Fred Donald, Sgt. Bruce, John Proud, Ham Bethune, Capt Stanley Jos. Kiggins, A. Gallant, Leonard Farrell, John Turner, B. W. Robinson, W. Davidson, J. Ottway, W. Dawson, W. Dewar, W. Carver, and Roy Mills. There were one or two away that I did not see.

After handshaking and enquiries for folks at home were over we had our photograph taken, and my too short visit came to an end.

After leaving Otterpool I went to Shorncliffe, where I met Capt. F. B. McRae, who has received his captaincy for his invention of a tripod and his good work on the machine gun. His invention is being adopted by the Canadian branch of the service. Its merit consists in the fact that it can raise or lower the gun barrel and adjust it to any angle of fire.

Capt. McRae is second in command of the machine gun squad and is one of the best officers for that arm in the service. He has had the full course of training and is a very capable instructor. He told me the final test given in machine gun efficiency was to go to the factory, collect all the parts of the gun, put them together bolted and riveted and then take the gun out and fire it. He has a most intelligent grasp of the situation.

The tests of the inventions are done down at Shorncliffe and the officer in charge sends for McRae during the tests so he gets a good deal of information as to the inside workings of things. Lt. Col. Johnston is only a short distance away from Capt. McRae's quarters. He was expected over but did not arrive in time for me to see him.

Altogether I had a great day and will not soon forget my visit to the boys at Otterpool.

I am Sir etc.

A Visit to Otterpool

A description of some of the things I saw in London will keep but an account of my visit to Otterpool camp wont.

Last Sunday (the 5th) I went to Otterpool at Shorncliffe to see the boys and I actually felt as I saw them that I was in the danger zone. I am sure that as they were to see me. Although I saw some of them for the first time I felt as if I had always known them.

I had a vague idea that all I had to do was to go to Shorncliffe and I should find them easily. I did not even know their regiment. But to my amazement I found Shorncliffe consist of hundreds of camps scattered over an area of twenty or thirty miles. But by great good luck I made a bull's eye the first shot. I met Capt. Jenkins about from that on was in clover.

But first a word as to Shorncliffe and its vicinity. It is quite near Folkestone, a fashionable watering place on the coast and not far from Dover. It is about twenty miles from where the Battle of Hastings was fought. Near Shorncliffe is Caesar's camp, where the war was commenced in 55 B. C. The mounds and excavations are still to be seen. It is situated on a high and steep hill which commands a view of all the surrounding country. I was very sorry I did not have time to visit it but I am reserving that pleasure for the future.

When I was there where Capt. Jenkins is, an old Salmoor Castle built in Norman times. It is in a fine state of preservation and looks to be habitable. It is well preserved and kept. The old castle and the walls surrounding it are quite intact. The moat is there but dry. The portcullis is gone. This was the castle if you will remember where the murderers of Thomas a Becket stayed on their way to their nefarious deed. The whole country is diversified like many other parts of England with hedges bordering fields and excellent roads; and this is the kind of hill, a hill with steep little hills. The whole scene is charming.

With Capt. Jenkins I had the pleasure of visiting one of the landed gentry in the vicinity and was shown over his place. The home was antique looking and somewhat rambling, called "The Old Rectory." The house was on a hill and about three quarters of a mile away was another well wooded hill. The little valley between was diversified with green plots, little dells, shrubberies of semi-tropical trees. It was most beautiful and being the first thing of the kind I saw since I came to England, made a lasting impression upon me. They asked us to stay to tea but unfortunately my visit was so short that I could not—other friends drew me more.

At Sandbury I struck the Nova Scotia crowd but among them met Sgt. McNellie of Charlottetown and Sergt. Nicholson of Hunter River. They told me Otterpool was four miles away. There was no means of con-

The man was sentenced to be shot; the woman was given ten years in jail. Both will be permitted to appeal.

CHANNEL SERVICE
TEMPORARILY CLOSED

(Special to the Guardian.)
PARIS, Sept. 21.—The Channel service between Boulogne and Folkestone, which was stopped Friday because of a false alarm regarding submarine activity, was again suspended yesterday. Paris railroad officials were unable to give a reason. According to Boulogne advices on Friday a trawler reported sighting a submarine and a floating mine. The port defences were mobilised, but nothing was seen of a submarine, and the "mine" proved to be a bale of hay.
