

ONTARIO WOMAN'S FORTUNE

Freed From That Weak, Languid, Always Tired Feeling, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

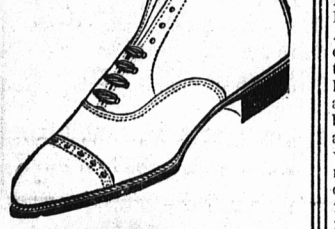

Thessalon, Ont.—"I cannot speak too highly of your medicine. When my appetite is poor and I have that weak, languid, always tired feeling, I get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it builds me up, gives me strength, and restores me to perfect health again. It is truly a blessing to women, and I cannot speak highly enough of it. I take pleasure in recommending it to others."

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

There are probably hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over 30 years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering. If you are sick and need such a medicine, why don't you try it?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The weak points of Sunday School work in the district were dwelt upon, the need of greater inculcation of the principals of Methodism amongst the young people. Some definite resolves were made in regard to the introduction of the Cradle Roll, and the Catechism, most of the schools making request for blank forms for the former and copies of the latter in order that work might be started along those lines. Rev. H. Miller spoke for a few minutes on the Teacher Training course in which considerable interest was shown and afterwards dealt with the question of Social and Moral Reform which department he represents. At the evening meeting addresses were delivered by Revs. Dawson, Lund, Styles and Miller, on the subjects of "Evangelism," "Teacher Training," "The Value of S. S. Work" and "Temperance." Each speaker in turn was listened to with interest and attention. The evening program was varied with music by the choir and too much appreciated Solos by Miss Lillian Ravenhill and Mr. B. C. Hardy of Union Road.

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough

Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself.

A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heat the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of the most pleasant and effective remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heats the inflamed membranes so gently and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in quinaloin, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Have Done

"I suffered a great many years with kidney trouble; tried several remedies, and also doctors' medicines, with no result. Two years ago I read an ad. in a newspaper of 'GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS' and sent for two boxes. They did me more good than all the medicine I had ever taken. After I used the first two I sent for two more boxes, and I am satisfied, and also know that Gin Pills are the best kidney remedy made.

I used to have to rise three or four times in the night; now I can sleep and don't have to get up at all, thanks to GIN PILLS. Am seventy-two years old.

INTERESTING TALES FROM THE FIRING LINE

The following letter was received by Mrs. John T. McKenzie, of this city, from her son Wendell, who with his brother, Spurgeon, are serving the King, somewhere on the far-flung battle-line.

France, Sept. 26th, 1915

Dear Mother:

As usual it is high time I was writing you. I think my last letter to you was written in Oterpoul. We are now stationed in a very comfortable billet on the property of a convent. You will doubtless notice we have struck good luck in our stopping places right through. Our trip from Oterpoul to here Spurge has no doubt narrated to you already. We had on the whole, a very fair time. We left the boat about noon. Slept that night on the boat. Crossed the Channel without any mishap. We were accompanied most of the way by a couple of destroyers. We arrived in the French port early in the morning. It was noon, however, before the horses, wagons and other equipment were off the boat.

On the dock we run across a free refreshment booth for soldiers run by English ladies. They put up some good stuff, which was certainly appreciated by the bunch. We marched about three miles out of town to a rest camp where we spent the night.

Next morning we entrained for a twenty-four hour trip across country. The French troop cars are not exactly what one would call palatial. In fact they are merely cattle cars, bearing the inscription on the side, "40 Hommes ou 8 Chevaux." We N. C. O.'s had a car not quite so crowded and managed to have a very pleasant time viewing French scenery, animated and otherwise. We spent the night on train. I worked my way back to where wagons were loaded, fished out a bunch of blankets and had a very comfortable sleep under the ambulance. We arrived at our jumping off point about six next morning and set to work unloading wagons and horses.

We then started out on undoubted the hardest march of our career. We covered about 25 miles before evening. I was riding, and Spurge did not seem at all tired. We stopped at this point over Sunday, (two days) and started out again on Monday morning. We marched twelve miles further and near the scene of operations to our present billet. We passed through quite a number of quaint French towns. The houses were built of stone and on dusty old buildings. The streets are paved with these contoured square cobblestones, which are both rough and very slippery. A wagon going over them makes a most ear racking noise.

Funny, when we were passing through quite a large town, on these miserable streets all four feet went from under my horse and he very nearly lay down on his side. I with him.

The roads are certainly much different from the fine asphalt and macadam roads of England. There is a tremendous traffic passing along the thoroughfares, mainly back of us, 8 or 4 miles, from which they distribute to different points along the line. There are troops, hundreds and hundreds of big motor trucks laden with all kinds of provisions, also large quantities of munitions. There are very much the worse for wear, while other fresh troops, like ourselves comparatively spick and span, are going in. It all gives one a small idea of what tremendous organization, what great monetary and human resources are summoned together to carry on this war.

We have a remarkably comfortable billet, considering our nearness to the front. The nuns are very kind to us. They run a canteen for our benefit, do our wash at a very nominal rate and also furnish us with baths. When the Germans pass over here they would not do a thing for them.

This war is remarkable in many respects. One of them is the number of conveniences which are carried up even to the firing line. We have a first class service. Even the men in trench get their mail regularly. They have concrete floors in the trenches and also have canteens.

Everything seems very calm and peaceful around here except when the artillery starts up which is generally for a couple of hours each day. The poor inhabitants, and they must be frightfully poor here, go about their business as usual.

We are continually rushing up against fellows we know at home and at college. Captain Andrew McPhail's brother, Major McPhail, came back from the trenches this morning to pay a visit to the former. They have just gone out for a ride together.

This is all for now. Love to all.

WENDELL.

The following letter was received by Miss Lillian McKenzie from her brother Spurgeon, who is also somewhere in Belgium.

Belgium, Sept. 26th, 1915

My Dear Lillian:

In amplifying my note a couple of days ago, I might begin again back at our first French billet.

After our tiresome journey by train and "a la pied," we came at last to a large old French house and a correspondingly large elongated barn. We thought at first we would be quartered in the house, but much to our chagrin, we were put in the barn. In all likelihood the house was unsatisfactory, but in the barn was a great quantity of fresh straw, which promised very comfortable bedding. The three sections were billeted each in a different farm. It is a peculiar coincidence that in all three places French and Germans had been billeted previously. The Germans, at the time of their run for Paris had gone through on the road which we were on. Some of them were around that district for about ten days. One hundred yards up from our billet is a potato field in which about fifty Germans are buried, having been killed in October of last year.

Almost as soon as we got settled down we received orders to set up a hospital in the barn for receiving stragglers from the different Canadian battalions. Captain McPhail was put in charge, and soon had everything running in good order. Staff

Sergeant Sketeo was the sergeant in charge, and he proved himself very efficient.

On account of using the greater part of the barn for a hospital, it became necessary for most of us to sleep under the hedge for the few nights there. To tell the truth, under a hedge or tree on fine nights is infinitely better than taking a chance of getting "crummy" inside.

After about three days in billet, A and C sections received orders to advance to a certain small town near the firing line to relieve an English field ambulance. The Second Canadian Division is moving in alongside of the First Division, replacing an English Division, the 28th. It is one of the field ambulances which catered to this English Division that we are relieving.

Our march up of about eleven miles was very interesting, partly because of the very beautiful and well cultivated section of the country through which we passed, but more because of the now historic towns we were passing and the multitudes of troops everywhere. It was through a region through which the Germans had marched, but no evidence of any destruction was to be seen. The whole country is under intensive cultivation and the work is going on as usual, though of course most of the work on the farms is now being done by women boys, or unit for service men.

At one point not far from where we now are we halted for ten minutes (as was our custom every hour) on the right side of the road. That fact of itself is nothing, but the peculiar thing is that the other side of the road belongs to another country. We were sitting in France throwing stuff across the road into Belgium. The boundary for a short distance is an ordinary road.

It seemed hard to realize that we were in such historic surroundings, for the country is the same as any others, but the dull booming of guns at night, ever growing a little more plain, gave it the different touch.

We found our new quarters to be in a convent. We have our hospital ward in a large assembly hall on the lower floor, and the admitting room in another room on the same floor. A good many men are accommodated in the different brick outbuildings, while the rest are in "made to order" billets and tents. The Field Ambulance which preceded us here had been through Ypres and they collected a great many good rubber sheets which they used in making small shelters. These when they left were given to our men.

The Sergeants have a couple of excellent operating tents for sleeping in, and of course are quite comfortable.

The officers are quartered in the convent proper with a fine large recreation room for spare hours.

The most peculiar thing here though, is the fact that the sisters are running a small canteen in connection with their kitchen for our benefit. They sell coffee, tea, bread, chocolate, etc., everything at cost price. They sell about three or four hundred eggs to our corps every day.

A first class laundry is run in connection with the convent. We can take laundry in one morning and get it out the following morning.

We expected when we got up here that no facilities would be accessible, but we are now practically stationed for the winter, as it seems in a place with every convenience. As Captain McPhail remarked to me this morning, the further we get away from Montreal, the more comfortable we get.

Aside from running a canteen and doing a week's laundry for 4d., one other thing will interest you. We Protestant services in the hall in the centre of the convent. This is an evidence of the broadening of religious thoughts, would hardly believe that such could occur. Yet I was reading in the London Times that it is now quite common for Catholic churches in France to be given up to Protestant services. The Mother Superior here is certainly a fine hearted woman. She works her head off and cannot seem to do too much for us.

Today, Sunday, is a perfect day in every way. It is truly hard to believe that there is a war going on, for hardly a shot has been fired all day. Things are looking up a little now on account of a few aeroplanes sailing overhead and being shelled by the Germans, but there seems nothing real to it yet.

We are receiving mail regularly. Received a letter from Rev. Mr. Taylor yesterday which is much appreciated.

Love to all,

C. S. SPURGEON.

WHAT IT WAS.

Owner—The last time I was here you were puzzled over a peculiar mark which you found on the wall. Did you solve it?

Tenant—Yes, it is evidently the place where the rain coming in from the roof meets the water leaking up from the cellar.—Judge.

This is new

The Peps way of treating coughs, colds, bronchitis and lung and throat troubles. How? Well, up to now people with these chest and throat troubles have swallowed cough mixtures, sticky syrups and the like into their stomachs. Sore lungs and throat get no good by dosing the stomach. Peps work differently.

Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing. Try a 50c. box of Peps for your cold, your cough, bronchitis or asthma. All druggists and stores or Peps Co., Toronto, will supply

PRIVATE D. R. MCQUEEN WELCOMED HOME

No. 16921 Pte. Dan R. McQueen of Mt. Vernon who arrived home recently from England is now steadily regaining his health, having been seriously wounded while on active service at the front.

Pte. McQueen, who left with the first contingent from Vancouver, and was wounded while in West Flanders, tells many stirring tales of the fighting in which so many Canadian boys took part and speaks in the highest praise of their bravery and resourcefulness.

Mr. McQueen, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John McQueen, of Mt. Vernon, comes of a very patriotic family, three sons wearing the King's uniform, two fighting at the present time, while Private Dan is, it is understood, going back to the front as soon as his health will permit. This is the spirit that makes heroes and P. E. I. is proud of him.

His two brothers, Pte. William and Driver Alexander, both enlisted from Vancouver early in the war and have seen considerable fighting, the latter being driver in an Ambulance Corps.

The McQueen Brothers are three fine looking, stalwart fellows, who are not afraid of hard work and feel it a privilege to fight for their King and country and although Pte. McQueen returned to his home here quietly, few knowing of his coming, he is none the less honored in the hearts of every resident of this province, all of whom will join in welcoming him and hoping that he will soon regain his former splendid health.

Mr. McQueen is suffering from wounds in the shoulder received from a German machine gun and has been in the Drummond Hospital at Southampton, England, for some time. His praise of the tender care and kindness received from doctors and nurses there will be reassuring news to those who have sons fighting and in danger of being wounded.
